"Very likely," smiled Drusilla, her face suddenly losing its frozen sternness, and Aunt Betsy flounced from the room to prepare the neglected dinner.

When she was alone Drusilla relaxed her clenched fingers and leaned back in her low chair. She closed her eyes and there were little lines of suffering about her temples and lips. "If they wouldn't watch me so," she whispered to herself. Presently she sat up and pulled at the ring Emmet had given her and which she always wore on her engagement finger. She realized that the gossips who predicted Emmet's desertion regarded the ring as a barometer. So long as she wore it they knew he must be faithful. In the face of current talk about the newspaper item she knew they would expect the ring to disappear.

Suddenly she pushed the ring back to its place and a soft light filled her eyes. "How do I know?" she asked herself earnestly. "Perhaps Emmet is faithful. I promised to wait for him and I will until it is proved that he is false. Laurel Cove can say what it likes—I don't care!" So Drusilla Ford kissed the ring with a little half ashamed gesture and picked up her needlework once more. Faith in her lover shone in her eyes.

So Aunt Betsy found her, and as the old woman surveyed her niece's sweetly serene countenance she felt that here was an unswerving constancy that must compel her admiration, and she began to doubt the authenticity of the Windy River paragraph. "Half the time these newspapers don't know what they're writing about," she grumbled as she suddenly turned around and hopped out to the kitchen. "Drusilla," she called mildly, "come out and get your dinner—you must be most starved!"

Of course they came to see how Drusilla Ford took the news of her lover's desertion. They were not spiteful or malicious in their curiosity, but Laurel Cove was a quiet place and the people had grown to look upon romances and tragedies with an eagerness that might have been partially satisfied by witnessing a play on the stage. They were kind at heart, but they hungered for the drama of human life.

Drusilla was cool and sweet and evaded their indirect questions, and changed the subject whenever it grew objectionably close to her intimate affairs. So they went away baffled and told each other that Drusilla was cold-hearted anyway.

The next evening at sunset, while Drusilla and her aunt were eating supper, there came a knock at the front door. It was a familiar double knock that brought a radiance to the girl's face and startled Aunt Betsy to keen alertness.

As Drusilla started for the door, Aunt Betsy arose and followed her to the entry.

"Whoop-eeee!" cried Emmet Blake softly as he held out his arms to Drusilla. "You got my letter, dear?" He asked this question with his lips pressing against his sweetheart's fair hair. "You got my letter telling you I was coming after you, and to have the wedding duds all ready?"

"I never got it," said Drusilla from the shelter of his arm; "but I'm ready—as I said I would be, Emmet, when you came for me!"

Aunt Betsy, peering around the door, admired Emmet Blake's tall manliness and considered that he had grown very handsome and brown during his absence. She heard him tell Drusilla about his ambition to own a big ranch before he sent for her, and how at last he had built a large new house, and they were to stop in Chicago and choose the furniture on their way out to Montana.

The old woman, looking at them, felt a warm glow in her heart and her face softened magically. Just then Emmet looked up and saw her gazing at them. He winked amiably at her and waved a dismissing hand, and Aunt Betsy laughed as she disappeared.

"I'll write to Emeline; she can send one of the girls to come and live with me now," she murmured importantly; "and I guess I'll go and tell the news to Mrs. Buell!"

The Lady In Court.

Last week Mrs. Grace Hamilton paid a fine of ten dollars in Judge Weller's court for driving her automobile too past uphill. It was the first time she had ever met the judge. A couple of days ago, however, they accidentally met, and this time out of court.

"I suppose you consider me a very discourteous person for having fined you?" suggested the gentleman.

"Oh, I didn't mind the money at all. But you might have understood that I had to make the grade."

"The court could not accept that as sufficient reason for exceeding the speed limits."

"In the future, then," retorted the lady, "I shall be more careful of the sufficiency. I shall attack no hill unless I see your worship at the top of it."—San Francisco News Letter.

Different Viewpoint.

Old Lady—There is one thing I notice particularly about that young man who calls to see you. He seems to have an inborn, instinctive respect for woman. He treats every woman as though she were a being from a higher sphere, to be approached only with the utmost delicacy and deference.

Flowers Have Eyes.

Many common garden and wild flowers—the nasturtium, begonia, clover, wood sorrel and bluebell among others—possess eyes on their leaves. Moreover, these eyes in their principle of construction resemble those of animals. They consist of minute protuberances filled with a transparent, gummy substance, which focuses the rays of light on a sensitive patch of tissue. The nasturtium has thousands of eyes on its leaves, and these form as many images of the surrounding object. While flowers have eyes, however, it does not follow that they can see. It is not known whether or not the sense impressions are transmitted to some nerve centers corresponding to the brain of animals.—Harper's Weekly.

Puget Sound Seal Herd.

The raising of seals for their fur is to become one of the profitable industries of the northwest, for experiments made last summer on Puget sound have proved that the seal will flourish and increase with great success.

Some years ago the government brought ten seal pups from the Pribilof island seal rookeries and presented them to Emil Smythe, a retired sealer and seaman, with the desire that he attempt to maintain a seal herd on his ranch on Whidby island, in Puget sound.

GREATEST MEDICINE ON EARTH
A prominent citizen of Evansville, Ind., writes:—"I was ill for five months with a pulmonary trouble, and had the best of doctors. I had hemorrhages and was in a very bad way. Through the advice of a friend I tried Vinol, and I feel that it saved my life. It is all you recommend it to be. I believe it is the greatest medicine on earth. I have advised others to try Vinol, and they have had the same results." (Name furnished on request.)
We want every one in this vicinity who is troubled with chronic colds, coughs, or pulmonary troubles, to come and get a bottle of Vinol.
If it does not go to the seat of trouble, heal the inflammation and stop the cough, we will cheerfully return every cent of your money. This proves our faith, and proves that you take no chances.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

DEMOCRATS TO ASK FOR AN INCOME TAX

Important Issue Interjected Into Congress by Caucus.

Placing of Latter Commodity on Free List Means Loss of $53,000,000 a Year Revenue, and New Measure May Return that Amount.

The issue of an income tax has been thrown into congress in an emphatic manner by the Democrats of the house.

At a caucus of the majority party of the house a bill proposing a 1 per cent tax on all net incomes in excess of $5,000 was unanimously indorsed. The bill will be passed within the next two weeks.

The levying of this income tax is the means proposed by the Democrats for meeting the loss of $53,000,000 a year in revenue caused by the placing of sugar on the free list. A bill removing the duty on sugar has been reported by the ways and means committee. It was also indorsed by the Democratic caucus with the members from Louisiana and Colorado, sugar producing states, bitterly protesting.

The Democrats of the house present a novel method of evading the supreme court decision declaring the income tax unconstitutional. While they acknowledge that the tax proposed by them in the present bill is an income tax pure and simple they describe it as an extension of the corporation tax law, which the supreme court has held to be valid.

They have, accordingly, embodied their income tax scheme in an amendment to the corporation tax law, which was passed by congress on the recommendation of President Taft. This amendment purports to extend the corporation tax law to individuals, firms and co-partnerships having an annual income of more than $5,000. The term "business" as employed in the bill is held to embrace everything about which a person can be employed and all activities which occupy the "time, attention and labor of persons for the purpose of a livelihood or profit." Accordingly the terms of the bill apply to professional men as well as to men of business and to all employes except those who draw their salaries from state, county or municipal governments. The president of the United States himself will be taxed $700 a year if the bill passes, and each member of the house will be separated from $25 annually.

The unexpected appearance of the income tax issue in congress caused a big stir here and completely overshadowed in importance the radical action taken by the Democrats in placing sugar on the free list.

The Democrats expect that the proposed tax will raise between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 annually.

Asks Damages for Loss of Husband.

Monroe, Mich., March 4.—Ruby Towner of Lenawee county, has begun a suit against Walter Averill and the Michigan Bonding and Surety company for $3,000 damages for selling liquor to her husband, Willard Towner, while Averill was proprietor of the Exchange hotel at Petersburg. Last month Mrs. Towner was granted a decree of divorce on the ground of habitual drunkenness. There are three children, the oldest ten and the youngest four years old.

GRINNELL BROTHERS LOSE

Stock in Kalamazoo Store Is Damaged by Fire.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 5.—Fire which broke out in the basement of the Baumann building, did nearly $20,000 worth of damage before it could be gotten under control. Grinnell Bros., music dealers, were probably the heaviest losers as the result of the fire. It is said the loss to the music house will reach $15,000, as practically everything in the store was damaged either by fire or water.

The Frazer jewelry store and the Main store were also damaged, the Frazer store loss probably amounting to several thousand dollars. The fire had an excellent headway before it was discovered. Policemen saw smoke shooting from the basement windows of the three story structure. By the time the fire department arrived the basement was in flames.

This is the second serious fire in the same building within the last two months. The first fire broke out on the third floor and did about $10,000 damage before being put out. The origin of the two fires is a mystery.

OSBORN BUYS BACK PROPERTY

Recovers for $54.95 House in South Bend Sold for Taxes.

South Bend, Ind., March 4. — It is seldom that a man of wealth and political prominence of Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan allows valuable property in a city such as South Bend to be sold for taxes, but that is what occurred two years ago.

As a result Mark L. Brummitt of Newcastle, profited, and the house and lot in Bartlett street owned by the governor was sold for $36.68 to cover a delinquent sewer assessment. Mr. Brummitt gave Governor Osborn a quit claim deed to the property for $54.95.

KALAMAZOO — Blood poisoning resulting from a severe attack of pneumonia, resulted in the death of Harry Smith, an eighteen-year-old boy who graduated from the high school in February. Physicians say they never heard of a similar case. Smith was one of the football stars on the high school team last fall and was one of the most popular students in the school.

TEXTILE STRIKE PROBE

Hearing Resumed Before Committee in Washington.

The hearing in Washington, D. C., on the Lawrence (Mass.) textile strike was resumed before the house committee on rules with the committee of strikers and children from Lawrence present.

Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania submitted a letter from Dudley Holman, secretary to Governor Foss of Massachusetts, declaring conditions at Lawrence had been greatly exaggerated. The police, he said, were not biased and were acting in the best interests of the children who were sent away from Lawrence.

"The police did not use their clubs on the women and children, but simply brushed them to one side," the letter read. It further said that troops were sent to preserve order. The governor, through his secretary, said further that he would not allow the troops to remain in Lawrence much longer.

BIG FIGHT ON A TRUST

Opening Gun against Railroads and Coal Companies.

At Columbus, O., Tuesday the first gun in the government's anti-trust suit against six railroads and three coal companies, charged with maintaining a monopoly in restraint of the bituminous coal industry, was fired immediately after the opening of the case before the judges of the United States circuit court of appeals here.

Special Counsel Harrison of Cincinnati, in his opening statement, accused the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. of having evolved the plan by which the Hocking Valley railroad is alleged to have gained control of the other defendant railroad and coal companies and perpetuated the monopoly which the government asserts exists to the present day.

A package of dispositions testifying to the competition that existed between the railroads and coal companies before the merger was introduced by the government at once as the prima facie case of the federal authorities.

JAIL FOR MRS. PANKHURST

London Suffragette and Companions Sentenced for Rioting.

At London, Eng., Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, Mrs. Tukes and Mrs. Marshall, leaders of the window smashing campaign by which the suffragettes almost succeeded in terrorizing London tradesmen, were sentenced each to two months' imprisonment.

They were the first three of the 124 women arrested in the course of the street demonstration to be arraigned in Bow street police court, chiefly on charges of causing damage to stores in Bond street, Piccadilly, Regent street, Oxford street, the Haymarket and the Strand, as well as other busy shopping streets.

LANSING—Attorney General Kuhn in an opinion he has just furnished both branches of the legislature holds that the legislature is the sole judge as to whether or not an act is immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety.

PEKIN FIRES QUENCHED

The incendiary fires which were started in Pekin were extinguished or have died out. The loss is estimated approximately at $15,000,000.

At 2 a. m. the mutinous troops had departed from the city and the disorders stopped. Yuan Shih-kai and the Nanking delegates, including Tang Shao Yi, are safe.

It is not known how many casualties have occurred among the civilians and the soldiers, but it is believed that the loss of life has been heavy.

STEEL PROBE REPORT

Results of Inquiry Into United States Steel Corporation.

At Washington Thursday the house steel trust investigating committee made public the result of the inquiry into the books and minutes of the United States Steel corporation conducted by Farquhar J. McRea, an expert accountant.

Restraint of trade is effected, the report charges, through a manipulation of prices, through the influence of the so-called "Gary dinners," by control of raw materials, and through a system of interlocking directors in various companies.

Some of the charges made in the report are:

That J. P. Morgan & Co., heading the syndicate which organized the Steel corporation, received a cash profit of $69,300,000, of which $62,500,000 was for promotion and $6,800,000 for a bond conversion scheme.

That the net earnings for nine years were $1,029,685,389, or an equivalent of approximately $13 a ton on finished product, instead of $980,000,311, as claimed by the corporation in its report.

That the statement made by Judge Gary and H. C. Frick to President Roosevelt in 1907 that the steel corporation did not control more than 60 per cent of the steel properties in the country was wrong; that it controls, on the contrary, about 80 per cent of the steel holdings.

ALLEGE BLACK LIST IS KEPT

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 4.—As a result of the discharge of eleven men from the Berkey & Gay and the Oriel furniture factories and an alleged black list instituted against them, the federal grand jury, which meets here March 5, will be asked to investigate the Grand Rapids Furniture Manufacturers' association.

This is an echo of the recent big furniture strike. Discrimination against union men is alleged. Thirty-eight manufacturing firms are implicated in the charges.

Emmet Stores Robbed.

Emmet, Mich., March 2.—While J. E. Kennedy, local merchant, was at supper, thieves entered his general store and stole $150 from the till. The previous night, James O'Grady's pool room was broken into and about $4 in money and a large quantity of cigars and tobacco were stolen.

GREAT MINE STRIKE IS ON IN ENGLAND

Greatest Industrial Conflict in the History of Nations Threatens Disaster and May End in a Social Revolution.

Upwards of three-quarters of a million of English coal miners had laid down their tools and gone on strike at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the day shift in the mines ended.

The army of striking colliers swelled hourly throughout the morning when it became known that a settlement had not been reached.

Great Britian is facing an industrial crisis more serious than ever known in her history, and the alarm is widespread and genuine.

More than a million men and boys now employed in the mines will be idle and tens of thousands in other trades will be forced into a similar condition.

With the thousands of unemployed men, many of them in a condition bordering on starvation, the problem of the government has been rendered doubly difficult by the great strike.

There is a feeling that before summer Great Britian may be thrown into a social revolution in which there will be much violence and bloodshed.

The premier and his colleagues in the cabinet, officials of the board of trade and other persons having influence with the coal owners and miners made a final but futile attempt early in the day to avert the disaster of a national coal strike.

The prices of food are rising rapidly everywhere and the poorer classes not directly connected with the strike are in danger of suffering more than the families of the miners, who are fairly well supplied with funds by the unions.

When the Great Central seized all the fuel in transit over its lines it claimed it was empowered to do so under the law on the condition that it paid the consignee the value of the commodity.

MANISTIQUE—With the identity of the dead man still a mystery the body of a woodsman who was killed by a falling limb while sawing down a tree at George Hovey's logging camp in Schoolcraft county, is being held at the city morgue at Manistique. The victim of the accident gave his name as Frank Dugan when he applied for work two weeks ago. He was aged forty years.

SOUTH HAVEN—A co-operative downtown marketplace at which only the very choicest fruits of the orchards of this section are to be shown, with an idea of tempting the eye of summer visitors, is the plan suggested by C. J. Monroe of this city to leading fruit growers at a recent meeting and it will probably be inaugurated this summer.

GOVERNOR OSBORN HITS CORPORATIONS

Says Two of Them Throttled Michigan Legislator.

Points Out What He Calls Reprehensible Methods of Coercion and Intimidation by Foes of Presidential Primary.

Lansing, Mich., March 6.—Governor Chase S. Osborn has sent a message to the legislature which is in special session for the purpose of enacting a presidential primary law, calling the attention of the members to the "outrageous methods of coercion and intimidation," which he charges are being used to defeat the proposed law. The message in part follows:

"Senator Michael H. Moriarity of the Thirty-first district, came to Lansing with his mind fully made up to support a presidential primary bill. He privately and publicly expressed his approval of the measure.

"As soon as his attitude was learned in his district, Charles H. Watson, attorney for Corrigan, McKinney & Co., of Pittsburg and of the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad company, came to the capital post haste. He at once began a siege of Senator Moriarity with the result that the senator was compelled to surrender.

"W. J. Richards, superintendent for Corrigan, McKinney & Co., is a candidate for delegate-at-large from Michigan to the Republican national convention. Corrigan, McKinney & Co., next to the United States Steel corporation, are the largest operators of Michigan iron mines.

"It was clearly shown to Moriarity that he could not live in that (iron) county and oppose these interests. These gaunt fingers of political and financial avarice took him by the throat and throttled him. His own iron mining property would suffer. His law business would be taken away. He would be starved out.

"These reprehensible methods show clearly the length that intrenched privilege will go. It is the duty of the people to protect themselves by any lawful measure within their power."

BEAGLE MUST COME BACK

Extradition for Owner of Manchester Hotel Is Granted.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 5.—J. J. Beagle, owner of the Manchester house at Manchester, will have to come back to Michigan to answer to the charge of arson in connection with the attempt to destroy the building the hotel, William Lewis confessed having set fire to the building, which was insured for $7,000, saying that Beagle had agreed to give him $1,500 of the insurance money for so doing.

Extradition papers were gotten out for Beagle, who lives in Wellsville, N. Y., three weeks ago, but he fought against coming back. His hearing was held and resulted in the granting of the requisition. An officer left for Wellsville to bring Beagle back.

Will Clean Out Lakes.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., March 5.—The official announcement that the state game warden is to put forth an effort this spring to remove the German carp from Duck and Narrow lakes and some of the other smaller lakes in this section is very welcome news to the sportsmen in this vicinity.

New Jonesville Church Dedicated.

Jonesville, Mich., March 5. — The new Methodist church was dedicated. Bishop Moore and several former pastors assisted and a large crowd was in attendance.

SPENDS $3,000 TO GET $69

After Thirty Months' Litigation Man Gets Judgment.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 4.—Tricked by Cupid and seeking redress in the courts for over thirty months, Martin VanDerveen was awarded a $69 judgment against Martin Boersma. He had spent nearly $3,000 to win.

Boersma courted VanDerveen's daughter for four years, during which he easily borrowed money, as VanDerveen believed he would become his son-in-law. Boersma changed his mind and forgot the debt. The litigation was carried through every branch of the local courts, appealed, retried and finally decided by Judge Brown.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

[illegible] as they cannot [illegible] diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Repels Attack of Death

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die with consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." Its folly to suffer with coughs, colds or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

C. A. Glossner, 24 Ontario St., Rochester, N. Y., has recovered from a long and severe attack of kidney trouble, his cure being due to Foley Kidney Pills. After detailing his case, he says: "I am only sorry I did not learn sooner of Foley Kidney Pills. In a few day's time my backache completely left me and I felt greatly improved. My kidneys became stronger, dizzy spells left me and I was no longer annoyed at night. I feel 100 per cent better since using Foley Kidney Pills." For sale by all druggists.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. J. T. Curtiss, Dwight, Kan. He writes: I not only have cured bad cases of eczema in my patients with Electric Bitters, but also cured myself by them of the same disease: I feel sure they will benefit any case of eczema." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is a most effective blood purifier. Its an excellent remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Price 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD PRIZE STORY CONTEST

JUDGES, MRS. FRED ROSACRANS AND MRS. NEWTON SATTERTHWAITE

1ST. PRIZE, "HARRY'S MISTAKE" HOWARD CHEEVER

HARRY'S MISTAKE

"Harry," said grandma, "do you think you can run accross to the corner and put this letter in the letterbox for me?"

"Course I can," replied Harry. "Mamma told me to help you all I could all the time I was here." He straightened up and looked very important.

"Well," said grandma, "that will be a very great help, indeed, because you see my rheumatism is so bad that it would take me a long time to get over there,—and you're so spry that you can get it over in time for the postman to take up on his next round."

Harry felt very important as he started off. It it wasn't for him, poor grandma would have to take the letter, and that would make it too late.

When he reached the corner he was puzzled, Grandma had not said anything about two boxes, but here were two, both red and both about the same size, which was the right one?

"I'll put it in the shiniest one," he thought, climbing up on a wooden box which happened to be by the curbing. He shut the little door carefully after he had put the letter in and started off.

"There," he thought, "I can mail letters for grandma, and hold yarn for her, and—" But the list was never finished, for just then a fire engine came dashing up the street, steaming and blowing, with a crowd of men and boys following far behind.

"I wonder where the fire is!" thought Harry, and so everyone seemed to wonder. Grandma and Aunt Priscilla were on the back porch when he reached home, anxiously looking up and down the street, as were all the neighbors. The firemen were investigating, and the men were running up and down the street, looking everywhere for smoke.

"Someone has been playing a trick" the chief engineer said at last sternly. "Do any of you youngsters know anything about it?" to the little group of boys gathered about the engine; because if you do, you had better look out!" Harry thought the great man looked very fierce, indeed, and hoped that that no one had played a trick.

"What would they do with any boy that did that," he asked.

"Put him in jail quick enough!"

"Wring his neck for him!" answered another.

Just then the postman came up and handed grandma the letter which Harry had mailed so carefully a few minutes before.

"I found it in the fire box," he said. "I knew it was yours, for it says to return to this number in five days. I guess this is the cause of all the trouble," looking at the fire engine and group of men and boys.

"Yes, I think my little boy is responsible for it," said grandma. "He was trying to help me and got the wrong box. I should have cautioned him about the fire box."

"Oh, grandma," said Harry, hiding his face in her skirts, "will they—will they—" he broke down in sobs.

"No, they won't do a thing!" said the chief, who had come up and was listening to the conversation. "When it's a mistake, and you've done your best to do the right thing and help people and you don't succeed, you needn't feel bad over it. Look up, young man." Harry looked up and smiled through his tears.

"But I'll look out for the fire box the next time," he said, and he did.

CHASED BY AN ANGRY BULL

One day when we lived in Kalkaska, a friend of mine came down to my house and wanted me to go berrying with her. My mother said I could go. So we took our pails, and mother said I could go to the mill on the way, and ask Papa if Duke was out. He said he had not seen him for two or three days, but he said if we should see him to run home. Duke was a large, black, ugly bull belonging to a neighbor.

We did not have very far to go, as the woods were not over a quarter of a mile away. We went to a place where we had always gone before but quite a few people had been picking, so we went a little farther and came to a place where the berries grew in abundance.

We were busy picking and hadn't noticed the cracking of the bushes behind us, when all of a sudden we heard an angry snort. We looked around and there was Duke running toward us, with his head down and eyes blazing with anger. I called to my friend to run toward me. Duke could not see with his head down, he evidently thought we had not heard him. He would have to catch sight of us again before he could start, so we had gotten a good start.

We had not gotten very far from the mill, so we ran in the mill and told Papa. All the men said it was a miraculous escape. My friend and I vowed we would not go berrying again that summer.

At a special meeting of the Directors of the Lilley State Bank on Monday, March fourth, the following formal action was taken out of respect to Mr. Lucius Lilley, the organizer and late President of that institution:

WHEREAS:

Our revered President, Mr, Lucius Lilley, died at his residence in Tecumseh on Friday, March first, nineteen hundred and twelve, and

WHEREAS:

His long life of eighty-nine years of integrity an energy, and his devotion of almost sixty years to the upbuilding of the banking interests of Michigan, have been an inspiration to his associates; we, the Directors of the Lilley State Bank, in special meeting assembled, do hereby

RESOLVE:

That our sorrow at the loss of a true friend and a wise counselor is tempered only by the fact that it is shared by this entire community, and it is further more,

RESOLVED:

That the policies, which he inaugurated in the institution which he loved so well, shall be ever perpetuated; and that copies of this evidence of our respect and esteem be properly inscribed on the records of this bank, and that copies also be presented to his bereaved family.

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

WIT AND WISDOM

Possibly the Wit and Wisdom members are planning having their pictures taken and are practicing posing as they had for their subject Monday evening "Photography".

They met at the at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rosscrans. A paper on "Photography" was given by Rev. Weld and Elmer Slayton gave a paper on "Moving Pictures", music was interspersed, the pictures of the members at different periods of their lives were then thrown on the screen by the stereoptician and they saw themselves as others saw them, creating a good laugh. Refreshments were served at the close.

COMPLETE SURPRISE

A complete surprise was perpetrated on Mrs. S. E. Austin at the home of her daughter Mrs. George Field, March 7th the occasion being her 67th birthday.

Mrs. Austin has eight children all of whom were present with their children and grandchildren, with the exception of her son Mont Austin of Detroit.

Mrs. Austin had entirely forgotten it was her birthday, and when the children presented themselves she at once went to the telephone and commenced to order groceries, but they soon informed her this was not necessary as they had come with baskets ladened. They presented her with a handsome plant pedestal.

There were about eighteen present. Those from out of town were: Mrs. Elmer Camburn, Mrs. Arthur Camburn, Mrs. Pennington and two sons and Mr. and Mrs Clare Camburn all of Macon. They report a very pleasant day.

JOLLY SIXTEEN

The Jolly Sixteen met with Mrs. O. G. Hunt Thursday evening March 7th, every member being present. As usual progressive pedro was the game of the evening, Mrs. Geo. Church winning 1st prize and Mrs. Geo. Ziehr 2nd prize. Light refreshments were served. They will meet next Thursday evening with Mrs. Ethel Mathias.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Merry-go-round club did not belie their name when they met with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rathbun Wednesday evening, as it was merry first, last and always. The winners of the ten games played were Mrs. Wade L. Jones and Faron Anderson. While the menu of the club is supposed to be limited it was a banquet that was served.

MUSICALE EVENING

ONE-HUNDRED AND SEVENTEEN GUESTS WERE PRESENT

The open meeting of the Monday Club was held Tuesday evening, March 5th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Wood. This is the annual meeting to which the ladies look forward to with a great deal of pleasure as they have for the guests of the evening their husbands and gentleman friends this evening was an unusually enjoyable one, Mr. and Mrs. Wood making an ideal host and hostess.

The following program was rendered:

Piano Player—Overture "William Tell,"—Mr. Wood
Address Welcome—Mrs. Cupples
Vocal Quartet—"Esterdiantina"—Philomel Quartet
Piano Quartet—"Lohengrin"—Miss Shull Mrs. Look, Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Hodges
Vocal Solo—"Hindu Love Song"—Miss Rollison
Duet Piano and Piano Player—Mr. and Mrs. Wood
Reading—"Grigsby Station"—Mrs. McAlpine
Piano Player—"Don Giovanni"—Mr. Wood
Philomel Quartet—"Old Folks at Home"

As usual the Philomel Quartet was a great favorite. The two numbers given by the Piano Quartet was especially enjoyed as it is seldom the pleasure is granted of hearing two pianos in concert and their rhythm was perfect.

Miss Rollison, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Pulver sang "The Hindu Love Song" with great affect. Mrs. McAlpine in her inimitable manner gave Riley's "Grigsby Station". The Piano player as played by Mr. Wood gave great pleasure to the guests while to a outsider it might seem mechanical there is much in the manipulation, in order to bring out the melody. Mrs. F. B. Wood in her enthusiasm for music has done much toward the cultivation of music in Tecumseh and much credit is due her. Refreshments were served and everyone was much pleased with the evenings entertainment.

LANSING — The important annual meeting of the Michigan Association of Fairs was held at the Hotel Wentworth and delegates were present from Ionia, Hillsdale, Adrian, Charlotte, Marshall, Allegan, Lake Odessa and Imlay City. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, C. N. Terwilliger, Hillsdale; vice president, F. A. Bradish, Adrian; second vice president, R. S. Scott, Marshall; third vice president, L. A. Lilley, Allegan; secretary and treasurer, Frank Rathsburg, Imlay City.

BIRMINGHAM—Eugene W. Heth, who is well known as the "Bronco Buster of the Air" in the aviation world, arrived from New Orleans to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Heth. He has been giving exhibition flights at the Mardi Gras. During the fall he made exhibition flights throughout Mississippi and Texas in a Wright biplane. He is a pupil of Aviator Atwood and was given his license in Boston last July and gained a reputation for his daring tricks and double spiral glides.

ALLEGAN—The work in this city of securing a jury in the case of William F. Smith, charged with the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. O. C. Flannigan, and his sister-in-law, Miss Cora Flannigan, is complete. He will be tried first on charge of murdering Miss Flannigan. Smith's defense, it is said, will be temporary insanity.

MUSKEGON — Claude Fuller, a street car conductor living here, is at his home in a serious condition as the result of internal injuries sustained when he was caught between the cars he was endeavoring to couple at a Muskegon Heights switch. He was internally injured.

THE STEARNS & FOSTER MATTRESS

Facts you should know about a mattress before you buy one

Mattresses look very much alike, but there is the greatest difference between them.

The softness, elasticity and durability of cotton-felt mattresses depend on the length and quality of the fibres of the cotton used and the way they are laid.

Many mattresses sold as the best cotton-felts are made from short-fibre cotton that has no life at all.

It is the quality of the cotton, the long, strong fibres, and the special "web-process" of laying them, that give Stearns & Foster Mattresses their perfect comfort and wonderful life—the reason why there are more sold than any other made.

They never lump; never need remaking. They are made in four grades—a mattress to suit every purse.

Come in. Let us show them to you; let us unlace this opening at the end of the mattress,—show you exactly what is inside. We'll be glad to do it, whether you are ready to buy or not.

This mattress is just another example of the excellence of our stock throughout. New goods are arriving daily.

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Hundreds of Tecumseh People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occasions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disappeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists.

EARLY RISERS

The famous little pills.

Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE

CONTAINING HONEY AND TAR

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Callerie of 326 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, [illegible] Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

HIS NEPHEW'S BRIDE

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Willis Granger paused in the act of lighting his cigar. Some one was snipping branches from the bush of bridal wreath behind the summer house. Granger was a philanthropist and it was distasteful to him to think that anyone would steal what he would willingly have given.

He arose cautiously from the hammock and peered through the vines.

Surprise checked the stern rebuke that would have sprung from his lips. He went softly around until his huge frame filled the grape-hung doorway.

The girl turned a startled head and clutched the small cluster of bridal wreath spasmodically to her breast. She stood poised as if for flight.

"Come here—please!" Granger's voice again commanded.

She came slowly toward him. Her great gray eyes set in a wan little face held to his as if they fain would drag pardon from him.

"Sit down," he said, when she was within the summer house. He knew that her knees were trembling and he held forth a wide low chair. She slipped down among the cushions still keeping her big eyes on him.

"I would have given you all the flowers you wanted," Granger said.

"I—I didn't know how to ask you—for some," the girl faltered. She went on swiftly, "I am going to be married—to-morrow—and I just couldn't—without a few flowers."

Granger repressed his amazement. He had supposed the girl to be not more than fifteen at the outside.

"How old are you, child?" he asked her.

"Twenty," she said simply. "I haven't any hairpins—for my hair; that's why I look so young."

Granger looked closely at her. She certainly did look young with those coppery curls shimmering down the nape of her neck.

"Are you very much in love with the man to whom you are giving yourself?"

Now that the nervousness had left her Granger sat down beside her.

"I care for him—yes," she said, "but I am marrying mostly because it seems as if I couldn't live among those people any longer."

Upon questioning her Granger learned that the woman with whom she lived had taken her in after a wreck on the railroad. The child had been miraculously saved and had grown up without affection or care among the lower classes of the village.

"Tom says I can have a new dress—after we are married," the girl said with a wistful glance at the ragged frock.

"Tom! Tom who?" demanded Granger.

"Tom Anson—he drives a grocery wagon."

Granger had scarcely heard; he was thinking. This young girl with her trusting eyes was far too young to have her confidence in men shattered. Without ruining her trust he must in some way prevent her throwing her lot with that of a man such as Anson and yet preserve for her an unmarred vision into the world.

"Can you cook and mend and do all the things required of a poor man's wife?" he asked finally.

"I can't do anything like that! I shiver all the time I am washing dishes and I can't stand dirt—it makes me squirm!"

Granger again plunged into thought. Here was a startling example of a soul struggling against the sordid things of life yet powerless and drifting with the murky current.

Granger absorbed himself in contemplation of her while she closed her eyes in momentary fatigue. There was refinement in her voice, in her eyes and in her lips. The hopeless little gestures with which she had punctuated her story of life had in them the grace of culture.

"Madge," he used her name that he might keep her at her ease, "I am going to order tea and while we are having it I have a proposition to make to you." He rang the bell at his side and when his butler appeared Granger ordered a tea that would most appeal to a tired little waif.

Nor did the butler mention in the kitchen that the master was entertaining a wonderful beggar-maid in the summer house. Granger's philanthropies were every day occurrences.

Madge showed no embarrassment when the tea tray was placed on the table beside her. Instead, she found that her hands had naturally fallen on the handle of the little silver teapot and that she was asking Willis Granger how he liked his tea.

Surprise and amusement dawned in Granger's eyes. It suddenly occurred to him that here was the very girl he would have selected as a wife for his nephew. With a year or two of good schooling she would be a little paragon of both beauty and charm.

"Now listen carefully to what I am going to say," he began, when she was comfortably eating an English muffin and sipping her tea. "I want you to postpone your marriage to Tom Anson for one year."

From the look in her eyes Madge had forgotten for a moment that Tom Anson was a person. Granger did not allow her to speak.

"In that year I want to send you to a school of domestic economy. That means—" he answered the question in her eyes—"that you will be prepared to take the management of a home into your own hands."

"Where will I get the home?" she asked innocently but with a hint of mischief in her now happy eyes.

Granger did not answer at once. He wondered if she were aware of her elfin beauty. Yes, he decided, Madge Carter was the very wife for Harold.

"Oh, I say—I beg your pardon!" Harold himself burst into the summer house.

Granger arose and introduced the two whom he had selected for mates.

The boy was confused and a question was in his eyes.

"I was stealing some flowers from your uncle's garden," the girl said with an abashed glance at Granger. "He caught me, and in return he is giving me tea."

"Am I too late to have a cup?" Harold sank into a chair and Willis Granger realized with oddly mixed emotions that his own scheming had been in the nature of a forerunner. His good looking young nephew and the beggar-maid seemed to have found the big thing in life in their first exchange of glances.

During the months following, Madge went through an abbreviated course in domestic economy. After that she was intrusted to the tutelage of a maiden lady whose profession it was to instruct those whose education had been neglected. There Madge received the little finishing and society touches so dear to the refined nature.

During these long months of separation Harold accepted gladly the position of envoy. At frequent intervals he was sent for information to the various schools. He returned with enthusiastic accounts of Madge's progress.

Once only, during her absence, had Willis Granger seen his protege. On that occasion his had been a peculiar medley of emotions.

She had received him in the little visitor's parlor of the boarding house. Harold had in a measure prepared him yet he was strangely at a loss for words during the interview. He had hurried away, whether in self-defense or a desire to hurry Harold toward the capture of Madge, he knew not.

As Willis Granger drove up the shady drive and through the luxurious grounds to his home the memory of the comfortless boarding house he had left smote him. Wistful gray eyes floated before him and the clinging pressure of soft fingers sent an uncomfortable warmth up his arm.

Inside the house he wrote a note asking or rather demanding that his protege come at once for a two weeks' change.

Granger thought of a house party but finally decided against the idea. A house party would involve the necessity of young men who might in a measure jeopardize Harold's chance of winning Madge. Granger felt relieved over this decision and Madge became a part of the household under the amused chaperonage of Granger's sister.

Things progressed. Willis Granger felt that he was rejoicing in the very evident success of his plans. He and his sister talked of a church wedding and afterward in the privacy of his den the philanthropist tried to visualize himself in the act of placing the hand of his protege in that of his nephew. But instead, the soft fingers of the girl clung to his own.

Granger felt suddenly very warm. He took off his coat and went to the open window through which a young moon peeped. The mystical beauty of the night, his own deep unrest and a desire to be alone sent him out and toward the summer house.

She was huddled up in his big smoking chair. He saw, by the pale light of the moon, that Madge had resumer her tattered dress and that her coppery curls lay on the nape of her neck.

She turned wide frightened eyes on him then jumped up as if she would have flown from the summer house.

"Tell me all I have asked," he commanded, barring her way.

"I was saying good-by—to the summer house," she faltered.

Granger strove to steady his voice. "Good-by? You are not going back to marry—?"

"I'm not going to marry anyone!" she burst out.

"There are two more things to answer."

"I put these clothes on because they are all that belong to me," she said and caught her breath quickly.

"And why were you crying?"

But, past all endurance, she made a dart toward the door. He caught her swiftly. The suddenness of the contact made them both silent until in the soft murmurings of lovers newly found they voiced the long felt want.

A Secret Disclosed.

"Are you aware of the fact that if every woman in this country were married there would be 2,691,879 men who would have to get along without wives, there being that many more males than females?"

"Gee, no! I never knew that. No wonder our wives treat us as if it didn't make any difference to them whether we liked their manners or not."

TRIES TO SAVE LORIMER

Hanecy Files Brief Likening Senator to Martyrs.

The probing of the election of Lorimer is characterized as an inquisition and the junior senator from Illinois is likened to historical martyrs of church and nation in a voluminous brief filed with the special senate investigation committee by Attorney Elbridge Haney. Bitter arraignment is made of the four confessed bribe takers of the Illinois legislature, of the private detective and other agencies in the work, and of what is characterized as "popular clamor" demanding that Senator Lorimer's seat be vacated.

The brief covers two arguments: First, the doctrine of res adjudicata, the vote in the senate of 46 to 40 which is that the case was settled by March 1, 1911, exactly a year ago, and, second, that the evidence heard "is incredible, worthless and incompetent."

The bitter and sensational allegations in the brief come when Attorney Haney expresses his opinion of the evidence produced to prove Senator Lorimer's seat was obtained by fraud and corruption.

That Senator Lorimer and his counsel do not intend to rest with the decision of the committee is indicated by the comments on the doctrine of res adjudicata.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery, the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

AMUNDSEN IS RETICENT

Explorer Refuses to Divulge Further Particulars.

Says that He Is Ignorant of Whether Captain Scott Reached South Pole or Not.

Hobart, Tasmania, March 11.—Captain Roald Amundsen, maintains his reticence in regard to his expedition and that of Captain Scott. His full story was cabled back here from London, but the explorer declines to add anything to it.

The only thing he has said is that the expedition of Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton, which got to within ninety-seven miles of the pole, took a much more difficult route than he did. In answer to another question, Captain Amundsen said he could not say whether Captain Scott had reached the pole.

ASSAILS AMUNDSEN

London, March 11.—The Times refers editorally to the surprise with which Explorer Amundsen's change of plan to find the south pole instead of the north pole was received. It says this change and the unnecessary secrecy with which it was surrounded were felt to be at variance with the spirit of fair competition, and that the enterprise appeared in the light of a mere dash to forestall the British expedition.

It adds that although British feeling would have been in sympathy with such an enterprise if it had been openly declared, the circumstances of its inception had produced a less favorable impression.

TAFT'S SECOND DAY IN CHICAGO

Spends It Much More Quietly than He Did His First.

TALKS ON MISSIONARY WORK

Mr. Taft spent Sunday quietly as compared with his strenuous program of Saturday, when he was on the go almost constantly for about twelve hours.

Mr. Taft attended divine service in the morning at the First Methodist church and listened to a sermon by the Rev. Ernest Wray O'Neal, pastor. This church, which is located in the business section of the city, is known locally as the "Strangers'" church. After the sermon, the Rev. Dr. O'Neal said:

"We are honored today by the presence of William Howard Taft, the president of the United States. The congregation will appreciate a short address by the president."

Mr. Taft accepted the invitation and entering the pulpit spoke for a few minutes upon missionary work. He commended the efforts of the missionaries to spread Christianity among the heathen peoples of the world and he expressed the belief that they are making great headway in gaining converts. He rebuked the people who scoff at the missionaries.

"I believe," Mr. Taft said, "that even though we have places where home missionary work is essential, that is no reason why missionaries should not be sent into foreign fields to Christianize the heathen."

Mr. Taft took luncheon at the Congress hotel with a party of distinguished politicians. Among those present were Governor Deneen of Illinois, Governor Eberhardt of Minnesota, Mayor Carter H. Harrison, Congressman Foss, David R. Forgan, Fred W. Upham, Max Pam, Charles G. Dawes and Postmaster Campbell.

In the afternoon the president made a short speech to the Bohemian Sunday school children and to a Polish citizens' meeting on the south side.

Mr. Taft is much pleased with his reception during his two day visit to Chicago. The most encouraging political event was the endorsement of President Taft's administration by the Swedish-American Republican league, which is an important factor in Illinois politics.

YUAN SHIH KAI SWORN

Becomes President of Provisional Republic of China.

Avows Loyalty to Republic and Also Swears to Retire When Permanent President Is Named.

Pekin, March 11. — Yuan Shih Kai was sworn in as president of the provisional republic of China at the Wai-Wu-Pu, or Chinese foreign office.

The delegates from the Nankin assembly, a number of provisional representatives and other prominent persons, as well as the secretaries and military attaches of the American legation, were present at the ceremony. The other foreign legations were not represented.

Yuan made an avowal of loyalty to the republic, which was supplemented by an oath that he would retire when a permanent president was chosen.

KNOX IN SALVATOR

Acajutla, Salvador, March 11.—The cruiser Maryland with Mr. Knox, the American secretary of state, and party aboard arrived here. The secretary was met and welcomed by the members of the cabinet.

DID MRS. GRACE SHOOT HUSBAND

Atlanta Tragedy Discussed by Attorney in Case.

FINALE OF DIABOLICAL PLOT

Claims Woman Planned to Keep the Death Secret, to Go to His Parents and Thus Establish an Absolute Alibi.

Atlanta, Ga., March 11.—"Mrs. Daisy Grace drugged her husband and then shot him.

"Her action was the execution of a diabolical plot to murder Eugene H. Grace for his insurance money, which the woman planned several days before. He says she drugged him before she shot him and all the evidence so far uncovered proves it."

This was the statement of Reuben Arnold, leader of the Atlanta bar, who has been retained by the Grace family to prosecute Mrs. Daisy Grace, formerly Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Opie, the rich Philadelphia widow on the charge of shooting her husband.

"The woman's own statement ought to convict her before any reasonable jury," Mr. Arnold said, "if it were not that since our investigation of the case we find evidence which points beyond a shadow of a doubt to her guilt.

"Why she even stuffed the telephone transmitter with cotton so he could not talk over it. She had stuffed the bell with the same material in order that the telephone should not ring and would not be heard by the neighbors.

"Then she sneaked off to Newman, to his parents, to make a perfect alibi.

"She had every arrangement to prevent his body being found for four or five days and then she was ready to declare that for almost an entire week she had been with his mother.

"The motive is perfectly clear. The woman was in straightened circumstances. We can prove that she was very hard pressed for money."

There is a possibility that Mrs. Grace may have fired the shot in somnanbulant state, and never have realized it nor suspected that her husband was otherwise than asleep or sick with a slight cold when she left him in bed and went to her train last Tuesday morning.

Meanwhile Mrs. Grace remains in the Tower, crying out that she is innocent, that she loves her husband and that he was shot by a negro burglar. She is continually asking for messengers to take her love to the husband at the hospital.

Death of Famous Publisher.

Monte Carlo, March 11. — Ezechiel Paz, founder and director of La Prensa, of Buenos Ayres, died here of pneumonia. He was sixty-nine years of age. Senor Paz was made a chevalier of the Legion of Honor by President Fallieres in 1906.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 11.—Fred Bushay, caught while robbing a grocer of $100, confessed numerous other hold-ups, for one of which Ed. Christenberry was sentenced to prison last Wednesday. Christenberry is to be released.

ADVANCE UPON CAPITAL

Rebel Army Closing in upon City of Mexico.

Madero Has Bodies of Federal Troops at Outposts to Stop Vasquista Progress.

Washington, March 11.—Four rebel divisions, cautiously advancing for the crucial trial of strength with the Madero forces, are closing in on Mexico City, according to advices to the state department.

FRANCISCO I. MADERO.

Fear that the outcome may prove disastrous to Americans in the capital city has quickened the ambassador to send an urgent appeal to Washington for marines to protect the legation, and similar action, upon the advice of Ambassador Wilson, has been taken by the representatives of other foreign countries.

Surrounding the city at various points along the lines of march of the advancing columns are bodies of federal troops ready to attack the invaders, but the effect on the advance is unknown, as is also the strength of the rebels.

Detroit Catholic Church Burns.

Detroit, Mich., March 11.—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the St. John Nepomucene Catholic church in this city. The property loss is estimated at $60,000.

MISSING GIRL IS FOUND

Gypsy Husband, However, Defies Foster Parent to Take Her Away.

Logansport, Ind., March 11.—Nellie Marie White, who eloped from the home of her adopted father, John Myers, in Fulton county, Nov. 2, 1911, and was married in Wabash to Harry C. Standley, a gypsy, with whom she had become infatuated, has been found at Walton, Cass county. The whereabouts of the missing girl was revealed by the gypsy husband, who issued a statement defying Myers to take the girl away from him.

Standley says his father was United States ambassador to Egypt, and while in that country married an Egyptian. His father's name was Bloom, but he has always gone by his mother's name of Standley. He is a graduate of South Dakota university, and he speaks several languages fluently.

SAYS CONTEST IS NOT A GAME

Thinks That When Interests of People Are at Stake They Should Be Given Opportunity to Express Themselves at Polls.

Washington, March 11. — Colonel Roosevelt has written a long letter to Senator Dixon, his manager, recalling to the senator's mind everything that has been contained in the Dixon-McKinley correspondence and vigorously and freely expressing his opinion thereon.

The colonel renews his demand that the issue in the present fight be submitted to the voters at presidential preference primaries He charges in effect that the president and his followers regard the present struggle as a "game" to be played for the purpose of winning the presidential prize—a game in which the interests of the people are at stake, but in which they are to have no voice.

Here is part of the letter:

"My Dear Senator Dixon—I have received your letter of March 6 stating that in your opinion, it is of vital importance to the success of the Republican party in the November elections that the national Republican convention shall nominate the candidate whom the mass of the Republican voters wish nominated and that therefore, this sentiment should be given expression through presidential preferential primaries in the several states in order that the wishes of the voters may be ascertained before instead of after the nomination.

"I have also seen your correspondence with Mr. McKinley. His answer to your proposal for presidential primaries is contained practically in one sentence in the letter to you:

"'I don't favor changes in the rules of the game, while the game is in progress.'

"The point of view expressed in that sentence contained the issue within the Republican party at this time. We who stand for the progressive cause, for the cause of honest and genuine democracy, genuine representative government, hold that a public contest between parties or within parties is not carried on as a game, is not carried on for the purpose of winning prizes for the contestants or with a view to the personal wishes or welfare of any one man. We hoped that it should be carried on for the purpose of ascertaining and putting into effect the will of the people, so that the people may jointly do for themselves what no man can do so well for them. We hold that the laws that govern electors and govern party organizations should not be treated as rules which are fit subjects for tricky manipulation by contestants for a prize.

"Our opponents, on the contrary, take Mr. McKnley's view that we are engaged in a game in which the interests of the people, it is true, are at stake, but in which the people themselves are not having their voice.

"There never was a straigther fight waged for the people of popular rule than that which we are now waging. We are fighting against entrenched privilege, both political privilege and financial privilege. We believe that if given a fair chance the people will declare against both political and financial privilege. Therefore, we demand that they be given the fair chance.

"Sincerely yours,
"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

UPHOLDS THE DIVORCE LAW

Illinois Court Annuls Marriage of Divorcee Within Year.

Springfield, Ill., March 11.— Annuling the marriage of Andrew V. Smith and Mrs. Mary Hefferman in the circuit court, Judge Creighton upheld the marriage and divorce law of Illinois, which provides that persons shall not marry within a year after a divorce and return to Illinois to reside.

LET UNIVERSITY CASE STAND

Authorities Take No Action for Rehearing of Appropriation Test.

Springfield, Ill., March 11.—The last day for filing notices of rehearing for the next term of the supreme court passed without the filing of a notice in the case of the state university medical appropriation bill.

A rehearing will be asked in the case involving the constitutionality of the state civil service law, notice having been filed.

Retired Methodist Minister Dies.

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 11.—Rev. Chester Church, who filled many of the Methodist Episcopal pastorates of northern Indiana during the last thirty-seven years, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. A. Beatty. He was a member of the northern Indiana conference thirty-seven years and on the superannuated list for twenty-five years.

POLICE KILL THIEF

Companions Escape After a Thrilling Flight Down Fire Escapes.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 11.—One of a trio of burglars, who were surprised while carting away many thousands of dollars worth of plunder from the roof of a four story store building at 139 North Twelfth street was shot and killed by policemen. His two companions escaped after a thrilling chase down fire escapes and over back fences.

The looted building was occupied by Samuel H. Weisbord, manufacturer of silk goods. The burglars had blown open the safe and had packed much of the stock ready to take away. The dead burglar has not been identified.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. J, T. Curtiss, Dwight, Kan. He writes: I not only have cured bad cases of eczema in my patients with Electric Bitters, but also cured myself by them of the same disease: I feel sure they will benefit any case of eczema." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is a most effective blood purifier. Its an excellent remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Price 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

PITHY SAYINGS FROM JOHN COMB'S ADDRESS

The Freemont Daily prints the entire address of John J. Combs as given on his acceptance of the Presidency of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Combs has not forgotten how to make a a point and defend it and we quote a few of his pithy sayings called by The Freemont News "sentence sermons from John Combs address,"

"This association belongs to you and every member should work for its success for you are responsible for its success or failure,

I am not going nine miles around some back road when we can take a short cut.

I have never discovered where a quitter or a knocker got anything

Our prospects were never brighter than they are now.

We are on the eve of a great civic awakening.

I appeal to the public spirited citizens of Freemont to cast aside all jealousies and animosities:

The selfish, narrow-minded man who is living for himself alone is an object of pity.

The unselfish, broad-minded man is the one who gets the most out of this world.

What we want is more life, more vim and more energy in this association.

I shall expect every committee in this organization to make a report or give a reason why.

We have every reason to feel encouraged.

We cannot accomplish everything in a month or a year but in the end our influence will be far reaching,

Our object is to make a "Greater and Better Freemont" and we are justly entitled to success."

THIRTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

March 7

A very pleasant party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Stevenson, planned by his wife. Progressive pedro was the amusement of the evening. Prizes were won by Mrs. E. E. Howard, Mrs. Bert Mominee, Mr. Bert Mominee and Will Meeks.

A two course supper was served. The hostess received two pieces of silverware to commemorate the event.

Merry-Go-Round

The Merry-go-round club was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Monday evening. Dr. Hendershott and Mrs. George Rathbun were the prize winners at cards. At the close of the games fine refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by all.

ADAM GRAY

Adam Gray of Detroit, father of Mrs. B. J. Garlinghouse, passed away early Sunday morning after an illness of nearly three weeks, of acute indigestion with other complications. Mr. Gray has made many friends in Tecumseh, in his frequent visits to his daughter. Mrs. Garlinghouse has the sympathy of her many friends in this great bereavement.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Frank Smith of Newburg The Victim

The mangled body of a man was found beside the L. S. & M. S. track Friday afternoon about 1 o'clock, at Lee's Mill three miles south of town.

It is thought he was struck by the extra north bound freight No. 736, though how the accident occurred is a mystery. The extra was held here awaiting the passenger train due at 1:39. The crew of the passenger found the body beside the track and placed it in the baggage car and brought it here. On investigation it was found that it was the body of Frank Smith whose home was with his parents, Robert Smith and wife of Newburg.

Besides his parents he leaves two sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Michael Wallace of Clinton, Miss Lizzie Smith of Tecumseh, Chas. of Newburg and George of Tecumseh, Corner Hosmer impanneled a jury which viewed the remains and adjourned until 9 o'clock Monday morning. The jurymen were John Schreder, John Nemire, John Steel, Samuel Steel Andrew Taylor and James Boyce. This meeting was postponed until Tuesday morning on account of election day.

After some deliberation on the facts as gathered, the jury brought in a verdict to the effect that the man, Frank Smith came to his death in attempt to board a freight train.

THE STEARNS & FOSTER MATTRESS

Facts you should know about a mattress before you buy one

Mattresses look very much alike, but there is the greatest difference between them.

The softness, elasticity and durability of cotton-felt mattresses depend on the length and quality of the fibres of the cotton used and the way they are laid.

Many mattresses sold as the best cotton-felts, are made from short-fibre cotton that has no life at all.

It is the quality of the cotton, the long, strong fibres, and the special "web-process" of laying them, that give Stearns & Foster Mattresses their perfect comfort and wonderful life—the reason why there are more sold than any other made.

They never lump; never need remaking. They are made in four grades—a mattress to suit every purse.

Come in. Let us show them to you; let us unlace this opening at the end of the mattress,—show you exactly what is inside. We'll be glad to do it, whether you are ready to buy or not.

This mattress is just another example of the excellence of our stock throughout. New goods are arriving daily.

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Hundreds of Tecumseh People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich. says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence. and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists.

EARLY RISERS

The famous little pills.

Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

GOVERNOR GETS MITTEN

Engagement of Tasker L. Oddie Is Broken Off.

Reno, Nev., March 11.—The engagement existing for several months past between Mrs. Dale Hartley Baker of California and Governor Tasker L. Oddie has been broken and the air is full of stories. Mrs. Baker is the widow of the late Reeves Baker, a wealthy lumberman of Oregon, and the sister-in-law of the attorney general of Nevada, Cleveland Baker, who married a daughter of Senator Perkins of California. During a visit of the widow to the Baker home in Carson City she and the governor became engaged and the weddingg was to be early this spring.

"It is all off. There was something, but everything is broken," the governor admitted.

One story is that Mrs. Baker broke the engagement in retaliation for the governor's efforts to oust Roy Baker, her brother-in-law, from wardenship of the Nevada penitentiary. It is said that the governor demanded Baker's resignation as a result of political influence brought to bear upon him.

GIRL SAVED BY BRAKEMAN

Railroad Worker Drags Her from In Front of Cut of Cars.

Huntington, Ind., March 11.—Riley Hughes of Peru, a Wabash brakeman, may receive a Carnegie medal for his heroism in rescuing a twelve-year-old Huntington girl, Imo Miller, from in front of a cut of cars being switched in this city Jan. 9.

Hughes' action in reaching from the forward end of a car and jerking the girl from the track has received extensive mention, and now the Carnegie medal committee has started an investigation, acting through Z. T. Dungan of this city, claim agent for the road, before whom Hughes will give a statement of his experience in saving the child.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic touble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 815 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Thomas Matthews has sold his farm to Riga parties, and will move into town.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

CAUSE FOR ALARM

Loss of Appetite or Distress After Eating a Symptom That Should not be Disregarded

Appetite is just a natural desire for food. Loss of appetite or stomach distress after eating indicate indigestion or dyspepsia Over-eating is a habit very dangerous to a person's good general health.

It is not what you eat but what you digest and assimilate, that does you good. Some of the stongest, heaviest, and healthiest persons are moderate eaters.

There is nothing that will cause more trouble that a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract and many people daily contract serous maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all in Tecumseh who suffer from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine, they are not perfectly satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have to hear of any one who has not been benefited by them. We honestly believe them to be without equal They give very prompt relief, aiding to neutralize the gastric juices, strengthen the digestive organs, to regulate the bowels, and thus to promote perfect nutrition and eradicate all unhealthy symptoms.

We urge you to try a 25c. box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, which gives 15 days' treatment. At the end of that time, your money will be returned to you if you are not satisfied. Of course, in chronic cases length of treatment varies. For such cases, we have two larger sizes, which sell for 50c. and and $1,00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store B. J. Pulver.

More Than That in Life.

It would be a bad day for humanity if a man's debt to his fellow-men should come to be calculated and paid solely in rates and taxes.

Where Tea is Eaten.

The tea grown in Burmah is almost entirely made into letpet (pickled tea) and eaten as a condiment. It therefore does not affect the world's supply of tea for drinking.

SAFE-BLOWER'S SMART WORK

Ingenious Operations of a Burglar Who Was After Wealth of Berlin Money Broker.

The confidence of German manufacturers of safes in the resistance of their works against ordinary safe-blowing operations was rudely shaken not long ago by the feat of a single robber in Berlin, who operated in this fashion:

In a hotel a room was secured which was situated immediately above the office of a money broker. At night a hole was pierced in the ceiling of this office. By the use of a drill and saw a circular piece of the flooring was easily raised. Beneath lay a thick layer of cement. A small orifice was made in this and an umbrella shoved down into the space below. The umbrella was attached firmly from above, and when opened received without noise all the fragments of cement which were dislodged as the hole was enlarged so as to allow of the easy passage of a person. By means of a rope ladder the descent was made readily into the office below. The next steps of the thief's work consisted in the bringing down of two cylinders of compressed oxygen and an acetylene generator charged with calcium carbide and water. With these he was able to produce a blowpipe flame of such intensity that steel fuses in it like lead in an ordinary gas jet. It required only a brief space of time to melt away so much of the door that the contents of the safe were accessible.

TABLE DELICACY OF GERMANY

Wherever a German table delicacy is in demand, there is the Westphalian ham to be found. It is given its peculiar piquant taste by the use of juniper berries in smoking the meat. The juniper shrub is indigenous to northwestern Germany and so plentiful, especially in Westphalia, that to its presence is due the growth, during the past several centuries, of two principal industries of this German province, the distillation of gin and the preparation of hams. After weeks of preparation the hams are ready to be smoked. The smoke houses consist sometimes of two, and sometimes of three stories, the fire being kindled in the lowest and the meat hung in the second and third, to which the smoke ascends through holes in the flooring. Westphalian hams are invariably smoked over a bright fire made of beech-wood only, except that juniper twigs and berries are constantly thrown on the fire. Beech-wood sawdust is strewn over the fire in case it becomes too strong. The smoking process requires on an average about eight days.

Good Old English Custom.

There was an old-fashioned custom on the English road, which I suspect is now obsolete, or practiced only by the vulgar. Journeys of length being made on horseback, and, of course by brief stages, it was usual always to make a halt on the Sunday in some town where the traveler might attend divine service and his horse have the benefit of the day of rest, the institution of which is as humane to our brute laborers as profitable to ourselves. A counterpart to this decent practice, and a remnant of old English hospitality, was, that the landlord of a principal inn laid aside his character of a publican on the seventh day, and invited the guests who chanced to be within his walls to take a part of his family beef and pudding. This invitation was usually complied with by all whose distinguished rank did not induce them to think compliance a derogation; and the proposal of a bottle of wine after dinner, to drink the landlord's health, was the only recompense ever offered or accepted.—Sir Walter Scott.

The Sollum Anchorage.

The Gulf of Sollum is a misnomer, as a glance at any good map will show. At Ras el Mihr the coast takes a sudden trend south for 20 miles, then turns as abruptly in an easterly direction. Near the angle the high coast drops suddenly in a cliffy point, nearly half a mile south of which is the anchorage on a weedy bottom. Twelve miles north is Bardieh, a better shelter, which would be made into a tolerable harbor by a breakwater. If the frontier line of Egypt were carried about four miles to the west Bardieh would be included in Egyptian territory. The Sollum anchorage derives its principal value from the fact that it is the nearest point on the Mediterranean to the Siwah oasis, and is thus the sea end of the most direct route through a string of oases to the Sudan. But to describe this uninviting corner of an inhospitable coast as "the finest harbor in these parts," in the words of a contemporary, is altogether misleading.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery, the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

FORD

LESS THAN ONE CENT A MILE

Half the cost of railroad transportation.

That's the record of the Ford Model T—of a whole neighborhood of Fords, in fact.

Read this: "In that short time (June to September) I drove the car 1,850 miles with less than one cent per mile running expense, including lights, and no repairs at all. I think that record is good, but know of several cars just like mine that made just as good records. So I think the Ford 5-passenger, 20 horsepower car is certainly the car for the farmer."

DECLARED CASE OF SUICIDE

Sudden Death of Simon Hartman of Athens at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 11.—When Simon Hartman, one of the most prominent citizens of Athens, died suddenly here Feb. 20, there were rumors that his death was by his own hand. However, the coroner, the man from whom Hartman secured rooms, the physician called and the undertaker, all told the same story—that the death, though sudden, was natural.

However, according to law, a death certificate giving the cause of death must be filed within a certain time. This certificate was filed, and the cause of death was given as suicide.

Mr. Hartman was the president of the Athens bank and a man very prominent in his community. He was very happy with his family, but recently he had suffered a severe nervous breakdown. It was because of this that he came to Ann Arbor for treatment. The physicians were not reassuring and Mr. Hartman became discouraged.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 11.—John H. Abercrombie of this city, who is known as the millionaire engineer on account of having fallen heir to a fortune through the death of his brother, has grown tired of a life of inactivity and took a run on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railway between this city and Grand Rapids.

Several years ago through his own savings and by means of a fortune left him he retired from the road, resolved to devote the rest of his life to his financial interests and to travel. The desire to again grasp the throttle remained strong in him since his retirement, however, and this could not be satisfied by either handling the reins of a spirited horse or the steering wheel of an automobile, both of which he purchased in his longing to keep moving. Travel with some one else in the cab proved irksome.

Finding he could not get away from the longing to return to the road he made application for his old run between here and Grand Rapids and word was received that he had received his reappointment

STRIKERS ARE BOISTEROUS

Union Corset Workers Jeer Those Who Stick to Jobs.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 11. — The strike of the 500 corset makers is assuming a serious aspect. Feeling between the strikers and those that refused to go out is becoming bitter and the workers were followed along the streets, hooted and jeered by the strikers.

While no assaults were made, it is believed that the presence of the police in large numbers is the only thing that prevented an outbreak. The unionists boycotted one paper here and also one hotel. An effort is being made to bring about a sympathetic strike.

MORE MEASURES WERE PROPOSED

To Legislature By Governor In Special Messages.

Brewery Owned Saloons, Saloon Bonds, Woman Suffrage, Initiative, Referendum, Recall, State-wide Primary and Other Subjects Discussed.

Favoring a law to prohibit saloons being owned by breweries the governor in his message says:

Brewery Owned Saloons.

"The purpose of this requested legislation is to make it unlawful for brewers, or those engaged in the brewery business or in the wholesale liquor business, to own, control, or to be interested directly or indirectly in any saloon or place where intoxicating or alcoholic liquors of any kind are sold, purveyed or delivered in a retail manner. This legislation is particularly aimed at the brewery-owned saloon.

"In Michigan, and throughout the United States, and all over the world where excessive use of alcohol is a curse and one of the gravest dangers that confront mankind, attention is being given to the necessity for bettering conditions. An official British parliamentary commission has reported that alcoholic poisoning is the great cause of their national degeneracy. The French government has placarded that country with appeals to the people, attributing the decline in the birth rate and the increase in the death rate to a widespread excessive use of alcoholic beverages. The German emperor has stated that leadership in war and in peace will be held by that nation whose people use the least alcohol and has pointed out with serious emphasis to the dangers arising from the excessive use of been in Germany. All of the countries of Continental Europe are alert in combating the fearful menace. Out of the degeneracy produced by excessive alcoholism or from the deaths from alcoholism produced by degeneracy, and it matters not which, because the cause and effect are so intimately associated so as to be indeterminable, flow crime, misery, direct and indirect private and public burdens, political abuse, moral breakdown, and all the influences that make for depreciation and destruction of society. The world admits the danger. How can it be averted?

"There may be some questions of human rights and personal liberty involved and there may be a plane where regulation and prohibition become super-sumptuary. With 11,500 inmates of Michigan state charitable, penal and correctional institutions and thousands more in county houses and private sanitariums, with crime on the increase in our fair state, with the owners of big breweries, through their strings of saloons and otherwise, mischievously and boldly active in endeavors to control elections, legislation and public officials, there is aroused interest on the part of all classes of citizens.

"While there may be some argument as to whether saloons shall be permitted to exist in this state, there is no argument against a declaration that saloons which are notoriously vicious and lawless shall not exist. There are those who argue and sincerely believe that the saloon is the poor man's club. But they have no defense for the vile saloon which is a combination grogshop, den of prostitution, resort of robbers and gambling hell.

"In the state of Michigan there are. In all counties, 4,366 saloons. In the city of Detroit there are 1,610 saloons, or one for every 300 persons. In Wayne county there are 1,752 saloons. It is estimated that two-thirds of the salons in Detroit, and more than one-half of those in the state, are brewery-owned. This number of saloons, so disproportionate to any need that can be shown by any person, has been made possible, because the big breweries of Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and elsewhere are in the business of starting, en*couraging, capitalizing,* owning and controlling saloons.

"Examination wil show that 85 per cent of dives are brewery-owned saloons. The evil participation of these big breweries in the saloon business not only constitutes a source of greatest danger to the health, safety and morals of society, but it is un*fair to the independent saloonkeep*ers and to the small brewer who cannot afford to start, own or control a string of saloons. The man who is thrifty and saves enough money to go into the saloon business, and who may try to be a decent saloonkeeper and who is referred to as such, must compete with the fellow who, without money or character, is set up in business by a big brewer. The brewer finds a flash barkeeper who has attracted friends and who is willing to be his man. He is started in business. His fixtures are owned by the brewer he is bound to buy his beer of the brewer who owns him and at a greater price than the independent saloonkeeper pays; he is compelled to pay a usurious rate of interest upon the license money and other investments, and in other ways he is made the slave of the brewer as much as any peon ever is.

"What is the result? The saloon is more than apt to be located where there is not a sufficient volume of what may be at least termed honest business. Consequently the conscienceless lessee wins his revenue in any manner possible and his only concern is not to be caught at his repeated violation of all the laws that make for human decency and protection. He sells drugged liquors, he rolls and robs his drunken victims, he profits from the prostitution plied by human derelicts, he harbors the white slave traffickers, he gives police officers hush money, he encourages every form of gambling and he gets his money to pay his brewer master in anyway possible, just so he gets it. The snug brewer master sits in his office or in his parlor and takes this blood money as did the absentee landlord in Ireland, without thought of its source so long as it is paid to him on time, and it must be paid.

"It is within your power to remove this breeding place of vice, the brewery-owned saloon, the evil-baited man trap that is set to catch the weak and the unwary. Pass a law prohibiting and punishing brewery-ownership of saloons and you will have done more for the welfare of Michigan than any other legislature in its history; you will have done a real act for the protection [illegible] of our sons and daughters and those who work until they are overweary and those who, though older, are like children in their weakness and lack of self-control, and finally you will have done the only thing that will give the so-called decent saloon-keeper a chance to make of his business a legitimate calling, if such is within the power of mankind.

"Unless you do this and curb the low saloon curse, the day will soon come when the people of Michigan will rise in righteous wrath and wipe out all of the saloons by state-wide prohibition, which obtained in this state from 1856 to 1876. Far down in the hearts of the people they are moral and desire that which is right and wholesome. If they can cure without fanaticism or resorting to extremes, they will do so, but, in time they will cure."

Bonding of Saloons.

Recommending restrictions on the bonding of saloons by the Michigan Bonding and Surety Co., the governor says in his message:

"This company is owned and controlled by certain big brewers in Michigan. It has a capital of $500,000, of which $250,200 is paid up in cash. In lieu of other commissions for organization, or in other words, to pay those who promoted it in the legislature, stock to the amount of $35,000 was issued, making a total paid capital of $285,200. It has on deposit with the state treasurer $200,000 in interest-bearing securities. This interest, of course, is controlled by the Michigan Bonding & Surety company. It has paid in claims since organization the small sum of $16,010. Its net earnings since organization, April 1, 1908, amount to $196,816.82. So great has been its influence that it has escaped with taxation on a value of only $12 820. Its total tax for 1911—city, state, county and road—amounted to $287.67.

"The law creating it was drawn in a manner to prevent and avoid competition, and it has had exactly the result anticipated. By its monopoly it has a peculiar and sinister hold upon and influence over the saloonkeepers of the entire state. They must pay double the amount usually charged for other bonds; they must do the bidding of the Michigan Bonding & Surety company or obtain no bonds at all. The connection thus formed between the brewery-owned bonding company and the saloonkeeper is clearly apparent. It makes for a complete organization that can be used most effectively to head off or even destroy any person or persons aiming toward corrective legislation. In every community it has well-paid lawyers as agents. They are expected to do, and do do, the bidding of this bonding company.

"Damage suits against saloons are fought with a vigor and ability that could not be commanded in any other way, resulting in delay and defeat of these who have been damaged by the saloonkeepers, whether widowed mothers of wayward sons and daughters or wives of drunken husbands.

"In the interest of the welfare of the people of this state, the existence of the Michigan Bonding & Surety Co. as a political monopoly should be made impossible under the laws of Michigan.

Other Measures Proposed.

"You are authorized to consider a bill or bills amending the Michigan primary election law in such manner as to make it include all or any state offices now elective and also to consider corrupt practice legislation pertaining to all or any nominations and elections.

"This message is in response to house resolution No. 18 requesting the same.

"You are authorized and requested to consider a bill amending section 32 of act No. 205 of the public acts of 1887, entitled 'An act to revise the laws authorizing the business of banking and to establish a banking department for the supervision of such business.'

"The purpose of this proposed legislation is to provide that any bank may pledge qualified assets for the purpose of becoming a depository for postal savings funds under the laws of the United States. The commissioner of the banking department of Michigan calls attention to the necessity for this legislation. At present state banks may not directly pledge assets as security for postal funds, which compels them to either evade the law or forego the deposits they might otherwise obtain.

"You are authorized and requested to consider legislation by and through which the question of an amendment to the constitution shall be submitted to the electors of Michigan providing for giving and insuring the right of suffrage to the women of Michigan.

"You are authorized and requested to consider legislation by and through which the question of amendments to the constitution shall be submitted to the electors of Michigan providing for the initiative, referendum and recall.

CHASE S. OSBORN, Governor.

ROALD AMUNDSEN FINDS SOUTH POLE

Denies Telegraphing Anything Regarding Scott.

Two of the Christiania, Norway, local newspapers received dispatches from Captain Roald Amundsen, announcing that he reached the south pole on Dec. 14, 1911. The dispatches were sent from Hobart, Tasmania, and read:

"Pole reached fourteenth-seventeenth December."

This evidently means that he remained three days in the vicinity of the pole, probably for the purpose of taking accurate observations as to his position. A cablegram received from Hobart, Tasmania, says:

"Captain Amundsen denies having telegraphed anything regarding Captain Robert F. Scott or the British expedition.

"Captain Amundsen, up to the present, is the only member of the antarctic expedition who has landed from the Fram. No one is allowed to go on board the vessel under any pretext whatever. The explorer says he is pleased with the results of his expedition, but otherwise maintains silence on the subject.

"Captain Amundsen intends to stay at Hobart for a few days. He will then go to Australia and give a few lectures there, afterward departing for Europe by the circuitous route of Buenos Aires, then round Cape Horn, up the Bering straits and through the Northwest passage and the Arctic ocean."

The confirmation of Captain Amundsen's attainment of the south pole on Dec. 14, 1911, received from the explorer himself at Hobart, Tasmania, sets at rest the conflicting reports current on the subject.

A dispatch published by the Daily Express in London dated Wellington, New Zealand, declared that Amundsen had stated that Scott had reached the south pole.

It was assumed that this declaration indicated that Amundsen himself had not succeeded in attaining the object of his expedition, and credit was generally given to the British explorer.

Nothing has hitherto been heard from Scott and Amundsen now denies that he telegraphed anything referring to his British rival.

The honor for the achievement of reaching the south pole must now be given to the Norwegian explorer until Captain Scott announces the result of his expedition.

WOMEN DIE IN WRECK

Two Were Killed In Smash-up Near Lebanon, Ind.

Two of the victims killed by derailing of the Continental limited on the Wabash road near Lebanon, Ind., were women. They were Mrs. U. G. Good, bound from Fort Wayne to St. Louis, and Mrs. R. S. Grant of Adrian, Mich. The other victims were not identified. One was a porter. Many persons were injured, some of whom may die.

Passengers were preparing to eat dinner as the train approached the Redwood bridge, near the Illinois state line. Without a jolt, at first, the whole train seemed to weave to one side, and then the coaches rolled, crushed together, and piled up alongside the track. The baggage and mail cars suffered the most, as they led the rest of the train from the track.

Nearly every passenger in the train was hurt by the rolling over of the cars.

SIX PERISH IN A FIRE

Fierce Flames Break Out in a Rooming House.

At Chicago Saturday at least six persons lost their lives and scores of others barely escaped by leaping from windows into nets held by firemen or dashing down burning stairways in a fire which destroyed the Barnett hotel, a lodging house at 651 South Clark street.

The people who were killed were trapped by the flames, like so many flies in a bottle, on the third floor of the burning structure.

Women—there were many of them in the hotel—screamed and ran to the stairways, where they found escape cut off. Men shouted and cursed and some of them climbed out of windows and hung, until their fingers bled, to the window ledges to escape the heat. One man, Thomas McMahon, jumped from the fourth floor. His body struck some wires, and, turning over and over, it was dashed against the curb below. He died almost instantly.

The burning building was but a few doors south of the South Clark street police station. A panic ensued among the prisoners in the station. The police hurriedly handcuffed the prisoners and rushed them out of the building to places of safety.

THREE FIREMEN HURT

Apparatus Is Upset to Avoid Striking Petoskey Pedestrians.

Petoskey, Mich., March 12.—In order to save the lives of two women who were crossing the street Driver Herman Fetz, of Fire Company No. 1, turned while going at a rapid pace to a fire and overturned the rig, injuring himself slightly and bruising Edward and Reuben Sears, who were riding with him.

The horses ran away and were injured when they struck a telegraph pole. Company No. 2 was called to the blaze on the roof of the P. Middleditch residence, which was extinguished with slight damage.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GREAT PAINTER'S EARLY DAYS

Ziem Was a Tailor's Assistant, and Worked His Way to Italy to Study.

Ziem, sitting cross-legged on a table beside a window, worked as a tailor's assistant for several years. His life was thrown into a new channel by the arrival in the courtyard of an Italian family in which there was a handsome, auburn-haired girl, who sang as a ballad singer. The father played a hurdy-gurdy, the mother made lace, and a boy performed divers gymnastic feats. The girl had a fine voice. Her father wanted a new coat and asked the elder Ziem to make it and Mme. Ziem to take in a part of the family as lodgers. She took in the boy and girl.

The latter lifted the future painter out of himself with her Venetian songs and accounts of the glorious city to which she hoped soon to return. Her name was Caterina. When she went away Ziem felt miserable. He lost spirit and could not shake off the sort of paralysis that had seized on all his faculties. At last he determined—with the help of his needle and his talent, as he thought, of portrait painter and violinist—to make his way to Venice. They answered to his hopes of going down by water to Marseilles, for he knew no geography, and thence to Rome.

It would be now curious to see the portraits of Saone and Rhone captains of barges, wine and wood rafts that he did for them in lieu of passage money. In Rome he got in with painters and tourists. The former helped him to enlarge his artistic culture, and the latter took him about as a guide. But Caterina and Venice lay on his heart, and he took the bold resolution of going on foot to the city of his dreams. He so fell in love with it the first day he went on the Lido that he did not break his heart when he heard that Caterina had not turned up, but had gone to Paris to serve as a model.

For Children to Know.

Just as soon as he can toddle out of doors teach your little boy his name and address. If he can say "I'm Johnnie Jones, 1378 Amsterdam avenue," it may save you hours of nervous agitation when searching for a lost Johnnie one of these days.

Teach Johnnie that a boy's best friend out of doors is a policeman. Say, "Oh! look at that nice man. If my little Johnnie ever got lost that kind man would take him to a cozy little room, and more kind policemen to play with, and Johnnie would wait there and have a lovely time till mother came for him."

Many a poor mite has gone into paroxysms when he wandered away from home and had to be taken charge of by the very policeman who had been the bogey man of his babyhood. Remember that the police are friends and guardians of lost babies, and, if you are so foolish as to bring up your children by fear, find some other threat than that of bringing the policeman to take them away when they are naughty.

PETOSKEY—As he was lying in a critical condition in his bed, George W. Barnes, an invalid, awoke strangling from smoke which filled his home. He was carried to Lockwood hospital, where he rallied. Firemen put the blaze under control with good work and saved most of the home. The fire started from an overheated stove.

GRAND RAPIDS—Directly after a conference between Prosecuting Attorney Phelps and Frank W. Hine, attorney for the Maryland company that was surety on the bonds of Kyrn Vant Hof, the defaulting manager of the Kent State bank's west side branch, a warrant was issued for Vant Hof's arrest on the charge of forgery.

Illinois Defeated by Indiana.

Bloomington, Ill., March 11.—In the fourteenth triangular debate between Indiana and Illinois universities Indiana won, discussing the subject: "Resolved, That the Initiative and Referendum Should Be Introduced in Our State Governments." Measles in Hope College.

Holland, Mich., Feb. 20. — Measles has broken out among the students of Hope college and several of the boys and girls have been quarantined. Two members of the faculty and Stegenga, Hope's basket ball center, are also among the victims. Every precaution is being taken to prevent an epidemic.

CADILLAC—A warrant has just been issued by Prosecutor Maltner of Lake City for the arrest of Myron Fuller, taken into custody at Mt. Pleasant on suspicion of having assaulted William Frasher near Jennings Saturday morning. Fuller will be charged with murder in the first degree. He is now in the Missaukee county jail.

Tennis Player Killed by Train.

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 5.—Miss Elsie Little, the noted New York tennis player, was struck and killed by a train.

French Girl Aviator Killed.

Paris, March 11.—Suzanne Bernard, a nineteen-year-old girl, who was qualifying at Etampes in a third test for an air pilot's license, fell with her biplane a distance of sixty yards and was horribly crushed. She died ten minutes afterwards.

Diamonds From Sugar.

It can be stated with perfect truth that a lump of sugar may be turned into diamonds. Not all the substance of the sugar, of course, will enter into the composition of the gem, but only the carbon that it contains. Sugar consists of carbon united with oxygen and hydrogen. The carbon can be easily separated out, and in certain experiments for the production of diamonds this sugar carbon has been employed. The diamonds so produced were, of course, very small and destitute of commercial value, but still they are real diamonds, and the chemical result achieved would be no greater intrinsically if they were as large as the Kohinoor. The hope has often been held out that an improvement in the process of manufacturing diamonds may be effected whereby the necessity of dissolving the carbon in molten iron may be dispensed with, and the required combination of great pressure with great heat may be brought about by some such operation as squeezing the carbon between red hot metal plates.

DR. SAMUEL CATLIN

Dr. Samuel Catlin passed away Thursday morning at the age of 94 years, Funeral at 2:00 p. m. Saturday at the home, burial private. The body will lie in state from 12 M. until 1 o'clock,

Dr. Samuel Catlin was one of the oldest physician in Lenawee county and possibly in the state. He was born at Waterbury, Conn., Sept. 3, 1818 spending his youthful days on a farm at Litchfield Hill, Conn. teaching in the winter.

He was the oldest living alumnus of Yale, where he graduated in the medical department in 1857. He came to Tecumseh 60 years ago and practiced medicine for about 50 years, retiring from active work about ten years ago, being to feeble to continue the work.

He kept in touch with the times and at the age of 75 went to Chicago where he and his wife took a course in electric therapeutics. He was the first physician to practic electrial surgery in Michigan.

Dr Catlin was a surgeon in Rosacrans division in the Union army in the Civil war, and was always a prominent figure in this section of the state. Of all the physicians who were here 60 years ago, he is the last to go.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hattie Catlin and a son Dr. Burt Catlin a prominent physician of Grand Rapids, Mich.

AS TOASTMASTER

Gen Fred B. Wood was in attendance at the first annual banquet of the Lenawee County Bar Association held in Adrian, on Monday evening March 11, and acted as toastmaster for the occasion.

Quoting from the Adrian Times we read, "General Wood made an excellent toastmaster, and from the number of anecdotes he related and the witty stories he told, it would seem that the doughty Tecumsehian was an inexhaustable fountain of humorous lore."

The banquet was a great success, "From the invocation at the beginning, to the silent toast to the honored dead, the attention of every guest was occupied and not a dull moment was allowed to creep in."

FARMERS' UNION

RESOLUTIONS OF THE DETROIT TRUST COMPANY AT THEIR MEETING MARCH 5.

The death of Lucius Lilley, of Tecumseh, removes from the profession of banking in Michigan one of its oldest, most respected and most honored members.

He was known throughout the State as a sane and conservative banker, whose methods, principles and ideals are well worthy of imitation by the younger generation of his brethren in the profession. He adhered closely in the conduct of the affairs of his financial institution, to the simple and fundamental rules of good banking.

His long life of nearly ninety years was employed in useful and beneficient service to his fellow men. His business life, conspicuous for its strict integrity and rugged honestly, was a powerful inspiration to those with whom he came into contact, and among whom he lived. He was a valued advisor and a confidential friend, whose loss will be severely felt in his home community.

His was a lovable character, which drew to him men and women from all walks in life. His cheerful temperament, unfailing sense of humor, and optimistic outlook, especially endeared him to friends and acquaintances.

Lucius Lilley was one of the original stockholders and directors of the Detroit Trust Company, serving in the latter capacity continuously until his death, His high standing in the State his widely known reputation for probity and conservatism have been sources of great strength to the Company.

The Directors and Officers of the Company, in adopting this memorial wish to place on record an expression of their appreciation of his long service to the Company, of their high regard for his character, and of the personal loss which they have sustained.

To the members of Mr. Lilley's family, his associates on the Board, and the Officers of the Company, convey their sympathy, and express the hope that the memory of his honorable career, of his high standing in his profession, and of his lovable and upright character, will be a source of lasting comfort to them,

MRS. A. J. STITT

Mrs. Angeline Stitt, who has been ill for the last eighteen weeks died Sunday evening about 6 o'clock. Mrs. Stitt was born Dec. 12, 1834. She was united in Marriage to Andrew J. Stitt Feb. 17, 1858, settleing on the farm in Tecumseh where she died and where her entire married life had been spent.

Mr. Stitt died in 1872. To them were born four children one daughter and three sons, the daughter died in 1883, the son's Fred of Tecumseh and Edward and Byron of Hitchcock, S. D, who came home two weeks ago, called by their mothers serious condition. The funeral was held Tuesday at the home, Rev. Blanche Young her former pastor officiating.

A BALD HEADED WOMAN

Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness and success. Yet, right here in Tecumseh, there are hundreds of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break, and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will not cost the user anything

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer You will be well repaid for your visit to our store Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic touble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 325 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.509 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists.

EARLY RISERS
The famous little pills.

Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP
KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

HOPE TO RESTORE HER VOICE

St. Louis Physicians Are Trying Suggestive Therapeutics on Young Girl Who Cannot Speak.

By humoring her in the belief that she has a sore throat and a pain in her lungs, surgeons at the city hospital hope to restore to Miss Ada Decker, seventeen years old, the use of her voice, which she has lost. The treatment is termed by the doctors, "Suggestive therapeutics."

"Communication between the brain and the nerves controlling the vocal cords has been temporarily suspended," said Doctor Sewing. "Her voice will not be restored until this communication is re-established. This we hope to do within a few days by means of suggestion. We are not giving her medicine, although she thinks we are, and we are agreeing with her that there is something the matter with her throat and lungs, despite the fact that they are perfectly healthy.

"Her voice may be restored as suddenly as it was taken. A moment's excitement, a slight shock, and the brain will again communicate with the vocal organs, and she will be able to speak as well as she ever did."—St. Louis Times.

Kind Superintendent.

A New Yorker whose business interests frequently take him to one of our southwestern states tells of an incident at a railway junction when he found himself very hungry, but with only two minutes to spare before his train left.

"Give me a sandwich and some coffee right away!" he exclaimed to the man behind the lunch counter. "I haven't time for anything else!"

"Take all the time you want, friend," said the man behind the counter. "Jest have a look at this bill of fare, and I'll 'phone to the superintendent to delay the train a little while."

"What? Hold up the train while I eat!" demanded the amazed traveler.

"Sure thing!" responded the man behind the counter. "This is a branch road, and no other train coming or going over it this morning, and the superintendent would want you to have a good meal. He owns this lunchroom."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich. says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

New Yorkers and "the West."

If we lived in New York we could easily settle the question which is said to be disturbing the minds of the western governors—as to what is the dividing line between the east and the west. Everybody in New York knows that it is the Hudson river.—Wheeling Register.

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are of known composition. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

POLICE PROBE ENDS

Sixteen Commanding Officers in Chicago Lose Their Jobs.

Seven of Chicago's big policemen were discharged and nine others were fined by the city civil service commission in its final verdict as a result of the trials growing out of the investigation of police protected vice. This brings the total discharges from the force since the beginning of the inquiry last September up to twenty-seven. Of these, sixteen were commanding officers.

The force has lost five of the eight old inspectors, all reduced to captains. Eleven captains and lieutenants have quit the department.

REBELS IN CHIHUAHUA

Mexican Insurrectos Control the Entire State.

Rebels now control the entire state of Chihuahua. Colonel Pancho Villa and his federal forces are still in the state, but so out-numbered as to be ineffective.

The column under Salazar and Campa has moved here from Juarez and with Orozco's men is in camp at the edge of the city. All saloons have been closed by order of Orozco. An immense crowd welcomed the forces from the north.

Under Orozco's immediate command are 600 former government troops. The rebel generals declare that the numerous volunteers who are offering themselves will soon swell their force to 5,000 men, who will be taken south to take control of Durango, Torreon and all other towns between here and the City of Mexico.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

PETOSKEY—The city of Petoskey and vicinity were shaken by an explosion which was at first thought to be an earthquake, but later was learned to be the result of an accident at Bay Shore, eight miles from here. Some workmen were attempting to thaw dynamite and in so doing set fire to the shed in which it was kept, causing the explosion of 500 pounds. Windows in the vicinity of the explosion were shattered and ice was broken in Little Traverse bay, but no lives were lost and no serious injury was inflicted to the workmen, whose escape is considered remarkable.

LANSING—According to the monthly crop report, just issued, wheat did not suffer to any great extent during February. Eighty-five correspondents claim wheat was damaged somewhat last month, while 553 expressed the opinion that the crop had not suffered. The total number of bushels of wheat marketed by farmers in February at 107 flouring mills and grain elevators is 553,691. The amount of wheat yet remaining in the possession of the growers is estimated at 4,428,000 bushels. Sixty-seven mills elevators and grain dealers report no grain purchased in February.

DETROIT—Judge Alexis C. Angell, who is the son of President Emeritus James B. Angell of the University of Michigan, said that he was seriously considering resigning his position on the federal bench here. He was appointed in February, 1911. Previously he had praticed law in Detroit since his graduation from the University of Michigan in 1880. He would not discuss his reasons for his contemplated action, but his friends say that he finds the confinement necessary to the work too great a strain on his health. He is fifty-five years old.

LANSING—There was an important conference of representatives of several power companies with the state railroad commission to determine some uniform rate to be charged for power and light, and a representative from each of the following companies will be appointed to frame a tariff to be submitted to the commission: Commonwealth Power company, Detroit Edison company, Grand Rapids and Muskegon Power company and Benton Harbor-St. Joseph Railway and Power company.

TRAVERSE CITY—Inquiry shows the fruit buds in the counties surrounding this city are in fairly good condition despite the extreme cold weather; at least such is the report made as a result of a careful inquiry. Outside of some damage done to peach buds in the low lands and to sweet cherries here and there, the fruit crop for 1912 promises to be good. In the low places, not only the buds have been killed, but in some instances the wood has been affected.

CADILLAC—Mrs. Eliza Shaw, who was one of the aged inmates of the county home, who suffered considerable from exposure when she was unintentionally left in a snow bank some time during the fire, is being cared for at the home of her son. The other inmates are now at Mrs. Fales' boarding house at Manton. The poor commissioners are likely to recommend the erection of a new building

ANN ARBOR—A good roads association has just been organized in this county at a public meeting in the courthouse, attended by more than 150 men from all over the county. Henry Platt of Ypsilanti, was elected president, and N. P. Hull of Saline, vice president. Register of Deeds H. J. Abbott was made secretary, and W. J. Booth, president of the State Savings bank, was elected treasurer.

FLAT ROCK—After a continuous run of depositors to draw out their money and place it in new bank here, the Bank of Flat Rock, a private institution conducted by G. H. Retan, closed its doors. The bank was capitalized at $5,000, and was the only one in the village until the new State Savings bank was opened Monday. No figures as to the assets and liabilities of the closed bank are given out.

PETOSKEY—The last will of Mrs. Mary J. Coon, a resident of Harbor Springs, was held valid by Judge Shepherd, who was acting in probate because Judge Deuel was a witness in the case. Samuel E. Gardner of St. Johns contested the will on the grounds that Mrs. Coon, his grandmother, had been mentally incompetent. He was cut off in the will with $1.

KALAMAZOO—Edwin J. Mather, who is the athletic director of Kalamazoo college, will soon wed Miss Margaret Bates of Chicago according to an announcement. The coming wedding is the result of a romance started at Lake Forest, the admiration of Miss Bates for the star football player resulting in their acquaintance.

LAPEER—Little Gertrude Adams, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams, died from the effects of drinking laudanum. Doctors worked for several hours, but to no avail.

SAGINAW—Fred W. Culver, a druggist of Saginaw, pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license in the circuit court, and was fined $100 by Judge Gage.

KNIFE REFORMS CONVICT

"Lifer" Who Has Served 22 Years in Michigan Prison to Be Freed.

Marquette, Mich., March 12.—As the result of a surgical operation, which completely changed the character of Raymond Holzhay, who has been a convict in the state prison here for more than twenty-two years, he will be released on parole in November, 1913. Holzhay was sentenced for life for murdering a banker.

When Holzhay was brought here he had a black record as a stage coach and train robber, but since he was operated on he has been a model prisoner and has become a student. He is the last of 1,000 convicts who were in the penitentiary when he was brought here.

His parole in November, 1913, is made possible as a result of legislation enacted at Lansing last winter, which extends the benefits of the parole law to convicts undergoing life sentence. Holzhay is forty-five years old.

HOW WEAK WOMEN

May Be Made Strong at Small Expense and No Risk

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity, weak, thin, run-down, tired out and nervous. Such women need Vinol just as much as did Mrs. Jane Pepper, of 2307 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal., who says:

"I have used Vinol for some time with particularly gratifying results. I was run down, weak and debilitated, and my appetite was gone. After taking several bottles of Vinol I found my condition greatly improved, and do not hesitate to recommend Vinol to anyone similarly affected."

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, but a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in thebank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

CLEVELAND IS HONORED

75th Anniversary Marked by Memorial Meeting.

New York, March 18. — The great hall of the City College, spacious as it is, was not commodious enough to accommodate half the people who went there to honor the memory of Grover Cleveland. Hundreds were turned away. Many waited for hours on the chance of being seated.

The exercises commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birth of Mr. Cleveland attracted a number of distinguished men who were intimate and long time friends of the late ex-president. Charles S. Fairchild, who was secretary of the treasury in Mr. Cleveland's first administration, was chairman of the meeting. Eulogies were delivered by Hillary S. Herbert, who was secretary of the navy in Mr. Cleveland's second cabinet; President Schurman of Cornell; Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, who was Mr. Cleveland's physician and one of his closet friends; President Hibben of Princeton and Congressman Hardwick of Georgia.

Mrs. Cleveland, obviously in excellent health and retaining much of the beauty and charm for which she was celebrated as the young first lady of the land, occupied a seat in the front row with a party of friends, which included Mrs. John H. Finley, the wife of the president of the City College, and Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont.

SLAYERS GET TERMS

Murderers of Mrs. Kaufman Sentenced to Penitentiary.

Chicago, March 18.—The four automobile bandits who shot and killed Mrs. Hattie Kaufman, 665 Roscoe street, near her home on the night of Dec 2 last were sentenced by Judge George Kersten. Those sentenced are:

John Stacey, twenty-three years old, twenty-five years' imprisonment.

Fred Boneham, twenty-one years old, twenty-five years' imprisonment.

Boneham pleaded guilty before the trial of his companions, throwing himself upon the mercy of the court. Judge Kersten, in passing sentence on Boneham, guided himself by the verdict of the jury as to Stacey and Channell.

JUDGE ROSALSKY

GETS A BOMB BY MAIL

Life of Judge Who Sentenced Brandt Is Threatened.

Jurist's Library Is Wrecked and Inspector Badly Injured by Explosion.

New York, March 18.—An attempt to kill Judge Otto A. Rosalsky of the court of general sessions with a bomb came within a hair's breadth of being successful.

It was only a defect—said to be a small accumulation of dirt—in the mechanism of the infernal machine, which the justice had unsuspectedly opened, that saved him from probable death or certain injury.

The bomb later exploded while being examined by Inspector Owen Egan of the bureau of combustibles, seriously injuring the official about the face and hands. The library of the apartment was wrecked.

It was Judge Rosalsky who sentenced Brandt to a thirty-year term for burglary at Mortimer L. Schiff's home in 1907, and who recently reversed his action.

SAILS FOR VENEZUELA

Secretary Knox Leaves Porto Barrios, Guatamala.

President Cabrera Entertains Americans and Prophesies Closer Relations Soon.

Guatamela, March 18. — President Cabrera of Guatemala gave a dinner in honor of Secretary of State Knox and the other members of his party. Mr. Knox in a speech warned Guatemala that the United States will insist upon the faithful observance of the Washington conventions, which provide for the peace and stability of the Central American republics through no meddling by foreign powers and the neutrality of the various states.

President Cabrera in an interview with the correspondents who are accompanying Mr. Knox declared that Guatemala was the best friend of the United States in Central America and would welcome the introduction of American capital. A sound currency, he said, was coming in this country. The president predicted the establishment of a Central American union after the various republics were drawn closer together by the Panama canal and there were better means of communication.

OBJECT TO "RED DEVIL"

Members of Bloomington, Ind., W. C. T. U. Want Name Altered.

Bloomington, Ind., March 18.—A resolution was adopted by the W. C. T. U., a copy of which will be sent to Chicago to President Fairfax Harrison of the Monon, protesting against the name "The Red Devil" given the new French Lick-West Baden train, which was placed in service two weeks ago.

The union holds that the name is offensive and the officials will be asked to change it.

GETS $3 ON $1,300 INVESTED

Woman Testifies to Loss Through Lewis Publishing Company.

St. Louis, March 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth A. Webster of Emerson, Neb., testifying in the trial of E. G. Lewis in the United States court on charges of using the mails to defraud, said she invested $1,210 in the Lewis Publishing company's 7 per cent notes.

Of these $900 were of the unsecured issue. She also bought $120 of the preferred stock. All she ever received in return, she said, was $3.

NICARAGUA ASKS THAT WE HASTEN

Desires Early Ratification of Financial Convention.

MAKES REQUEST OF SEC. KNOX

Central American Country Is Trying to Put Its Internal Affairs and Finances on Safe and Sound Basis.

Washington, March 18.—While Secretary of State Knox was in Nicaragua the officials of that government appealed to him to hasten the ratification by the United States senate of the financial convention arranged between that country and the United States.

This appeal has been conveyed in a cablegram from Secretary Knox to President Taft, which is made public. This cablegram further says in part:

"After a bloody revolution to overthrow a regime whose cruelty and base tyrannies are not comprehended by our people, Nicaragua is making an earnest effort to reconstruct its government. What we were compelled to do for Cuba, Nicaragua has done for herself, and the United States is in a position to do for Nicaragua what it did for Cuba without expenditure of blood or treasure. While in Nicaragua but one request was made of me and that by all classes of people: 'Help it to maintain peace.' Contentment and repose, they are confident, will follow a revival of business.

"Rumors of unpleasant incidents connected with my visit are uniformly false. As in all of the countries that I have visited, so here my reception by the president, by all branches of the government and by the people of Nicaragua has been most cordial and no unpleasant incident has occurred to mar it."

Some time ago announcement was made of the loan to be made under the protection of the convention. Brown Brothers & Co. of New York and Philadelphia, and J and W. Seligman of New York have agreed to loan Nicaragua $15,000,000. This loan is planned for the purpose of reforming the currency and tax collections of the country, the assumption of the foreign debt, which has been scaled down, and the war claims pending against the country as a result of the war that overthrew the Zelaya regime.

ALLEN GANG IS FREE AND LIVELY

Outlaws and Followers in a Safe Refuge.

"DEVIL DEN" IN BLUE RIDGE

Capture of Men Who Killed Virginia Court Officials Is Difficult and Likely to Take Indefinite Time.

Hillsville, Va., March 18.—The Allens, with the exception of the two who were arrested on the day of the Carroll county court murders, are still free and very much alive.

After a day of reconnoitering on the part of the state forces, night found the outlaws, with their followers, still safely hidden near "Devil Den," on the east of the Blue Ridge range. After a day's scouting on the part of the mountaineer detectives and the posse of deputy sheriffs it was acknowledged that the murderers and their supporters could remain in the thickly wooded mountains indefinitely and that their capture, edad or alive, is likely to be accomplished only by tedious efforts.

Yet the outlaws are still moving about with extraordinary daring. Instead of remaining in their stronghold on the crest of the mountain near the North Carolina line, the Allens, led by Sid, dropped down out of the mountain cover and, it is said, visited the house of Jack Allen in the Fancy Gap region. Later Sid Edwards, a member of the gang, showed up in the open. A posse of fourteen detectives struck his troll in the foothills. Several members of the searching party followed the trail toward the summit. The hunting party when last heard from was about eighteen miles from the town.

Jack Allen, at whose home the outlaws met, is a brother of Floyd and Sid. He has the reputation of being the most dangerous Allen of the lot.

The Baldwin-Felts detectives heard that this meeting of the Allens at Jack's was a conference for the purpose of determining a plan of action. This conference is supposed to have been going on at the very moment that the posse was advancing on Sid Allen's home, only to find it deserted. If the posse had continued on to Jack Allen's, a few miles farther up the mountain, they would have stumbled on the gang.

The Baldwin-Felts detectives are as familiar with the mountains as the Allens themselves. It is a case of mountaineer against mountaineer, and for this reason alone no pitched battle is looke for. Detectives will continue cautiously on their quest, if possible picking off one member of the gang at a time.

ROSEWATER WILL SUCCEED J. F. HILL

Omaha Editor to Be Republican National Committee Head.

LATTER IS DEAD IN BOSTON

Selection of Mr. Rosewater Is According to Precedent, and He Will Serve Until National Convention in June.

New York, March 18.—The chairmanship of the Republican national committee, made vacant by the death of John Fremont Hill, will be filled, up to the time of the national convention at least, by Vice Chairman Victor Rosewater, editor and proprietor of the Omaha Bee of Omaha, Neb.

Announcement of Mr. Rosewater's appointment was made by William Hayward, secretary, who was formerly the Nebraska member of the national committee. Mr. Hayward said the selection of Mr. Rosewater was according to precedent and that no special meeting of the national committee would be called to elect a permanent chairman.

Mr. Rosewater is a native of Omaha, and is forty-one years old. He began his newspaper career in that city on the Bee in 1893, and since 1906 he has been editor of that publication.

His entrance into national politics dates from 1908, when he was selected as delegate at large to the Republican national convention from Nebraska, and since 1908 he has been the representative from his state on the Republican national committee.

DEATH OF JOHN F. HILL

Chairman of Republican National Committee Passes Away Suddenly.

Boston, March, 18.—John F. Hill, ex-governor of Maine, chairman of the republican national committee, died suddenly in this city.

Mr. Hill was born in Augusta, Me., fifty years ago. He was educated to be a physician, but early in life gave up practice for politics.

In 1892 he was elected to the Maine legislature and served two terms. He was a presidential elector in 1896 when McKinley was nominated for the presidency.

JOHN F. HILL.

In 1900 he was elected governor by 33,000 majority, and he was re-elected in 1902.

As a business man Mr. Hill was successful. He was largely interested in the development of electric railroads in Maine and in other traction enterprises.

ADMIRAL MELVILLE DEAD

Was Hero in Civil War and Also in Arctic Expeditions.

Philadelphia, March 18. — Rear Admiral George W. Melville, retired, engineer in chief of the United States navy, died here at the age of seventy-one years.

"The good gray chief of the navy" has ended this life—an existence interspersed with the most daring adventure, which made him a hero in the Civil War, and a national figure since. In the Tigress, and in the Jeanette, as engineer, he participated in two of the earliest and most intrepid polar dashes.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Talking Cat

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

It had been a marriage of love between Edward Chalmers and Irene Hope, but there had been a sting or two in the courtship. Neither one would have admitted to an atom of jealously in their make-up, but each had betrayed it. The husband had been a popular young man, and the wife had had many admirers. They hadn't been jealous enough to quarrel, but the feeling had not been quite dissipated.

Before six months were up Mr. Chalmers came home from the insurance office where he worked, and swore. He had been bullied by his superior, and he said "damn it!" in plain, unmistakable English. The young wife ought to have realized as a girl that there are times when all men swear, and to have been prepared, but it hit her a surprising blow. She began to cry at once.

Mr. Chalmers having arrived at the age of twenty-four and having a bowing acquaintance with at least 50 women, ranging from old married women to girls in short dresses, should have realized that no wife cries in order to irritate her husband. They weep because the dressmaker disappointed them, or because the latest thing in hats doesn't become them. They have been known to sob over the erroneous idea that this is a sad old world. Mr. Chalmers wasn't posted on this point, and therefore when the wife wept he took it as a personal affront. He had been bullied at the office, and now she was rubbing it in on him at home.

All the rest of us could have straightened things out in 15 minutes and then gone to the theater, but this misunderstanding hung on. There were dinner and tears and mental oaths, and romance jumped the fence and disappeared in the bushes. Things might have changed for the better next day but for the god of chance. The wife went to the butcher's to order meat, and on the way met Jerry Simpson.

Jerry was one of her old admirers, but the admiration was all on his side. At any other time he would have been passed with a cold nod. Now it was different. Mrs. Chalmers was mad at her husband. She stopped and shook hands with Jerry and told him how glad she was to see him, and at the end of ten minutes she thought she had done a smart thing.

At lunch hour, when Mr. Chalmers went out for his bite, he met Miss Cator. There was once a report that they were engaged. At any rate, they were pretty good friends. He was glad to see her, because he knew that his bride didn't like her a bit. He was so glad that he asked her to lunch with him, and the bill presented by the waiter took his last nickel.

The Chalmers had a cat. She wasn't anything to boast of as a cat, but good enough to begin housekeeping on.

Mr. Chalmers entered the house with his mind made up not to speak first. All the husbands he had ever talked with had told him that in case of a family row the husband must hold himself as stiff as a poker and make the wife do the kneeling act. Mrs. Chalmers had decided not to rush forward and greet him with a kiss. She might look up as he entered, and if encouraging she might smile, but beyond that it must be a mutual thing. Only two weeks previously her married sister had solemnly said to her:

"Irene, you and Ed will have a quarrel some day."

"Never!"

"It may be your fault and it may be his, but stand on your dignity. Don't be the first to give in. If you do the heel of the tyrant will be on your neck forever."

Well, the tyrant was there with his heel. Just let him try to put it on her proud neck! For a moment he seemed inclined to, and then turned to the cat.

"Well, pussy, it's been a cool day," said Mr. Chalmers.

"Yes, pussy, it has," said the wife.

"And, pussy, you can tell your master that he trotted off this morning without leaving any market money."

It wasn't the case of a person talking through his hat, but talking through his cat. The feline stretched and yawned and purred, and seemed to say: "Oh, cut it out!" but she was held to her job. That evening, for the first time since his marriage, Mr. Chalmers thought of his lodge. Before leaving the house he said to the cat:

"Pussy, I am going to my lodge tonight, and I may not be home much before midnight."

And while Pussy closed her eyes and didn't appear to care a cent where he went or when he got back, the reply came from the wife:

"Pussy, I am going over to see sister, and I may not be back much before one o'clock in the morning."

Mr. Chalmers did not go to his lodge. That was all a bluff. Mrs. Chalmers did not go to her sister's. That was all a bluff to match the other bluff. At the back end of the grounds they occupied was a pond. The former owner of the premises had created it for a fish pond. He had also built a pagoda on its brink. His idea was to sit in that pagoda at evening tide or some other tide and watch the fish swimming about, but before he had done any sitting or watching he had failed in the leather business and lost his property.

When Mr. Chalmers left the house he went to a tobacconists five blocks away and bought some cigars. Then he returned and made for the pagoda and the pond. There was some thinking to be done, and there was the place to do it. If the former owner had done more thinking there he might not have failed. He had just lit up and got comfortably settled down and called himself three kinds of an idiot, when footsteps were heard approaching. The night was not so dark but that he could recognize his wife while yet 20 feet away. She had come out there to sit and think. She scented the cigar smoke and knew that she was forestalled, but she came right on and took a seat on the bench. The cat wasn't there, but the wife spoke up to say:

"Pussy, you can't blame me a bit. I was told that he had that Helen Cator out to lunch. You know I never liked her nor she me. Of course, he did it to spite me."

The husband drew a long puff and cleared his throat and replied:

"Yes, pussy, but what of that idiot Jerry Simpson? She stood talking with him for the best part of an hour yesterday, and right on the street, too. Why, the man doesn't know enough to pound sand, but she laid herself out to be extra charming."

"But Miss Cator once said I'd be good-looking but for my face!"

"And that ass of a Simpson once asked me if I was bow-legged at my birth!"

"Pussy, the husband always begins a family row, and he should be the first—"

"Pussy, don't you believe it. A wife with a temper can—"

"And he has gone to his lodge hoping I would cry all the evening!"

"And she has gone to her sister's to get braced up to—"

The cat wasn't there, but the angels were. They folded their wings and reached out their hands and pulled that old pagoda into the old pond. Some folks would have said that the water had undermined the bank and brought about a cave-in, but the angels knew. The water was cold. There was mud with it. There were shouts of alarm—choking—gasping—wading ashore, and then a long, wet and muddy embrace.

"Oh, Eddie dear, what—what—"

"Yes, what fools!"

"And Helen Cator and Jerry Simpson!"

NOT THE WORST DISASTER

Miss Thornton Could Overlook the Soiling of Her Silk Dress on This Occasion.

Miss Thornton, dressed with tasteful precision, chose her seat in the street car with the air of one who is habitually careful of her apparel. She looked with an instant's satisfaction upon the starchy cleanliness of the very little girl beside her, and then turning to the window thought no more of her seatmate until, after a long ride, she became conscious of a moist feeling on her knee.

"Why, what is this?" she asked, with considerable vexation, for it was certainly annoying to discover several large spots on the folds of her cherished silken frock

The child, who had been dozing, woke with a start and gazed with astonishment at the limp handkerchief she was holding, and had been holding during her little nap, over Miss Thornton's dress.

"O, it's all gone!" she exclaimed, with a stifled sob of disappointment.

"What is all gone?" demanded Miss Thornton, dabbing her handkerchief ruefully and a little angrily at the discolored silk. "What were you carrying that made such a muss?"

"It was a big and dandy ice cream peach. It was awful good, I know, but I didn't eat even one tiny bite of it at the settlement party, 'cause I wanted to take it home to mother, for she never even seen one like it, and now it's—it's nothing, and nobody'll ever eat it."

The little girl's tone of hopeless regret suddenly made the ruin of a handsome silk gown seem paltry compared with the tremendous loss of an ice cream peach. Miss Thornton took the small, damp hand in hers and said, in her gentlest voice: "I am quite sure, dear, that we can find another ice cream peach for your mother, or something else—just as big and dandy."—Youth's Companion.

Turkey Thoughts.

H. O. Blaisdell, the world's champion typewriter, was talking to a New York reporter at the Madison Square garden about speed.

"You acquire speed," he said, "only by keeping your mind on it all the time. Your thoughts throughout the year must bear on that one thing as the little boy's thoughts bore on one thing in December.

"The little boy's teacher was giving him a lesson in anatomy. She said:

"'Now, suppose we took the head and the trunk from a body, what would be left'

"The boy, his thoughts concentrated on the Christmas dinner that was approaching, answered:

"'The giblets, ma'am.'"

Already Supplied.

The Caller—Do you need any typewriter supplies, sir?

The Guvnor—Typewriter supplies? No, I've only just bought her a box of chocolates.—Opinion.

Superfluous.

"Can I sell you a fine talking machine, sir?"

"No. I married one."

Rather Poor Excuse.

She—I didn't go to work Friday.
He—Any excuse?
She—Why, I had no clothes to wear.
He—Your boss must be pretty fussy if he'd object to that.

THIS IS THE AGE OF WOMAN

Everywhere She Is Doing Now What Formerly Was Considered the Work of Man.

It may be difficult to tell what is a woman's age, but unquestionably this is it. Men's colleges into which women have made their way have had to drive them out again in order to give the men a chance at graduation honors. From the pulpit and the bar down to the coal mine and the iron furnace women are doing what used to be regarded as man's work. The literature of the day is overwhelmingly feminist in its character and very much of it is the work of women. Men are being told things about women that it was not deemed proper for their fathers to know, and as for themselves, they are being shown up without remorse.

Within a few days illustrations of the feminist revolution, physically and intellectually, have become public. Man is destined to lose even his physical superiority. The superintendent of a hospital in Boston, where 3,000 babies are born annually, says: "We have noticed that girl babies are getting taller and that they are appearing in this world lately with more real vitality than formerly. The boy babies continue on the average, both in weight and height."

One Excuse for Chewing Gum.

After all the sarcastic comments on the chewing-gum habit, it is interesting to note, in the recent issue of "American Medicine," a good word in its favor. Dr. La Grand Kerr writes that one of the most trying problems in infectious diseases of children is to keep the mouth clean, and that many of the secondary infections which occur as a result of infectious diseases in childhood occur because the mouth has not been kept clean. The use of gum is the best relief, because attractive to a child.

Primary Enrollment

Notice is hereby given. That in accordance with act No. 281, Public Acts of 1909, as ammended by Act 279, Public Acts of 1911, the Board of Enrollment of the Township of Tecumseh Precinct No. County of Lenawee, State of Michigan, will be in session at the Council Building on Monday April 1, A. D, 1912, from 7 o'clock A. M, until 5 o'clock P. M of said day, for the purpose of enrolling the names of all persons, members of whatever political party, who make personal application for such enrollment.

How electors can secure enrollment Following is a brief statement of the different ways in which enrollment can be had in townships during the year 1912,

1. By personal application on Enrollment Day, April 1, 1912.

2. By a written request accompanied by affidavit, an elector can enroll any day, but can not vote at any primary held within two months. This affidavit and application must be delivered to the township clerk or other officer in charge of the enrollment books.

3. An elector who was sick or unavoidable absent on enrollment day or who became 21 years of age or an elector after enrollment day can have his name enrolled on primary election day and vote at that election by taking the necessary oath.

4. If an elector who has been duly enrolled as above changes his residence from one precinct in the state to another he can be enrolled in the new precinct by obtaining a proper certificate from a member of the Enrollment Board of the precinct wherein he formerly resided stating that he is duly enrolled in the precinct from which he has moved and is entitled to enrollment in the new Precinct, or by taking oath.

No person can vote at any primary in Michigan unless his name has been enrolled under Act No. 279 Public Acts of 1911.

All enrollment prior to Aug. 2, 1911 is void an entirely new enrollment is required but a person whose name was enrolled Jan. 27th or at any time since Aug. 2 1911, need not enroll again, unless he has changed his residence. April 1 is the last Enrollment Day for 1912, but enrollment can be had any day by request and affidavit, as stated above, but this must be done two months before Aug, 27th to entitle an elector to vote at the General Primary Election on that date.

An elector who neglects or refuses to give the name of his political party cannot have his name enrolled.

Dated this 19th day of March, A D. 1912.

Guy E. Nemire, Clerk of said Township.

Annual Township Meeting

Notice is hereby given to the qualified electors of the township of Tecumseh Precinct No. County of Lenawee, State of Michigan, that the next ensuing Annual Township Meeting will be held at the Council Building within said Township, on Monday April 1, A. D, 1912, at which electio the following officers are to be elected viz:

CHILDREN INJURED

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Complaints

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They may cause griping, nausea and other distressing after effects that are frequently health destroying.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy, which we know, for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity,

Rexall Orderlies commonly completely relieve constipation, except of course when of a surgical character They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Three sizes of packages, 10 cents, 25 cents, and 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Tecumseh only at our store,—The Rexall Store. B. J. Pulver.

Miss Mary Helen Barrett was the little hostess to a group of her young friends Friday afternoon, giving them a St. Patrick entertainment. She was robed in green in honor of the saint, and green was the prevailing color at the table when supper was served. Green bonnets were worn by the little Misses. It was a very merry party and every one in the hotel certainly enjoyed the fun.

Unfortunate Suicide

DESPONDENT OVER CONTINUED POOR HEALTH CHAS. R, CAHILL TAKES CARBOLIC ACID

Tecumseh was much startled Sunday, when the news came of the suicide of Chas. R. Cahill, a barber who has been employed for several years at the barber shop of David Macham.

He was well as usual Sunday morning, and went up town and purchased some candy for his little boy, and presumably the carbolic acid with which he took his life. After dinner he went up stairs for his usual Sunday nap. Later his wife heard a strange sound and going to his room, found him in a dying condition. Mr. Johnson a neighbor was called who forced some milk between his lips, but to no avail. A doctor was also summoned, but nothing could be done to save his life. Mr, Cahill had been in a despondent condition for some time on account of ill health.

He leaves a wife and two children, a boy about four years of age and a young babe of a few months. He was a veteran of the Spanish war, and was a man generally liked among all whom he met. The funeral will be held Wednesday at 9 o'clock a. m. with burial at West Caro, O.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic touble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 325 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.509 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP
KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

There Are Hundreds of Tecumseh People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich. says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great beneit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

Undoubtedly Genuine.

The mistress observed one morning that her dusky butler was wearing a ring with a setting almost large enough for a beacon light, if it had possessed the proper brilliancy. Later in the day she chanced to hear a conversation between the butler and the maid.

"Am dat a genuine dimont yo' is sportin', Jake?" the maid asked, suspicion and hope about equally balanced in her tone.

"Am dis a dimont?" reproachfully. "Does yo' 'spose I'd buy anything else fo' a 'gagement ring? Huh! dis am a dimont an' it am gold what it sets in."

"Ef yo' mean you' bought it fo' me, yo' will have to tell the price 'fo' I'll believe hit's a dimont. I wuz fooled once wid a brass ring, an' I don't mean to be caught again."

"Cose hit's a dimont, Lucy. Hit cost $2.50."

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are of known composition. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

COLDER WEATHER COMING

Present Conditions to Be Followed by Considerable Drop in Temperature.

"The distribution of atmospheric pressure over the continent and the adjacent oceans is such as to indicate generally fair weather with mild temperature during the next several days. A well defined disturbance will overspread the northwestern states about Tuesday or Wednesday, whence it will move eastward and cross the great central valleys Wednesday night or Thursday and the eastern states Thursdap or Friday.

"This disturbance will be attended by local rains and snows in northern and showers and thunder storms in southern districts and will be followed by a change to considerably colder weather, which will make its appearance in the northwest about Wednesday.

Girl Shot at Play.

CHIEF AIDS IN ESCAPE

Nebraska Convicts Flee In Stolen Milk Wagon.

Lincoln, Neb., March 18.—The first trace of the three convicts who escaped from the Nebraska state prison after killing the warden and two assistants last Thursday was found when it was learned that they had stolen a milk wagon and team from a farmer near College View and had compelled a boy to drive them to town on the evening of the prison delivery.

Shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning the wagon stuck in a snow drift near the home of Chief of Police Hunger. The chief was just returning from a search when he saw the wagon stalled in the drift.

The boy told the officer that he was driving to make an early delivery and the chief helped his horses through the drift and headed them up the alley to a paved street. The boy then drove to the railroad tracks in the northern part of the city, where the men got out.

OFFER SHEEP IN SACRIFICE

Animals Killed at Steps of Palace In Constantinople on Feast of Bairam.

The idea of animal sacrifice seems strange in modern Europe. But it must not be forgotten that Constantinople is Turkish, in spite of the numerous desires on the part of other nations to possess it—or rather because those are so numerous.

The new regime in Turkey is up to date in many things. It is establishing schools, planning railroads and hoping to take its place by right, and not by suffrance, among the nations of the world. But the favor of the devout Mussulman is sought by strict observance of religious festivals.

The second feast of Bairam is the occasion of sacrifice. Its date is variable, since the Turkish year is lunar, and not solar. Last year came in December and it lasts four days.

In anticipation of this festival, droves of fat sheep were taken to the city from Roumelia and Asia Minor. The price varied from $4 to $5. In all the rich and even well-to-do houses these sheep were sacrificed, and the flesh in most cases given to the poor.

Naturally the most elaborate ceremony was at the royal palace of Dolma Bagtche. The sheep, picked for their whiteness and plumpness, were solemnly led to the palace. At the hour fixed the sultan, surrounded by his staff, descended the steps and read a prayer, while the first of the victims was led to the marble step that became the sacrifical altar.

The sultan made the motions of killing the sheep, but actually handed the knife to an officer, who waited until the sultan had withdrawn before completing the sacrifice.

In the last three years the custom has grown up that the skins and wool of all the sheep killed in Turkey that day belong to the sailors.

One of the old rites of Bairam was to consign all Christians to massacre. This is now omitted in Constantinople. But it can be imagined that in the oasis of Tripoli this part of the ceremonies is carried out with emphasis.

OLD HOMES ARE GOING FAST

"Before the War" Mansions of the South, With Their Romance, Are Disappearing.

The grand old "before the war" homes, steeped in romance and dear to the heart of the children of the old south, are fast going. Set in a grove of oaks, the big house with its imposing columns, ample verandas and its air of hospitality and cheer, soon will be no more. Some of these old mansions have fallen into wreck and ruin; hundreds have been burned. The surviving ones are relics of an age that is past.

For several years there has been a movement in the south for smaller farms. This movement has been constantly accelerated. And it means much for the welfare of this section. The old plantations were manageable only when labor could be relied upon—and when one person was willing to pass his life in the employment of another.

The south is becoming more utilitarian. Descendants of those cavaliers who charged with Rupert and melted their plate to support the tottering throne of an unworthy Stuart have scanned their lessons well. Life is activity, hurry and turmoil. It still would be an elysian existence forever to loiter in the shade and yell to Pompey for another julep—but it is no longer practicable.

This month will see two of the fine old plantation homes of Barbour county go under the hammer. Historic Roseland and the splendid Pugh estate alike are to be sold. Some of these days when the south gets enormously wealthy again the grand old times may be revived.—Birmingham (Ala.) News.

STRANGE CRATER IN ARIZONA

Geologists Have Offered Several Theories to Account for This Singular Phenomenon.

About forty miles from Flagstaff, Ariz., in the midst of a great plain, there is a saucer-shaped hollow about three-quarters of a mile across and 600 feet deep. The rim of this strange crater rises between 150 and 200 feet above the surrounding plain. Rocky fragments are scattered for several miles around the crater. Among these rocks many fragments of meteoric iron, some containing minute black diamonds, have been found. The inner walls show that the crust of the earth was broken when the crater was formed; yet no volcanic rocks exist there. Geologists have offered several theories to account for this singular phenomenon. One is that an immense meteorite made the hole, and that the meteoric fragments just mentioned are remnants of the falling star. Another theory ascribes the origin of the crater to a tremendous explosion of steam in the rocks beneath, and a third combines the first two by suggesting that the blow of a falling meteor, striking the earth's crust at a point where subterranean water had accumulated in the neighborhood of heated rocks, was the cause of the explosion.

First Woman on English Stage.

January 3 is an important anniversary in the development of the British drama, for upon this date in 1661 Pepys went to the Clare Market theater, saw the "Beggar's Bush" well performed and records, "the first time that I ever saw women come upon the stage."

Previously all female parts had been taken by boys or young men. The change was probably suggested by Charles II. from his continental experience, and arose from an amusing episode. The king had gone to the theater "before his time," and finding the actors not ready, asked for an explanation, whereupon he was gravely information that "the queen has not shaved yet!" As the Merry Monarch loved to laugh at a jest as well as to make one, the excuse was accepted and a reform initiated.

Mourn Saleswoman's Death.

There is mourning in one of the large department stores because of the death of a saleswoman who was probably as well known in New York as any one of the great sisterhood. "Little Ellen," as every one called her because she always retained the name by which she was known when she became an employe of the house thirty-five years ago, was for many years at the head of the glove selling department and had customers by the hundred, who would be served only by her. She knew the sizes of gloves they wore and had many friends among her patrons, for whom she selected gloves when they were small children. At holiday times she was always liberally remembered by them, and her death is regretted as much by them as by her associates and employers.

Sword 3,400 Years Old.

Among several relics of ancient times, including temple reliefs from Abydos and a mummy from Meir, dated about 100 A. D., J. Pierpont Morgan has given the Metropolitan Museum of Art an Assyrian sword, believed to be 3,400 years old. It was found by Colonel Hanbury, an English explorer, about 1875 at Nardin and is said to be the earliest example known.

Frederick Remington's large painting, "A Cavalry Charge on the Southern Plains," has been presented to the museum by several donors, including former Park Commissioner Henry Smith, George A. Hearn, William T. Evans and Augustus Thomas.

Heroism of Women.

It is painful to note that few Carnegie medals go to women. One might infer from this that heroism is exclusively a male characteristic, comments the Philadelphia Inquirer. Fortunately, it isn't so. As a fact most women have to be heroes to get through this world at all. They do things right along which would make a man famous. Some of them exhibit constant heroism by living with men who ought to be in jail or in the tomb. But, aside from such considerations, women have done their share in every branch of heroic effort so far as opportunities opened.

Appeal to National Pride.

The Italian wrestler Bruggilo was proceeding cautiously, says a writer in the Chicago Evening Post. He was feeling his opponent out, stalling him off with various pokes and not showing that daring in attack that the crowd likes. Most of them were silent, but one adviser, seated far away, kept yelling to him to "take a chance." As this seemed to make no impression with repetition, he shouted finally: "Take a chance, you wop lobster. Columbus took a chance."

HOW WEAK WOMEN

May Be Made Strong at Small Expense and No Risk

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity, weak, thin, run-down, tired out and nervous. Such women need Vinol just as much as did Mrs. Jane Pepper, of 2307 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal., who says:

"I have used Vinol for some time with particularly gratifying results. I was run down, weak and debilitated, and my appetite was gone. After taking several bottles of Vinol I found my condition greatly improved, and do not hesitate to recommend Vinol to anyone similarly affected."

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, but a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $81,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

EXPRESS ROBBERS SLAIN

An express messenger named Truesdale balked the robbery of a Southern Pacific train near Sanderson, Tex. He trapped two highwaymen who had held up the train, and killed them.

The robbers boarded the train, No. 9, west bound, a few miles east of Sanderson. The mail and express cars and the locomotive were detached from the passenger coaches.

Then the engineer, under cover of the robbers' guns, was compelled to run two or three coaches ahead of the remainder of the train. One of the robbers took the express messenger, Truesdale, back to the train and kept him under guard, while the other robber covered the crew in the cars ahead, and started to rifle the safe and express boxes.

Truesdale is said to have employed the old ruse of signaling to an imaginary person back of his captor. As the robber turned Truesdale grasped a mallet and before the highwayman could shoot, dashed out his brains.

Then, arming himself with the dead robber's gun, Truesdale awaited for the return of the other bandit. After he had rifled the express boxes the second man returned to the coaches. Stepping from cover, Truesdale killed him. All of the stolen property was recovered and the train proceeded.

WRECK OF MAINE AND ITS DEAD HONORED

Sailors Who Lost Their Lives When the Vessel Was Blown Up in Havana Harbor Will Be Buried in Arlington.

Funeral rites connected with sinking of the battleship Maine and with carrying to their last resting place of the bodies of many of her gallant sailors took place here.

The old battleship was sunk in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico, the smoke of the saluting guns of war vessels serving for a funeral shroud, while with all the pageantry and pomp of national mourning the bodies of the sailors were embarked to be taken back to Washington.

Followed in procession by the president of the Cuban republic and by all the other high dignitaries of Cuba and amid a vast concourse of all classes of Cuban and American citizens, the dead of the Maine were borne on the shoulders of Cuban sailors and artillery men through the streets of Havana.

Cuban infantry lined the sidewalks, on which a great multitude reverently uncovered as the bodies passed from the mortuary chamber in the palace to the side of the harbor. There they were formally placed in the custody of officers of the United States navy.

The caskets were arranged round the walls of the mortuary chapel covered with black and draped with Cuban and American flags.

Until 10 o'clock the bodies lay in state, and a continuous procession passed by to pay their last respects.

As the caskets were borne out a guard of honor saluted and all along the line the salute was continuous until the procession reached the harbor.

The old battleship with her decks hidden beneath great masses of floral offerings and escorted by warships belonging to the United States navy and the Cuban navy, was towed out to sea. Under the salutes of cannon from the Cabanas fortress she proceeded to find her last resting place in the unsounded depths of the Gulf of Mexico.

SAGINAW—Following a thorough search for two days, Sheriff Rimmele succeeded in running down a clew which showed that Marie Jures, the demented Syrian woman who ran away from the poor farm Sunday night, had taken an interurban car from Joslin's Crossing and has gone to Bay City. The Bay City officers have been asked to investigate.

STREET CAR MEN ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Snow Plow Is the Cause of a Peculiar Accident.

Port Huron, Mich., March 18.—Motorman Will Richards and Conductor Ernest Hill were seriously injured and several passengers badly shaken up when one of the city electric railway cars and a large Mt. Clemens line snow plow came toegther in a head-on collision here. The accident occurred on the main tracks of the street car company and within five blocks of the business district.

The two cars were running on separate tracks, the street car running north at the time and the snow plow, with a second snow plow attached to it being southbound. The large plow jumped the tracks when one of its flanges suddenly gave way, and crashed with great force into the front end of the street car, which just happened to be passing. Motorman Richards did not have warning in time to jump and received several deep gashes about his face, head and arms. He was rushed to the city hospital. Conductor Hill happened to be standing in the vestibule of the car, which was completely demolished, and he also sustained cuts and bruises from flying glass and boards.

MUST COLLECT PENALTY

County Treasurer Has No Option in Delinquent City Taxes.

Pontiac, Mich., March 18.—According to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Kuhn, County Treasurer Richardson must add 1 per cent per month to all delinquent city taxes paid to him. The treasurer had refused to do so. The city charter provides that city taxes be paid before Aug. 1, on which date a collection fee of 4 per cent is added. After that there is a further penalty of 1 per cent per month.

On March 1 uncollected state, county and school taxes are returned to the county treasurer and the unpaid taxes are returned at the same time. The 1 per cent per month on city taxes, amounts to 7 per cent at the time they are returned, and altogether, in fees, interest on interest, delinquents who pay city taxes to the county treasurer, must pay at least 12.35 per cent.

W. C. SEIPP A SUICIDE

Well Known Chicago Brewer Takes His Own Life.

At Chicago Monday William C. Seipp, for years one of the leading brewers of Chicago and until 1892 president of the Conrad Seipp Brewing company, the West Side Brewing company and the Chicago Consolidated Brewing and Malting company, shot himself in the head at his home, 1547 Dearborn avenue. He died within a short time.

Mr. Seipp had been in ill health for a time and it is believed he shot himself on that account. His death was reported to the coroner by the Hudson avenue police as that of a suicide.

TO GUARD SETTLERS

Senate Passes Bill Affecting Cheap Land Schemes.

House Holds Up Matter for Further Investigators Following Affirmative Vote in Upper Branch.

Lansing, Mich., March 16.—Without objection the senate passed a bill intended to put a stop to the practice of land speculators using cheap lands of Michigan to float so-called improvement schemes, which cost the state a big bill of expense without adding any real settlers.

The bill provides that all plats in townships outside cities must be approved by the board of supervisors or board of auditors.

It is aimed directly at preventing another "Fruitville Land Improvement company," disposing of thousands of small plats to people who know nothing of the lands which they are buying, as was done with a considerable piece of land in Muskegon county last year at the Chicago land show, when these Fruitvale lots were given away—provided the holder of the coupon would pay for a warranty deed and the recording charged at $3, more than sufficient to yield a neat profit to the speculator for the small bit of land.

The bill passed the senate without trouble, but was held up in the house by reason of the play of some members for time to examine its items. Representative Giles of Muskegon explained the bill was intended to hit "the land sharks."

In the senate both Senator Vanderwerp and Senator Walter urged the passage of the bill for similar reasons and they pointed out that the cost to the state of this process would soon become enormous if the practice is continued, as township boards are not inclined to interfere. It is expected that boards of supervisors will exercise some judgment.

STORM STOPS FUNERALS

Two in Ionia County Delayed Several Days by Blocked Roads.

Ionia, Mich., March 19.—The funerals of Amos Palmer of Orleans and Mrs. Henry Nielson of Ronald, were held, having been postponed several days on account of the storm which made it impossible to get across country to Orleans cemetery.

Word has been received here announcing the death of Joseph A. Rogers in Florida, aged eighty-four. He left Ionia three years ago and was a Civil War veteran with the Twenty-First Michigan Infantry, recruited in Ionia.

TO OPEN LAKE ROUTE

Graham & Morton Will Free City of Traverse, Then Puritan.

Holland, Mich., March 16.—The Graham & Morton Transportation company has everything in readiness for the opening of navigation from this port and as soon as conditions warrant the steamer City of Traverse will open the season as a tri-weekly freight boat between Holland and Chicago.

The steamer Puritan will be placed on the route some time in April and will alternate later in the season with the new steamer City of Grand Rapids.

SLAYS JUDGE AND AIDS

Virginia Mountaineers Kill Five and Wound Others.

With sheriffs of seven counties chasing them over the mountains, seventeen outlaws of the Virginia mountains are endeavoring to make their way into North Carolina after murdering Judge Thornton Massie, of Carroll county circuit court, Commonwealth's Attorney William Foster and Sheriff Lewis Webb, and fatally wounding Dexter Goad, clerk of the court, J. H. Blankenship, a member of the jury and John Mason, a spectator.

It is said three jurors, the clerk of court and several spectators were wounded in the battle that followed the appearance of the mountaineers.

Dexter Goad, clerk of the court, and Juror Douglas, who were wounded during the fighting, have died. This makes a total of five dead up to this time.

Floyd Allen, one of a family of three brothers, who were said to have been engaged in illicit distilling in the Blue Ridge mountains for years, had been arrested and was in Hillsville for trial. There had been reports that an attempt would be made to rescue him, but little attention had been paid to them.

KILLED IN PRISON RIOT

Nebraska Warden, a Deputy and a Guard Shot Dead.

Several convicts in the state penitentiary at Lincoln, Neb., began a riot and killed Warden James Delahunty, Deputy Warden Charles Wagoner and Guard A. G. Heilman.

Keeper Doody, of one of the cellhouses was slightly wounded. The convicts overpowered a guard, seized his gun and with it attacked the penitentiary officers. Delahunty, Wagoner and Heilman were fatally shot and died within half an hour.

When news of the murder reached the state capitol a call was at once sent to police headquarters and a squad of officers left at once for the prison. Company F of the national guard was ordered out to quell the riot.

After a four day pursuit two of the convicts were killed by posses, and the other, Morley, was captured. A farmer named Blount, whom the bandits had pressed into serivce, was also killed.

BOMB FOR UNION MAN

Spokane Labor Leader Escapes Blast Tenants in Peril.

At Spokane, Wash., an explosion of dynamite demolished the residence occupied by H. C. Hitzroth. Hitzroth, his wife and their two small children were asleep in the house at the time, but were unhurt except for bruises.

The house is owned by Joseph Koch, formerly secretary of the Ironworkers' union. He was absent at the time.

At Eau Claire, Wis., at the opening of circuit court the criminal cases against Mrs. Mattie Dietz, Almira, Clarence and Leslie Dietz, charged with intent to kill, which were scheduled for trial here at the present term, were continued to the September term.

BULLETS FIRED AT VICTOR EMMANUEL

Unsuccessful Attempt to Assassinate Italian Ruler.

King Escapes Unhurt, Although One of the Officers of His Majesty's Bodyguard Is Wounded by the Assassin.

At Rome, Italy, Thursday an effort was made to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel. Several shots were fired at the king, but all missed their target and his majesty escaped unhurt. His assailant was arrested. He gave his name as Antonio Dalba.

The king, with Queen Helena, was just leaving the palace on his way to the Pantheon to attend the annual memorial service in honor of his father, King Humbert, who was slain by an assassin at Monza, July 29, 1900, by the anarchist Bresci, who had traveled from the United States to strike down the king for the reactionary policies of his ministers.

There was tremendous excitement in the crowd, which turned on Dalba, a mere youth, and attempted to lynch him. The police finally rescued him from the clutches of the mob.

The king was cool and unruffled amid all the excitement. He continued on his way after only a brief stop and sat through the Pantheon services without a sign of emotion.

The populace handled the assassin so roughly before the police could intervene that the youth was hardly able to speak when he reached the police station. Dalba declared he was an "individualist anarchist."

The procession was passing along the Via Lata when the shots rang out from amid the crowd. The soldiers following the carriage immediately dashed forward and as they did so their commander fell from his horse.

The wounded officer was moved to one side by some of his men while the others dashed up to the royal carriage, where they found the king and queen sitting calm and unmoved. Meanwhile the crowd seized the man who had fired the shots and attempted to lynch him. He was so badly handled that he was scarcely able to answer questions when he was handed over to the police.

The royal procession was scarcely interrupted, but proceeded toward the Pantheon, where the mass for King Humbert was completed without further incident, and after the conclusion of the service the king and queen returned to the Quirinal along the same route.

OCEAN SHIPS IN CRASH

Lives of Hundreds of People Placed in Danger.

Collision between the crowded Peninsular & Oriental liner Oceana and the Gorman bark Pisagua, off Beachy Head, in English channel, placed the lives of hundreds of people in jeopardy.

It was reported that twenty women had been drowned, but the Peninsular & Oriental company states officially that no lives have been lost.

The rumor, however, persists that one of the small boats engaged in carrying off passengers capsized and that many were drowned.

CALLS AN EXTRA SESSION

Governor of Wisconsin Asks Legislature to Meet April 30.

Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin has issued a call for an extra session of the legislature, to begin April 30.

Included in the call is the announcement of a primary election April 2, for nominations to fill two vacancies in the senate, and one in the assembly, the election proper to be held April 26.

It is expected the special session will vote aid for the flood-stricken city of Black River Falls, take up water power legislation and grant state aid to strengthen the Portage levee against floods.

Governor Has Another Fire Scare.

At Lansing, Mich., Governor Chase S. Osborn and his family were routed out of their residence here at 2:30 a. m. by fire in the baseemnt of the house. The flames were extinguished, however, before gaining any headway or seriously damaging the house, which is owned by J. V. Barry, former state insurance commissioner. It was the second time within two weeks that the house has been on fire.

Fourteen Killed by Explosion.

At San Antonio, Tex., Monday, four teen men were killed by an explosion of a locomotive boiler in the Southern Pacific roundhouse here. Many others were injured.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

New Yorkers and "the West."

If we lived in New York we could easily settle the question which is said to be disturbing the minds of the western governors—as to what is the dividing line between the east and the west. Everybody in New York knows that it is the Hudson river.—Wheeling Register

Most disfiguring skin eruptions, scrofula, pimples, rashes, ect., are due to impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is a cleansing blood tonic. Makes you clear-eyed, clear brained, clear-skinned.

Most men find it easier to hold a runaway horse than to hold the tongue.

The "Child's Welfare" movement has challenged the attention of thoughtful people everywhere. Mothers are natural supporters, and will find in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a most valuable aid. Coughs and colds that unchecked lead to croup, bronchitis and pneumonia yield quickly to the healing and soothing qualities of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. For sale by all druggists.

Repels Attack of Death

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die with consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." Its folly to suffer with coughs, colds or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest, Price 50 cents and $1.00 Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

C. A. Glossner, 24 Ontario St., Rochester, N. Y., has recovered from a long and severe attack of kidney trouble, his cure being due to Foley Kidney Pills. After detailing his case, he says: "I am only sorry I did not learn sooner of Foley Kidney Pills, in a few day's time my backache completely left me and I felt greatly improved. My kidneys became stronger, dizzy spells left me and I was no longer annoyed at night. I feel 100 per cent better since using Foley Kidney Pills." For sale by all druggists

Comes from Dr. J. T. Curtiss, Dwight, Kan. He writes: I not only have cured bad cases of eczema in my patients with Electric Bitters, but also cured myself by them of the same disease: I feel sure they will benefit any case of eczema." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is a most effective blood purifier. Its an excellent remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Price 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

GRAND DEMONSTRATION

Ferndell Store Goods

The demonstration given Saturday by Aldrich & Son, was one of the finest ever given in Tecumseh. The Ferndell goods making a fine showing every thing in the line of canned goods was open for inspection, and the goods were all they were advertized. The coffee was certainly very good.

The National Biscuit Company Co. also had a fine showing. The store was very prettily arranged in booths, and each one was served in fine order. In the rear of the store Mrs. Pliny Gratz and her aids were serving hot biscuit and butter made from their self rising flour made while you waited. A pleasant afternoon and a good crowd helped to make a good demonstration day.

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

MACCABEE PARTY

The party given Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Uniform Rank of the Maccabees, was quite largely attended and was a most delightful occasion.

The hall was beautifully decorated in honor of St. Patrick and old Ireland the Shamrock being one of the principle decorations. The electric light bulbs were all in green, giving a pretty light for the dancers. A green lattice enclosed the orchestra with a large Shamrock leaf in one of the upper corners.

The dance opened with a grand march led by Mr. and Mrs. E. E Howard, the changes were varied and graceful showing the skill of the leaders. Two-steps, waltzes, square dances and schottisch followed each other in succession to the merry strains of the music, until a late hour. Light refreshments gave an added zest to the occasion. Robert Codling as caller proved himself a success in that line. As the last strains of music died away the crowd dispersed, well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

Seven new members were taken into the Research club Tuesday.

Sometime ago the Research Circle divided itself into two sections, to see which side would have the best attendance and gain the most new members, the leaders were Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Mize, Tuesday the contest closed; Mrs. Mize's side winning by eleven points, the losing side have not decided whether the banquet will be a turkey dinner or tooth picks and crackers, but which ever way they decide, the banquet will be given next Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the home of Miss Mary Whitelock and every member of the circle is urged to be present.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Davis celebrated their 5th wedding anniversary, Saturday March 16. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Osborn, Mr, and Mrs. Geo. Mattis and Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Gygi were the guests present. A fine supper was served.

Later in the evening the neighbors dropped in upon them and the festivities were prolonged until a late hour. Refreshments were again in order, and the guests departed feeling that they had spent a most delightful evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cook were the victims of a surprise party Monday evening; at the home of Mr. and Mrs Mahlon Reynolds where they were spending the evening.

LUNCHEON PARTY

A very pretty one o'clock luncheon was given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Harry S. Moore and Faron S. Anderson at the home of Mrs. Moore.

The house was beautifully decorated, the color scheme being yellow and white,

A delightful four course luncheon was served. Covers being laid for twenty-eight. Yellow daffodils were used as table decorations.

500 was the game of the afternoon Mrs. Wade L. Jones carrying away the prize, The afternoon was a very pleasant one to all,

Mrs. F. D. Rector entertained at dinner Tuesday, Rev. and Mrs. Weld, Mr. and Mrs Leslie Van Doren, Mr. and Mrs Chas Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Boyce and Mr. and Mrs. John Heesen were the guests present. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

Merry Go-Round

Mr. and Mrs. R. S Moore entertained the Merry-go-round at their pleasant home, Monday evening. There were eleven tables at cards, Mrs Wade Jones and Thomas McCann being the lucky prize winners. The out of town guests were Miss May Crego of Brooklyn, and Miss Merle Smith of Coldwater. A two course lunch was served later in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Moore proved themselves most delightful entertainers.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom club were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slayton, on Monday evening.

Mrs. Jennie Law Hardy gave a very highly entertaining talk on her travels through Austria She wore the Montenegrin costume, and several others of the ladies wore different costumes that Mrs. Hardy had brought home with her. The talk was listened to with deep interest.

Some fine singing was interspersed through the evening. Elmer Slayton sang, "The Wearin O' the Green" in fine style. Mrs. Weld gave an exquisite Scotch song which was highly applauded. Mr. Fenn gave a fine solo and also sang "The Marseillaise" the national anthem of the first French Revolution, which he rendered in a very effective manner.

The evening was a most interesting one throughout. Light refreshments were served at the close of the exercises and a few moments were spent in social chat before the guests said good-night to their host and hostess.

ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON

Mrs. J. D. Shull entertained the executive board of the County Federation of Woman's Clubs at one o'clock luncheon; on Wednesday.

The officers present were, President Mrs. J. D. Shull, Secretary, Mrs. Judith Bowen, Adrian, Treasurer, Mrs. Florence Reynolds, Adrian. The Presidents or their representatives from the different Clubs in the County being Vice Presidents of the Federation, and were as follows: Mrs Geo. Luther Bennett, Adrian; Mrs. Binns, Addison; Mrs. Dr. Whitney, Jasper; Mrs. Geo. Freese; Clinton; Miss Florence Frensdorf, Hudson; Mrs. May Keysor, Research; Mrs. John F. Hicks, Monday Club; Mrs. C. A. Wright, Improvement Society.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, A sumptous five course lunch was served, the table decorations of yellow daffodils being very effective.

This meeting was called to make arrangements for the Annual Federation to be held in Adrian on April 30. The afternoon was a most interesting one, and the ladies returned to their homes well pleased with their entertainment,

BIRTHDAY EXTRA

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Marsh was the scene of a lively entertainment Tuesday afternoon, when the little Misses Doris and Dorothy celebrated their 7th birthday. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, and the supper table was made very attractive to the children with a huge birthday cake with 14 candles, seven for each little girl. Pink and green ribbons were carried from the cake to each guest, and a shamrock leaf was the place card.

A two course supper was served to twenty five little folks and their teacher, Miss Bessie Cupples, who had the honor of cutting the cake at the close of the supper. Miss Alma Tansley assisted Mrs. Marsh in serving the supper. Graphaphone music, singing and recitations followed. The little maids received a host of presents from their young friends. Lester Coller took a flash light picture of the merry crowd about 5 o'clock.

TO-NIGHT AT THE ROYAL

Edison, Drama, "Home"
Vitagraph, Comedy, "With Bunny the Funny Man" "Capt. Jenks Dilemma" A good show. 5c to all.

Benevolent Mule.

A farmer once bought a mule at the market and named it Tough Hide, for it looked as if it had been accustomed to more blows than food. He put the animal in his little clover field, and this it seemed to enjoy very much. One morning Tough Hide saw a troop of asses coming down the lane, looking rather thin. He asked them if they would like a nice feed of sweet clover. "Ah, wouldn't we!" brayed the asses.

So the mule with his teeth drew out the staple which fastened the gate and let them in. Soon after the farmer passed by, and saw the animals eating his clover, so he got a cudgel and drove them all out. He not only gave the asses a sound thrashing, but he thrashed Tough Hide as well.

Moral.—Generosity is a good thing, but ought not to be practiced with other people's property.

Place of the Fireless Cooker.

Even in this rich country, only one family in ten can afford to hire a cook, and in the far west such a person is seldom obtainable at any price. Now, by the fireless cooker all women who have to prepare their own meals will be emancipated from the hot-stove slavery, which is particularly cruel in our sultry summers. It makes it possible for them to cook breakfast, luncheon and dinner at the same time, in perhaps an hour, leaving the rest of the day free for other work. Broiling, steaming, stewing, baking, frying, roasting—everything, except crisping and toasting—can be done with these boxes in their most improved styles.—Century

Free Liver Remedy

It is well to stop a physical ailment at the first signs of its approach, and that is especially true of liver trouble, which can eventually give rise to so many serious complications. Many have liver trouble and imagine it is indigestion, and hence take the wrong remedy.

When the liver does not store up sufficient gastric juices it becomes sluggish, and in this way disturbs the stomach and bowels, with which it is supposed to work in harmony. Then comes the sallow complexion, the pimply face, the dull pain in the forehead, the thinning of the blood, etc. A very quick and sensible way to stop the trouble as well as to cure it is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which contains ingredients especially intended to promote the activity of the liver.

Among the many thousands who have written the doctor about the results achieved with his remedy, and who are glad to make the facts public so that others can help themselves, are Mr. Jas. Kennedy, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. S. A. La Rue of Smith's Grove, Ky., and many others.

These, like thousands of others, started the use of Syrup Pepsin with a sample. If you will send your name and address you can also obtain a free trial bottle. This will prove to you that liver trouble is promptly cured with this remedy or money will be refunded. Having tried it you can then buy it in the regular way of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and the latter is sufficient for an entire family.

This remedy is a vast improvement over cathartic tablets and salts, which only do good for the time being. Syrup Pepsin is permanent in its results, is pleasant to take and does not gripe. It is especially good for all those who cannot stand a violent purgative.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, [illegible] Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists.

EARLY RISERS

The famous little pills.

Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE CONTAINING HONEY AND TAR

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Hundreds of Tecumseh People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich. says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches dissapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

Backache

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. After taking your 'Favorite Prescription' for about three months can say that my health was never better."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. Tones and builds up the nerves. Do not permit a dishonest dealer to substitute for this medicine which has a record of 40 years of cures. "No, thank you, I want what I ask for."

MRS. ELIZA GILLETT IS DEAD

Port Huron Loses One of Its Oldest Residents.

Port Huron, Mich., March 18.—The death of one of Port Huron's oldest and best known residents occurred here, when Mrs. Eliza Burton Gillett passed away at the home of her grandson, Frederick Wastell, following an illness of only one week.

She was born in Norwich, Vt., May 3, 1819, and was married at the age of eighteen to the late Martin S. Gillett, who was well known all over the state and who took part in the organization of the village of Port Huron. Mr. Gillett was also postmaster of this city during the administration of Lincoln and served Port Huron in many official ways. The death of Mrs. Gillett comes as a great shock to all of Port Huron, she having been exceeding active and in good health considering her advanced age.

WANT NO CLERICAL CLOTHES

"What did you send these things around to me for?" he asked. "They seem to be in pretty good condition."

"They are in good enough condition," said the missionary, "but they will never be acceptable to the derelicts we expect to distribute them among until the ministerial cut is modified. Every coat in the lot has belonged to a preacher, and its style betrays its ownership.

"Most of the men who apply at the mission for hand-me-downs haven't much pride left, but they balk at a parson's coat. Unless actually driven to it, they will not wear one.

"Clothes twice as badly worn but of a business cut are chosen instead. Most ministers have hard work disposing of their clerical clothes. Conscientious scruples against masquerading in religious garb have nothing to do with these men refusing the ministers' coats. They simply don't want them because they dread the taunts the coats are likely to provoke among their fellows."

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has beeu made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 22nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of Interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having beeu instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows. to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63 folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Most Furs Wear Long With Care.

Most furs are durable, experts say, and will last for a long time if guarded from moths, high temperatures and spring sunshine. A less durable fur is broadtail, as it is taken from young animals. Chinchilla and ermine are also delicate, both in color and texture, and should be carefully treated. Places that make a specialty of storing furs keep them at a uniform winter temperature.

CASE OF THE PACKERS

Closing Arguments Are Begun in the Trial at Chicago.

At Chicago the closing arguments in the trial of the ten Chicago packers began before a jury in the United States District court. Extended arguments will be made by both sides, and it was said that the case would probably not go to the jury before two weeks.

The packers are charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The defense contends that no documentary or verbal evidence was introduced to show that the packers had conspired criminally in restraint of trade.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—The Michigan state railroad commission has signed an order giving the Michigan State Telephone company the right to purchase the Swaverly lines, in the northern part of the state. A few weeks ago the Independent Traffic association, composed of several independent companies, appeared before the commission and argued against the proposed transfer, claiming that the sale would mean the discontinuence of physical connections and that they would eventually be forced out of business. However, representatives of the two factions reached an agreement at a conference here, whereby the Michigan State Telephone company agreed to continue all connections that now exist, and this being satisfactory to both parties and the members of the commission, an order was signed authorizing the sale.

NEWAGO—After having a serious quarrel with his sweetheart, Bertha Burns of this village, Dan Flannigan, aged nineteen, shot himself in stomach and lies in a critical condition. The girl and her mother rushed to Flannigan's bedroom on hearing the report and the former was soon overcome with hysterical sobs. The boy is an orphan of steady habits. He has been visiting his sweetheart's family, with whom he has been on the best terms. No rival is mentioned. It is supposed the boy urged marriage. He gives no reason for the shooting. The girl is very pretty. She was formerly a Bell telephone operator here. Her father is Ed Burns, a factory employe.

MARINE CITY—Young Clarence Hanna, the fifteen-year-old son of Peter Hanna, who had been missing from his home here since Saturday, March 2, has been found. On the day of his disappearance young Hanna started for the Holy Cross church. He was found at the home of a farmer near New Baltimore. The boy wandered away from his home several times on previous occasions, but was never absent for any length of time.

ALLEGAN—Joseph Anderson, who is a well to do Watson farmer, fifty-five years old, committed suicide. He arose, went to the kitchen and shot himself in the stomach with a shotgun, dying instantly. He was a widower and the father of seven children, six of whom lived with him. Anderson left no message to explain his act, but he is believed to have been deranged from a sunstroke last summer.

ALLEGAN—After many weeks of very serious illness, Mrs. N. W. Houser, seventy-nine years old, and for many years a resident of this place, died at her home. Mrs. Austin W. Sherwood, aged eighty, wife of one of Allegan's prominent citizens and resident of this place a great many years, died at the home on Trowbridge street.

DON'T SAY YOU'RE OLD

You Only Feel Old

Digestive organs are weak—don't assimilate food as they used to.

Other organs act more slowly and less effectually.

Blood is thin and sluggish.

Renewal of strength does not equal the wear and tear of your system.

That's what makes you feel old.

Nothing in the world will tone up and invigorate those weak, back-sliding organs, make rich blood and create strength so quickly as Vinol.

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, simply the medicinal elements of the cods' livers, with the useless nauseating oil eliminated, and tonic iron added. Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not make you stronger, feel younger and give you an added interest in life.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

MINERS FIRM ON WAGE QUESTION

May Sacrifice Other Conditions but Not That One.

CONTRARY TO EXPECTATIONS

Bituminous Operators Came to Cleveland in Belief that Present Scale Might Be Extended for Two Years Longer.

Cleveland, O., March 25.—Every hour the miners are becoming more determined on the new policy agreed on Saturday by International President John P. White and President John H. Walker of Illinois.

Several conferences were held later by the leaders and it was found that if the bituminous coal operators wish to avert a strike they must grant some increase in wages. So far as the seven-hour workday, mine run and other propositions are concerned, they will not be pressed. But the one issue of an advance will be fought to the end. It may also be said that an advance of 10 cents a ton and 20 per cent for day labor is not expected. A suitable compromise would be acceptable.

The change in the policy of the miners created a sensation. It is an open secret that the operators came to the Cleveland joint convention last week with the understanding that miners would be willing to agree to recommend to the rank and file that the present wage scale be renewed for two years. They were surprised when the miners refused to accept this plan of averting a strike. When the operators left Saturday for their homes they were still confident that on their return Tuesday they would find the miners in a better frame of mind and ready to renew the present wage scale, and that the officers and policy committee would recommend its adoption by the rank and file.

After the conference of the miners' leaders it was said that President Feehan of the Pittsburg district, whose position has been unknown, had agreed to stand by the other state presidents in an irrevocable demand for an advance.

"We must have concessions on the wage question," said President White of the miners.

STRIKE LEADERS DIFFER

Some Think English Trouble Near End, but Others Do Not.

London, March 25.—Speeches by the leaders of the miners at meetings in many different places confirmed the belief that there is a complete divergence of opinion among them as to the prospect of a settlement of the strike. James Ramsey MacDonald, the leader of the laborite members, said the men's final word was that if the government wanted the bill to settle the strike passed, the minimum scale of 5 shillings a day for adults and 2 shillings for boys must be inserted.

Mr. Smille, an official of the miners' organization, endorsed this. On the other hand Albert Stanley, M. P., secretary of the Midland Miners' Federation, said he believed and hoped that a settlement of the strike was near. He felt sure that some understanding existed which warranted the government in suspending the progress of the bill on Friday and calling for the conference of mine owners and miners.

HYDRO-AEROPLANE TESTS

Accident Mars First Day's Proceedings at Monte Carlo, Monaco.

Monte Carlo, Monaco, March 25.—The hydro-aeroplane competition began here with a great crowd watching the wonderful evolutions of the machines. There was one accident which it was thought at first had resulted fatally, but fortunately this turned out to be a mistake. Colliex, with a passenger and a mechanic aboard, was just alighting when a wave overturned the machine and all three were thrown into the water. They clung to the side of an auto canoe, however, and were rescued.

The weather was favorable for the tests. Paulhan was successful in four tests in alighting and starting in calm and rough water. Hugh Robinson, the American, in a Curtiss Triad, the smallest of the machines entered for the competitions, was equally successful.

FANNY CROSBY'S 92ND BIRTHDAY

Blind Hymn Writer Seems Very Bright and Happy.

DELUGED WITH REMEMBRANCES

Bridgeport, Conn., March 25.—Fanny Crosby, beloved throughout the nation as the "blind hymn writer," was up bright and early to greet the ninety-second anniversary of her birth.

No schoolgirl rejoicing on her sixteenth birthday was in gayer spirits than Miss Crosby. There were many well wishers, notably the members of Fanny Crosby circle of the King's Daughters, a church society in which she plays a prominent part. The home of her niece, Mrs. Henry D. Booth, with whom Miss Crosby resides, was deluged with beautiful floral remembrances, while dozens of letters and telegrams came to remind Miss Crosby of absent friends.

"Right thinking," exclaimed Miss Crosby, "that's what keeps people young. You often hear doctors claim that the mind cannot be healthy without a healthy body. Did you ever stop to think that the reverse may be equally true. If the mind is warped by prejudice and evil thoughts and selfishness what must be the result? You become a pessimist. Then maybe your doctor tells you your liver is bad. It isn't your liver at all, it's your mind."

That her own loss of sight in her childhood days was not ordained by God, but was simply the result of a violation of nature's laws is Miss Crosby's firm conviction. She declares that the idea is repulsive to her, that the Lord looked down on baby Fanny Crosby and ordained that she should be blind for life. However, Miss Crosby does believe that the Lord permitted her to be blind, when that affliction had been put upon her by a doctor's blunder, and she believes that she has been shown the way to make her blindness a blessing, and that she owes her happiness to it.

When she was a baby, about six weeks old, she had a cold in her eyes. In the absence of the regular family physician a man who passed himself off as a doctor was called and prescribed a poultice, which was placed over the eyes. Before his orders had been completed the retina of one eye was completely destroyed and the other nearly so.

MOTHER WAITS; SON DEAD

Shocked When Ambulance Stopped at Front Door.

Hammond, Ind., March 25. — Jesse Ciesko's mother at Whiting, with a warm breakfast on the table for her son, peered out at the window and wondered why he was late. She was startled to see an ambulance drive to the front door. The dead son was carried in.

Ciesko was a car inspector at Roby. He walked in front of a Pennsylvania train through the blinding sleet and was killed. His identity was not learned until morning.

GAS IS FATAL TO SIX

Victims Were Inmates of an Ohio County Infirmary.

Supply of Gas Believed to Have Failed and Then Come On Again After Flame Went Out.

Norwalk, O., March 25.—Six inmates of the Huron county infirmary are dead as a result of asphyxiation. Seven others were overcome, but are recovering. It is supposed that fires in gas stoves went out as a result of gas failure and that later the supply came on again.

The victims were inmates of the men's dormitory and slept in the same room. Attendants detected leaking gas in the morning and effected an entrance into the room. The alarm was spread immediately.

The infirmary is two miles from here. A squad of physicians hurried to the scene and worked desperately to revive those victims not already dead. This was hard work, as in some cases they had to combat age and feebleness.

Use Revolving Door to Rob.

Kansas City, Mo., March 25.—Three men attempted to hold up Dionysios Yrokaris, a wealthy Greek, in the post-office while scores of persons were in the lobby. They trapped him in a revolving door, but his cries brought assistance and the three fled. Two of the trio were captured.

Schenk Poisoning Case Delayed.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 25.—The case of Mrs. Lauri F. Schenck, accused of poisoning her millionaire husband, John O. Schenck, was to have been set for a second trial in criminal court, but by agreement of counsel it was passed to March 30.

TAFT REPORTED FORGING AHEAD

New York Herald Thinks Roosevelt Is Slipping Back.

EXPECT RECORD ON CONTESTS

Indications Are, So that Paper Says, that Republican National Committee Will Decide Who Controls Convention.

New York, March 25. — The New York Herald's review of the Republican presidential campaign is as follows:

President Taft forging ahead. Mr. Roosevelt slipping back. That is what an impartial canvass of the Republican presidential situation shows at the close of the third week since Mr. Roosevelt threw his "hat into the ring."

Present indications are that the convention will break all records for contesting delegations and that the national committee will in reality decide which faction will control the convention. The Taft men are strongly in control of the committee, and it has been the history of political parties that when things are close the dominant side decides in its own favor.

Up to date President Taft has 138 delegates instructed, pledged or favorable to him, as against 20 for Roosevelt, 2 for Senator Cummins and 10 for Senator LaFollette.

Mr. Roosevelt has failed to develop strength where it was confidently believed he would; as, for instance, in North Dakota, where Senator LaFollette in the first preferential primary test defeated him by a large majority.

The president has gained unexpectedly in Iowa. Indications are the president will have six of the eleven districts. Of the county delegates elected in the Iowa state convention thus far Mr. Taft has 552, Mr. Cummins 187 and Mr. Roosevelt 24.

In Wisconsin it is a clearly drawn issue between the president and Mr. LaFollette. Mr. Roosevelt's name was ruled off the primary ballot by the secretary of state.

Mr. Taft leads in Michigan, but Mr. Roosevelt has a following that must be reckoned with.

In Nebraska Mr. Taft is gaining, but not enough, it appears, to head off a solid delegation for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Taft leads in Illinois, but local conditions there make it difficult to estimate what may happen.

In Minnesota Mr. Roosevelt, according to town primaries, is a strong favorite. In fact, there is hardly any second.

Pennsylvania shows a strong Roosevelt sentiment in the northwestern section. Allegheny county, it is declared, will give him six out of eight delegates. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to show considerable strength throughout Pennsylvania.

12 DISCIPLES UNKNOWN

No Boy in Lake Forest Academy Could Name Them.

Question Is Asked with Ninety-Nine Others in Yearly General Knowledge Test.

Chicago, March 25.—Who were the twelve disciples? This easy question put a hundred boys of Lake Forest academy in profound perplexity.

They were undergoing their yearly general knowledge test. One hundred questions were in the examination.

When the papers were turned in one by one by the puzzled young men, the head master, William Mather Leeds, observed that the only question that none had answered correctly, or even passably, was: "Who were the twelve disciples?"

The next query that was "muffed" the oftenest was: "Who led the batting list in the National League last season?"

"As Chicago did'nt have a winning team last year, we can't blame the boys for forgetting such ephemeral things as names of ball players."

NEW TRIBE OF ESKIMOS

Bishop Discovers Strange People In Region of Bailey Island.

Washington, March 25.—A new tribe of Eskimos has been discovered in the region of Bailey island on the Arctic coast, according to a report received at the state department from Consul Dawson, Yukon territory Mr. Dawson reported that Bishop George Holmes on a journey of 2,500 miles in the territory of Athahadoa and McKenzie met a party of Englishmen, who told of his discovery.

The discovers, Dr. Anderson and a Mr. Stefamson, found a large settlement of these Eskimos numbering about 1,000. Some of them were of light compexion with blue eyes and sandy beards. Bows and arrows and stone axes and other primitive weapons were still in use by them.

INDIANA CLAIMED FOR TAFT

Returns Show He Leads Roosevelt In Republican Primaries.

Washington, March 25.—Reliable information has been received in Washington from Indiana that President Taft's followers will have twenty-two of the thirty delegates from that state to the Chicago convention. At a late hour advices had been received from 1,389 of the 1,439 delegates chosen at the Republican primaries.

Of these 780 are for Taft and 609 are for Roosevelt. The indications are that the returns from the other districts will show President Taft to have at least 200 majority.

MME. CURIE GETTING WELL

Expected that She Will Be Able to Attend Radium Meeting.

Paris, March 25.—The Temps states that it was deemed necessary a fortnight ago to perform an operation on Mme. Curie in order to obtain a permanent and decisive improvement in her condition.

The operation was entirely successful and it is expected that by exercising great care she will be able to take part in the work of the international commission on a radium standard next week.

Turkish Governor Murdered.

Constantinople, March 25. — Prince Kopassis Effendi, governor of the Island of Samos, was murdered while leaving the mosque. A man in the street crowd shot and killed him. A Greek named Pintas has been arrested, charged with the crime.

PRIMARY FOR MONTANA

Urged by Senator Dixon, Manager of Roosevelt's Campaign.

Helena, Mont., March 25.—Senator Dixon of this state, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, made an appeal to the Republican state committee meeting here for a presidential preference primary. A long telegram to State Chairman J. D. White set forth Senator Dixon's reasons for holding the primaries instead of selecting delegates to the national convention under the old convention system.

Various county organizations of the Progressive Republican league of Montana are urging a primary. It is predicted the request will not be granted.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to a normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

New Yorkers and "the West."

If we lived in New York we could easily settle the question which is said to be disturbing the minds of the western governors—as to what is the dividing line between the east and the west. Everybody in New York knows that it is the Hudson river.—Wheeling Register

Most disfiguring skin eruptions, scrofula, pimples, rashes, ect., are due to impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is a cleansing blood tonic. Makes you clear-eyed, clear brained, clear-skinned.

Most men find it easier to hold a runaway horse than to hold the tongue.

The "Child's Welfare" movement has challenged the attention of thoughtful people everywhere. Mothers are natural supporters, and will find in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a most valuable aid. Coughs and colds that unchecked lead to croup, bronchitis and pneumonia yield quickly to the healing and soothing qualities of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. For sale by all druggists.

Repels Attack of Death

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die with consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." Its folly to suffer with coughs, colds or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest, Price 50 cents and $1.00 Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

C A, Glossner, 24 Ontario St., Rochester. N. Y., has recovered from a long and severe attack of kidney trouble, his cure being due to Foley Kidney Pills. After detailing his case, he says: "I am only sorry I did not learn sooner of Foley Kidney Pills, In a few day's time my backache completely left me and I felt greatly improved. My kidneys became stronger, dizzy spells left me and I was no longer annoyed at night. I feel 100 per cent better since using Foley Kidney Pills." For sale by all druggists

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. J, T. Curtiss, Dwight, Kan. He writes: I not only have cured bad cases of eczema in my patients with Electric Bitters, but also cured myself by them of the same disease: I feel sure they will benefit any case of eczema." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is a most effective blood purifier. Its an excellent remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Price 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

When in doubt ask your wife.

To Mothers—and Others

You can use Bucklen's Arnica Salve to cure children of eczsema, rashes, tetter, chafings, scalv and crusted humors, as well as their accidental injuries,—cuts burns bruises, etc., with perfect safety. Nothing heals so quickly. For boils, ulcers, old, running or fever sores or piles it has no equal. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

If you haven't the time to exercise regularly, Doan's Regulets will prevent constipation. They induce a mild, easy, healthful action of the bowels without griping. Ask your druggist for them. 25 cents.

U OF M. GLEE CLUB QUARTET

The fourth number of the Entertainment Course comes at the Baptist church Tuesday evening April 2, when the University of Michigan Glee Club Club Quartet will appear. This popular company has a fine reputation. They recently toured the country through to the Pacific coast. Tecumseh is favored in having the opportunity of hearing them.

The papers speak of them in flattering terms. We copy one characteristic newspaper report. "Their manner was so pleasing and their training so thorough that they captivated their hearers from the first. The expectations of the people were more than met, each number on the program being so well rendered as to call for a second and third supplemented number." One price for all 25 cents.

MILLINERY OPENING

A Sigh of Relief From the Feminine Portion

The opening of the Millinery Department of the Webster Anderson Co. was largely attended. The hats this year will surely bring rejoicing to the heart of woman, the hideous creations of the past season or two have had their day and the varied shapes both large and small with their gay wreaths of little rosebuds and aigrettes of buds will make any face attractive

There is the severe English walking hat, the Gabbie Drefsiier hat with the Gabbie bow, made of pleated melines, the mixed opaline braids, the peanut straw braids used for young girls with their trimmings of coarse lace. The flower hats, so many in the primrose shades. All these make a bewildering array from which to take ones choice.

The store looked attractive with its beautiful silks, the living models showing their ready-to wear garments The large display of white summer goods the popular wide wale white wool suits would seem to be harbingers of Spring.

OYSTERS RODE IN TAXICABS

They Were From France and New York Frenchmen Craved Them for Dinner.

B. L. Bowles is an express agent of unusual patience. He spent the last day of the year cold, but hopeful, on the French line pier, answering telephone calls from three French restaurants, and merely smiled when, for the thirty-fifth time, a chef asked about "the oyster."

"Please, La Lorraine, where is he with the oyster?" said the impatient chef.

"She is still down the bay," said Bowles. "I think she will be here before six."

"What is it the diners will do if the oysters do not come?"

When the chefs called up again Mr. Bowles had not time to answer. He was busy with the customs officials arranging for the release of the oysters, which were in sacks.

"Are these things brought here for breeding purposes?" asked the inspector.

"No," said Bowles. "They are French oysters, called 'marennes vertes,' for eating purposes. There are about two hundred Frenchmen in this town who want to eat these oysters tonight with their New Year's dinner. I've got 200 dozen of them and three taxicabs are ready to take them to the restaurants."

At 7:25 p. m., when the taxicabs had gone north with the oysters, Mr. Bowles went into a booth and talked to the three chefs at once. The thanks that came simultaneously over the wire were too profuse and muddled to permit of translation.—New York Tribune.

Novel Way to Rest.

It seems imperative for a certain member of the family to rest an hour after the noon meal each day. The weather had grown mild, and to draw the shades so as to exclude the light kept out the air also, so the siesta lost much of its refreshing quality.

A thick pad of absorbent gauze some eight inches long and four inches wide was finished with an elastic band just tight enough to hold the pad securely. This was slipped into place over the eyes.

Days when the eyes burned or ached a compress wet with cool salt and water was placed under the pad, and eyes and nerves were soothed at the same time. By the last named means the eyes were strengthened and the crow's feet indicative of eye strain were ironed out.—Harper's Bazar.

Frank B. Swick one of Tecumseh's old residents and school boys left on a trip for Europe last Saturday evening with Joseph Mack, of Mack Printing House, Detroit. Mr. Swick is employed in the Art department of the house. He is one of the three greatest designers of books and catalogs in the United States.

As a school boy he was always busy with pencil and papers or decorating the blackboard at school with caricatures, The trip is taken with a view of visiting all the famous printing establishments in Europe, Mr. Swick making sketches some of the principle ones will be in the vicinity of Amsterdam and Rotterdam for some special work. They will be gone about six weeks and will gain much useful knowledge in the line of printing and designing.

OBITUARY

Ella May Hathaway, only daughter of Sidney and Abbie Hathaway, was born July 29, 1886 in the township of Ridgeway. Died at her father's home March 9, 1912. Age 25 years, 7 months 9 days.

She was united in marriage to Mr Charles Hathaway of Kendillville, Ind, Nov 8, 1910. She leaves to mourn her loss an infant son Sidney Philipp, husband, father, mother, two brothers and a host of sorrowing relatives and friends

They resided in Kendillville, Ind., 5 months after which time at the urgent request of her parents they returned to their home. It is useless to give a sketch of her life as she has lived almost her entire life in this community. She was a loving wife and a devoted daughter and will be greatly missed from our midst.

A precious one from us is gone,
 A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
 That never can be filled.

DON'T BE BALD

Nearly Any One May Secure a Splendid Growth of Hair

We have a remedy that has aided to grow hair and prevented baldness in 93 out of 100 cases where used according to directions for a reasonable length of time, That may seem like a strong statement—it is, and we mean it to be, and no one should doubt it until they have put our claim to an actual test.

We are so certain Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will cure dandruff, prevent baldness, stimulate the scalp and hair roots, stop falling hair and grow new hair, that we personally give our positive guarantee to refund every penny paid us for it in every instance where it does not give entire satisfaction to the user.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is as pleasant to use as clear spring water. It is delightfully perfumed, and does not grease or gum the hair. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 With our guarantee back of it, you certainly take no risk. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. B. J. Pulver.

BYRON HAD LITERARY AGENT

Author's Representative Not New Invention for the Torment of Publishers.

Much has been written lately about literary agents, as if they were a new invention of the Evil One for the torment of publishers. But in looking over Byron's letters the following one shows clearly enough that the first John Murray, who published for Bryon, had to cope with authors' representatives just as the third and fourth John Murrays do today—and, by the way, John Murray IV., who is an active and pleasing young man, is taking more and more of the burden of his father's business. Here is Byron's letter to John I.:

"Can't accept your courteous offer. These matters must be arranged with Mr. Douglas Kinnaird. He is my trustee and a man of honor. To him you can state all your mercantile reasons, which you might not like to state to me personally, such as 'heavy season,' 'flat public,' 'don't go off,' 'lordship writes too much,' 'won't take advice,' 'declining popularity,' 'deduction for the trade,' 'make very little,' 'generally lose by him,' 'pirated edition,' 'foreign edition,' 'severe criticisms,' etc., with other hints and howls for an oration, which I leave Douglas, who is an orator, to answer.

Apparently the song of the publisher to the author was exactly the same almost a century ago as it is today.

The Italian Soldier Under Fire.

These Italian soldiers were a new experience to me. For sheer unemotional daring I have never seen anything to equal the behavior of the Italian soldier under fire, and mark you, heavy fire. They are, as a whole, a splendid body of men from the point of view of physique and discipline. Much more than this can be said, however. The good spirits and earnestness and other good soldierly qualities of these men can only be spoken of in terms of highest praise. "Chummy" is the word I must use to describe the relationship and feeling existing between officers and men, and under such conditions where each is so essential to the other a wiser policy cannot be adopted.—Frank J. Magee, in Metropolitan.

Very Ancient Sword.

"Some of the Arabs have two-handed swords," says ex-Lieutenant Montague, late with the Turks in Tripoli, "left behind by the crusaders." But one never can be certain of anything in this world. After one of the British campaigns in Egypt an officer brought back as trophy such a formidable weapon, which he hastened to submit to the late Mr. Jack Latham, head of the Wilkinson Sword company, in Pall Mall, saying that, in his opinion, the thing belonged to the first half of the eleventh century. "No," said Mr. Jack, with a smile, after a slight scrutiny of the blade, "it belongs to the second half of the nineteenth century. There's our trademark in the corner of the hilt."

SOCIAL EVENTS

BRIDGE LUNCHEON

Mrs. Harry S. Moore and Mrs. Faron S. Anderson gave their second luncheon party Friday afternoon. There were 24 guests who enjoyed the artistic and most delicious luncheon. The place cards, the flowers, the luncheon itself were suggestive of the color scheme of spring being in yellow, white and green.

The highest score in the contested bridge game was that made by Mrs Levi C. Hayden Her score was 958 She was presented with an armfull of daffodils.

The guest from out of town was Mrs. C. M. Crowell of Cleveland

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Miss Phoebe Knight entertained seven young ladies Friday evening, in honor of the birthday of Miss Bessie VanAntwerp. A three course supper was served, followed by a hankerchief shower for Bessie. A pleasant hour was spent in fortune telling and social chat, the guests departing at a late hour well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

TECUMSEH SUFFRAGIST AT LANSING

A fine picture of Mrs. Jennie C. Law Hardy appeared in the Friday issue of the Detroit Journal. She is the head of the delegation of Woman Suffragists who will go before the Legislature in Lansing to-morrow, March 27 to urge the passage of Suffrage Bills, Mrs. Hardy is conceded to be one of the best informed women on politics in the world: She has had an eventful life and has been a great traveller.

Mrs. Hardy is Chairman of the legislative committee of the State Equal Suffrage Association and with them has been in Lansing since Monday morning.

SOCIAL PARTY

The T. L. A. met at the home of Mrs. El. Hand on Saturday afternoon carrying their boxes and baskets well ladened with good things for a bounteous supper. Mrs. Hand and her mother Mrs. Cleveland were delighted with the visit which was a sort of farewell party as they expect to go back to Devils Lake in another month for the summer season.

Entertained

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sanford entertained Saturday evening in honor of Don K. Strickland, of the U. of M. the guests were Marie and LeRoy Bramble, Clara and James Waldron, Beth Satterthwaite, Zillah Mills, Minnie and Maynard Mulvaney, Wilford Waldron and Earl McNiel. A bounteous supper was served, and the evening was most delightfully passed in games and social converse, the guests departing at a late hour, pronouncing Mr. and Mrs. Sanford royal entertainers.

LINTON—McCLURE

The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Orr was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday at 5 o'clock p. m. when Wm. McClure of Mt. Hamilton County Autrim, Ireland and Miss Elizabeth A. Linton of Los Angeles, Calif were united in marriage by the Rev. Hartzog. They were attended by Miss Agnes McClure of Boston and Herbert Orr.

The bride was robed in white silk with baby Irish trimings. The bridesmaid also being in white. After congratulations a delightful wedding supper was served. They were recipients of many beautiful presents.

This wedding is the culmination of a pretty romance begun in the old country where they both lived in the same town for a number of years and was aided by the mail service between the two countries Miss Linton came over to the United States some three years ago and has been with relatives in Los Angeles, Calif. for a long time Mr. McClure came over last October and has spent the winter in Lowell, Mass. coming to Tecumseh last Thursday.

After a few days spent with their friends they will return to the old country where they will make their future home. The out of town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McClure of Lansing, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Linton of Detroit, Misses Agnes McClure and Tillie Blair of Boston.

SCHOOL NOTES

O, that darling little lad!
 Bet he'll look just like his dad;
Came into a world of joy
 Just because he is a "boy"!
Hope his papa won't be cross
 'Cause he's got one more to boss.
But I think he'll kinder be
 To the rest—and give us E.
We are anxious, babe to see,
 For our hearts were full of glee
When we heard the joyful news;
 And will be glad his name to choose.

Mr. McAlpine's class in Teachers' Course are required to have the three books required for Reading Circle work completed and a synopsis written of each book during the spring vacation.

Mrs. Martin Rohrer of Grass Lake visited Miss Lowe's room Friday afternoon.

H. E. Brooker of Chicago was a business caller at the High School last Monday morning.

At the County Athletic Association meeting held in Adrian some time ago it was decided that the county meet would be held in Morenci May 31, and will include the High Schools of Hudson, Blissfield, Addison, Deerfield, Clinton, Morenci and Tecumseh.

Leroy Bramble visited the High School last Tuesday.

A Y. W. C. A. meeting was held at the High School building Thursday evening. The meeting was conducted by Miss Leeson and was a mission study of Alaska.

Mr. Hammond, a former superintendent of the Tecumseh Public Schools, was a caller at the High School Thursday afternoon.

AMUSEMENTS.

That old, old story, so new to present day theatre-goers, "slavery days" will be realistically interpreted Friday evening, March 29, at the Bradley Opera House by Stetson's spectacular "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company.

The members of the Stetson company were selected especially for his or her adaptability to the roles essayed. The scenery, painted especially for this revival, includes a number of handsome scenes reproduced from pictures of the localities mentioned in the book, as they were at the time when the great authoress first wrote the story more than fifty years ago. Some of the most notable of these scenes are the "Suawnee River" by moonlight, cotton fields in full bloom, the Ohio river in winter, and the escape of Eliza carrying her child across the floating ice, the rocky pass in which George Harris made his stand against the men pursuing him and protected his family; the St. Clair plantation home, the levee at New Orleans showing a slave auction; Legree's plantation, and lastly, the beautiful transformation scene.

The 'Stetson' show is the Biggest and Best Uncle Tom Company ever playing in Tecumseh and certainly deserves the title "THE BARNUM OF THEM ALL". They travel in two special cars, one a living car for their people, the other for their scenery and effects. This company should not be classed with the smaller Uncle Tom shows which are continually springing up. The 'Stetson' company has been on the road for 22 seasons and still playing to big houses, in all of the larger cities. The Co., numbers over 30 people.

Bibles in Persia.

The American Bible society has been at work in northern Persia for 70 years. For 17 years prior to 1896 it had its own agent, but since that time has worked through the missionaries of the Presbyterian church in Uramia, Tabriz, Teheran, Hamadan and Resht. The political disturbances there have of course interfered with the progress of the work, and, still further, the importation of Persian and Turkish Scriptures has at times been prohibited. Yet the circulation of the Scriptures has been continued, and the last annual report shows 773 copies distributed at Resht and Teheran. This report contained a letter from the Rev. Mr. Doomboorajian, reporting that during the last ten years he has been able to sell 5,400 copies of the Scriptures in 17 different languages, the greater part in Persian, traveling more than 2,500 miles, and meeting in each year one thousand different persons with whom he has had religious conversations.

Primary Enrollment

Notice is hereby given. That in accordance with act No. 281, Public Act of 1909, as ammended by Act 279, Public Acts of 1911, the Board of Enrollment of the Township of Tecumseh Precinct No. County of Lenawee, State of Michigan, will be in session at the Council Building on Monday April 1, A. D, 1912, from 7 o'clock A. M, until 5 o'clock P. M of said day, for the purpose of enrolling the names of all persons, members of whatever political party, who make personal application for such enrollment

How electors can secure enrollment Following is a brief statement of the different ways in which enrollment can be had in townships during the year 1912,

1. By personal application on Enrollment Day, April 1, 1912.

2. By a written request, accompanied by affidavit, an elector can enroll any day, but can not vote at any primary held within two months, This affidavit and application must be delivered to the township clerk or other officer in charge of the enrollment books.

3. An elector who was sick or unavoidable absent on enrollment day or who became 21 years of age or an elector after enrollment day can have his named enrolled on primary election day and vote at that election by taking the necessary oath.

4. If an elector who has been duly enrolled as above changes his residence from one precinct in the state to another he can be enrolled in the new precinct by obtaining a proper certificate from a member of the Enrollment Board of the precinct wherein he formerly resided stating that he is duly enrolled in the precinct from which he has moved and is entitled to enrollment in the new Precinct, or by taking oath.

No person can vote at any primary in Michigan unless his name has been enrolled under Act No. 279 Public Acts of 1911.

All enrollment prior to Aug. 2, 1911 is void an entirely new enrollment is required but a person whose name was enrolled Jan. 27th or at any time since Aug. 2 1911, need not enroll again, unless he has changed his residence. April 1 is the last Enrollment Day for 1912, but enrollment can be had any day by request and affidavit, as stated above, but this must be done two months before Aug, 27th to entitle an elector to vote at the General Primary Election on that date.

An elector who neglects or refuses to give the name of his political party cannot have his name enrolled.

Dated this 19th day of March, A D. 1912.

Guy E. Nemire, Clerk of said Township.

Annual Township Meeting

Notice is hereby given to the qualified electors of the township of Tecumseh Precinct No. County of Lenawee, State of Michigan, that the next ensuing Annual Township Meeting will be held at the Council Building within said Township, on Monday April 1, A. Free Liver Remedy

It is well to stop a physical ailment at the first signs of its approach, and that is especially true of liver trouble, which can eventually give rise to so many serious complications. Many have liver trouble and imagine it is indigestion, and hence take the wrong remedy.

When the liver does not store up sufficient gastric juices it becomes sluggish, and in this way disturbs the stomach and bowels, with which it is supposed to work in harmony. Then comes the sallow complexion, the pimply face, the dull pain in the forehead, the thinning of the blood, etc. A very quick and sensible way to stop the trouble as well as to cure it is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which contains ingredients especially intended to promote the activity of the liver.

Among the many thousands who have written the doctor about the results achieved with his remedy, and who are glad to make the facts public so that others can help themselves, are Mr. Jas. Kennedy, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. S. A. La Rue of Smith's Grove, Ky., and many others.

These, like thousands of others, started the use of Syrup Pepsin with a sample. If you will send your name and address you can also obtain a free trial bottle. This will prove to you that liver trouble is promptly cured with this remedy or money will be refunded. Having tried it you can then buy it in the regular way of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and the latter is sufficient for an entire family.

This remedy is a vast improvement over cathartic tablets and salts, which only do good for the time being. Syrup Pepsin is permanent in its results, is pleasant to take and does not gripe. It is especially good for all those who cannot stand a violent purgative.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W B Caldwell, R.509 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists-

EARLY RISERS

The famous little pills.

Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

THE ORIGINAL LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE

CONTAINING HONEY AND TAR

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon them. Foley Kidney Pills strengthen the kidneys, give tone to the urinary organs and restore the normal action of the bladder. They are tonic in action, quick in results. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat N. J., was troubled with a severe La Grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. It can't be beat." For sale by all druggists

WORK ON THE CANAL

Washington, D. C., March 25.—Only one-sixth of the excavation necessary to open the Panama canal to navigation remained to be done March 1, and this must be completed in twenty-one months, if Col. Goethals is to redeem his promise to have an American battle ship—probably the famous old Oregon—pass through the waterway January 1, 1915.

Big figures are required to tell what the canal workers have been doing and what they have to do. Last February they took 2,643,410 cubic yards of earth and rock out of the canal prism, making the total excavation up to March 1, 103,193,086 yards and leaving 32,141,293 yards to be removed.

ILLINOIS POSTAL BANKS

Deposits of $1,130,000 Held by 13,000 Persons—State Stands Third.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—There were 246 postal savings depositories in Illinois, with deposits amounting to $1,130,000, January 31, 1912. This amount was deposited by 13,000 depositors, or an average of $82 a depositor.

As compared with number of depositors and amount on deposit in other states, Illinois ranks third in number of accounts remaining open January 31, while it ranks third in total amount remaining on deposit.

Alms at Hawk and Kills Son.

Murphysboro, Ill., March 25.—W. H. Walker, a farmer near here, missed a hawk and shot and killed his eight-year-old son.

Mob Lynches Negro Slayer.

Fort Smith, Ark., March 25.—A mob broke into the city jail here and seized an unidentified negro who had previously shot and killed Andrew Carr, a deputy constable. The black was hanged to a telephone pole.

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Hundreds of Tecumseh People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich. says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Backache

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. After taking your 'Favorite Prescription' for about three months can say that my health was never better."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. Tones and builds up the nerves. Do not permit a dishonest dealer to substitute for this medicine which has a record of 40 years of cures. "No, thank you, I want what I ask for."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement once a day.

Friends will be pleased to learn that Mr and Mrs. James Lane who have been shut in since last November were able to attend the ladies social Thursday.

USING X-RAY ON PRINCESS

Suspicions of British Museum's Officials Regarding Egyptian Mummy Are Allayed.

A distinguished scientist attached to one of the government bureaus at Washington suggests that there may be such a thing as using the X-rays too much and too often, especially, he contends, when the rays are made the medium to pry into the antecedents of a young woman of royal lineage, resting for the moment under unjust suspicions.

Every one knows that spurious mummies have been plamed off upon the public. Recently a doubt arose in a London museum as to the validity of one daughter of the Pharaohs in the collection. It occurred to the museum officials that, in view of the general hollowness of life, the young woman in question might have been manufactured in some up-to-date town. So the officials at once turned the Roentgen rays upon her, with the result that they immediately perceived through her many-folded wraps the amulets which the Egyptians placed upon the bosoms of their dead. So the suspicions of the museum officials were allayed. One of them remarked: "It does seem a little hard that after the lapse of several thousands of years a lady should be suspected of imposture."

An Early Insurance Scheme.

A very early scheme of insurance for the laborer took heed of the woman worker. In 1786 the leaping of the poor rates gave birth to the proposal of a "Universal Benefit Society." Mr. Hackwood summarizes the scheme in his "Good Old Times:" "Every laborer between the ages of twenty and thirty years," he notes, "earning 10d a day should contribute to a national fund 2d a week, and every woman earning £3 a year 1½d weekly, and when sick or disabled should receive benefit at the rate of 4s a week, with 1s a week added for each child. There were, of course, many other details, but the chief interest lies in the fact that this was perhaps the earliest proposal for the national insurance of the laborer against invalidity."

Will Try to Outlive All Others.

The oldest member of Parliament in the world, the Hungarian deputy, M. Joseph Madarasz, who is now in his ninety-ninth year, issues a denial of the statement that he is about to retire into private life. M. Madarasz says that he means to retain his mandate till he has completed his one hundredth year, if not longer. He carries a list of all the centenarians in the world constantly with him, and marks them off as they die. He is determined to outlive them all, and some day to have the distinction of being the oldest man in the world.

KNOWLEDGE OF EVIL NEEDED

Innocence is lovely in the child, because in harmony with its nature; but our path in life is not backward but onward, and virtue can never be the offspring of mere innocence. If we are to progress in the knowledge of good, we must also progress in the knowledge of evil. Every experience of evil brings its own temptation, and according to the degree in which the evil is recognized and the temptations resisted will be the value of the character into which the individual will develop.

Innocence may be beautiful, but can never be strong, while the whole essence of virtue lies in its strength to resist and power to endure. If the innocence of childhood be replaced by the firm principles of integrity and honor, the loss will be really a great gain. It is only where the knowledge of evil is unattended by appreciation of its nature, where temptations are yielded to and not resisted, that we are induced to grieve over the departure of that innocence which was so beautiful in earlier years.

WAS CHEERFUL AND RESIGNED

Entertaining Event That Dispelled the Blues With Which Algernon Was Afflicted.

"How do you like this weather, Algernon," asked Mr. Topfloor as he got into the elevator one cold evening last week.

"I doesn' min' it sah. 'Tain' so bad, but it might be better," replied Algernon impartially. "Any ol' t'ing de good Lo'd likes suits me, sah."

"It is pleasant to find you so resigned and so cheerful," commented Mr. Topfloor.

"T'ank you," I's right cheerful dis ebenin'," replied Algernon with a broad grin. "I's mighty blue las' night, but I's well now, t'ank de Lo'd. I had a right pleasant aft'noon at a fr'en's house, an' dat kin' cheer me up. 'W'ot de 'casion? De 'casion was de fune'el ob his sister. Dere was mighty big doin's to cel'b'ate de 'vent, an' de whole party so cheerful an' 'signed like, I couldn' help bein' elebated up, too. Yeasar dat so, de half dollars an' de quartahs de does count', t'ank you', sah, t'ank yo! Mebbe yo' don' know, sah," pursued Algernon, cheerfully, as Mr. Topfloor took out his latch key to open his front dor, "dat de gas pipes is fruze an dere ain' no dinners bein' cooked in de 'partmen's dis ebenin'? De gas man's 'confab'latin' wif de pipes now. He done brung his bag o' inst'uments, an' I guess he gwine operate on de dif'ent meters, but ef he say dere's any danger of a conflabgration in de house, I sut'ny will rimform yo', sah."—New York Press.

AS A BEGGAR REMEMBERED

Remarkable Character Who Died in 1681 Left Bequest for Benefit of Poor.

Gifts of clothing are being made in many market towns and villages of Surrey to the poor from a bequest left for the purpose by Henry Smith, or "Dog" Smith, as he was more generally called, having earned the sobriquet from the fact that he was never seen without a dog at his heels.

This remarkable character lived about two and a half centuries ago, and was one of the best known figures in Surrey. He was originally a silversmith in the city of London, and, prospering in business, acquired estates in different parts of England.

Developing eccentricities as he grew old, he adopted the life of a beggar. His wanderings were confined almost entirely to Surrey, and he is said to have begged his way through every town and village in the country. At his death in 1681 he left all his wealth to the market towns and parishes of Surrey, and the endowments enabled each town to spend $250 and each village about $30 on the purchase of clothing for its poor.

Mitcham, however, was excluded from his benefactions, Smith's explanation being that on one occasion the inhabitants of Mitcham whipped him through the village as a common vagrant.—London Chronicle.

Danger of Gasolene Fumes.

In a letter to the New York Medical Journal Dr. T. D. W. Pinckney declares that public warning should be given in regard to danger from fumes where gasolene is burned and cites the case of a man who was found unconscious and near death after being for a short time in a small room in which an automobile engine was running.

"Some time ago," he says, "I was also called to see a plumber who was rendered helpless and almost unconscious by fumes from his gasolene torch. It appears that only a small amount of the fumes is necessary to cause helplessness and that there is little or no warning of danger in the feeling of the one affected.

"Persons working alone in their small private garages are in grave danger when they let their engines run for even a short time," says Dr. Pinckney. "Chance alone saved the men in the two cases I mention."

Reviving Old Mackintoshes.

Shabby old mackintoshes can be made as good as new at home for a small outlay, and by the exercise of a little care and patience. Boil a little linseed oil and add to this about 20 drops of terebene (to be had at any chemist's). While hot apply this mixture to the mackintosh with a brush. Allow it about 48 hours to dry in, and then wash the whole over with India rubber solution dissolved in methylated spirits to the thickness of cream. Leave this another two days to dry and the mackintosh will be found to have a smooth and hard surface, as calculated to resist all moisture as when the coat was new. The same process will, of course, do for rain hats, sponge bags and all water-proofed things.

Measuring River Flows.

In its work of stream gauging—measuring the flow and volume of rivers by up-to-date methods—the United States geological survey co-operated during the past fiscal year with 13 states, the states contributing over $49,000 and the survey doing the work. The geological survey also co-operated in this work with the reclamation service, the office of Indian affairs and the forest service. Ninety-six gauging stations were maintained in co-operation with the reclamation service, 13 in co-operation with the Indian office and 194 in co-operation with the forest service on streams draining national forests. In all 1,105 gauging stations were in operation at the close of the last fiscal year.

Dead Slang.

Is there anything so dead as dead slang? It must be quite fresh, or it offends the nostril. And no one should talk slang without the assurance that it is both infantile and immortal. John Galsworthy is modern. And in "The Man of Property" he produces the slang expression of the eighties. "A daverdy woman." It is a term of contempt for a woman. But is there any one born in the eighties who could explain that slang term, or remembers it? You must get your slang fresh—there is little of it that stands the tinned preservation.

Justifiable Suspicion.

"I guess I must be getting old."

"Why do you think so?"

"A pretty girl dropped one of her gloves on the sidewalk this morning and I permitted another man to beat me to it."

Change of Fortune.

Knicker—They used to have trouble keeping the wolf from the door.

Rocker—Now they have trouble keeping the Welsh rabbit from it.

DON'T SAY YOU'RE OLD

You Only Feel Old

Digestive organs are weak—don't assimilate food as they used to.

Other organs act more slowly and less effectually.

Blood is thin and sluggish.

Renewal of strength does not equal the wear and tear of your system:

That's what makes you feel old.

Nothing in the world will tone up and invigorate those weak, back-sliding organs, make rich blood and create strength so quickly as Vinol.

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, simply the medicinal elements of the cods' livers, with the useless nauseating oil eliminated, and tonic iron added. Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not make you stronger, feel younger and give you an added interest in life.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

Dillingham Bill Attacked in Japanese House.

At Tokio, Japan, Tuesday, the Dillingham immigration bill was severely attacked in the Japanese house of representatives by Count Hatteri, a member of the opposition. He talked for an hour.

He declared that the Dillingham bill was an insult to Japan and in connection with that he strongly criticised the Japanese government's intention of taking part in the San Francisco exhibition in 1915.

The government has announced its intention of replying to Count Hatteri's criticism.

GAS BLAST KILLS NINE

Seven Children Among Victims of Accident Due to Mine Settling.

Near Scranton, Pa., nine persons were killed by a gas explosion believed to have been caused by mine settling.

The dead are Mrs. John Cavella and her six children, ranging in age from three to twenty years, and her two small grandchildren, Mary and Frank Summa.

The victims either were blown to pieces in the explosion or burned to death in the fire which followed and destroyed three homes.

The body of Mary Summa was found in the limbs of a tree fifty feet from the scene of the explosion half an hour after the accident.

More than twenty dwellings near the scene of the explosion were damaged badly by the concussion and flying timbers, and scores of persons were thrown out of their beds and severely bruised.

DENEEN CALLS SOLONS

Governor Deneen Has Legislators' Promise for Presidential Primary.

With promises from 95 members of the lower house and 36 senators in his hands promising to vote for a bill for an emergency preferential vote on president, Governor Deneen made a call for a special session of the legislature to convene at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

GEN. BINGHAM IS DEAD

"Father of the House" Succumbs in Philadelphia.

At Philadelphia, Pa., General Henry H. Bingham, member of congress from the First Pennsylvania district and "father of the house," is dead at his home here. He had been a member of the house continuously since March 4, 1879. He was 71 years old.

Gen. Bingham had been ill for a long time from a complication of diseases.

Before he entered congress Gen. Bingham was postmaster of Philadelphia and a clerk of the courts of this city. He was a delegate to Republican conventions regularly since 1872. Gen. Bingham was in the Union army and received a medal of honor for gallantry on the field.

Packers Not Guilty.

The ten Chicago packers who have been on trial in Chicago charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law were acquitted by the jury in Judge Carpenter's court.

ASSERTS THAT TAFT IS FORGING AHEAD

New York Herald Thinks Roosevelt Is Slipping Back.

Indications Are, So that Paper Says, that Republican National Committee Will Decide Who Controls Convention.

The New York Herald's review of the Republican presidential campaign is as follows:

President Taft forging ahead. Mr. Roosevelt slipping back. That is what an impartial canvass of the Republican presidential situation shows at the close of the third week since Mr. Roosevelt threw his "hat into the ring."

Present indications are that the convention will break all records for contesting delegations and that the national committee will in reality decide which faction will control the convention. The Taft men are strongly in control of the committee, and it has been the history of political parties that when things are close the dominant side decides in its own favor.

Up to date President Taft has 138 delegates instructed, pledged or favorable to him, as against 20 for Roosevelt, 2 for Senator Cummins and 10 for Senator LaFollette.

Mr. Roosevelt has failed to develop strength where it was confidently believed he would; as, for instance, in North Dakota, where Senator LaFollette in the first preferential primary test defeated him by a large majority.

The president has gained unexpectedly in Iowa. Indications are the president will have six of the eleven districts. Of the county delegates elected in the Iowa state convention thus far Mr. Taft has 552, Mr. Cummins 187 and Mr. Roosevelt 24.

In Wisconsin it is a clearly drawn issue between the president and Mr. LaFollette. Mr. Roosevelt's name was ruled off the primary ballot by the secretary of state.

Mr. Taft leads in Michigan, but Mr. Roosevelt has a following that must be reckoned with.

In Nebraska Mr. Taft is gaining, but not enough, it appears, to head off a solid delegation for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Taft leads in Illinois, but local conditions there make it difficult to estimate what may happen.

In Minnesota Mr. Roosevelt, according to town primaries, is a strong favorite. In fact, there is hardly any second.

Pennsylvania shows a strong Roosevelt sentiment in the northwestern section. Allegheny county, it is declared, will give him six out of eight delegates. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to show considerable strength throughout Pennsylvania.

CASE OF THE PACKERS

At Chicago the closing arguments in the trial of the ten Chicago packers began before a jury in the United States District court. Extended arguments will be made by both sides, and it was said that the case would probably not go to the jury before two weeks.

The packers are charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The defense contends that no documentary or verbal evidence was introduced to show that the packers had conspired criminally in restraint of trade.

BAFFLING MURDER CASE AT ESCANABA

Students of Criminology Attracted by Singular Crime.

Simple-Minded Swede Who Confessed Not Regarded Capable of Planning Deep Plot Involved in the Crime.

Escanaba, Mich., March 25.—One of the most peculiar murder cases in the criminal annals of Michigan, which has gained a state-wide notoriety through its baffling and paradoxical nature, is to be tried at the April term of the circuit court at Escanaba.

The defendant, Arthur Lindquist, a poor and apparently unsophisticated Swede, has made three different and distinct "confessions," in which he first proclaims his entire guilt, and afterwards asserts his complete innocence of the crime of slaying Alvin Fogarty, a young man of this city.

The case is attracting the attention of students of criminology, who after a close analysis of the facts surrounding the murder of Fogarty, and a thorough psychological study of the character and temperament of Lindquist, have reached a consensus of opinion, namely, that Lindquist is not the man that slew Alvin Fogarty last fall and then threw his body into the bay, where it was found some weeks later, the corpse having floated about four miles to the other shore.

"From all available evidence in this case, the real murderer or murderers must yet be apprehended," said a prominent lawyer recently. "Lindquist may have been acquainted with the murdered man, and may have spoken and associated with him some days before his death, but there was undoubtedly a deep conspiracy to kill Fogarty, which was planned by male habitues of the red light district of Escanaba. This plot could not have originated in the simple, unsophisticated brain of the man now charged with the crime, nor could a man of Lindquist's disposition have had the nerve to carry out such a plot to the point of murder."

DETROIT—The Grand Trunk Railway company has just issued a statement explaining the decrease in the wages of its conductors, brakemen and baggagemen employed on branch lines. This decrease is to take effect on April 1, and amounts in some cases to $50 per month from the present scale. The statement shows that only 151 trainmen will be affected by the revision of the pay rolls.

KALAMAZOO—Ira Carlton, who, it is said, was the first white man to leave this state and walk to California during the gold rush in 1849, died here, at the age of seventy-seven years. Carlton did not ride a mile of the entire distance across the country and made the trip all alone, taking nearly a year. He returned a few years later. His death followed a sudden attack of heart failure.

HOLLAND—According to the annual report just issued by Police Chief Kamferbeek, 167 arrests were made during the fiscal year. The amount paid in fines and costs was $553.20. The total expense of the department was $5,326.21. No spectacular crimes were committed during the year and the bulk of the cases were drunks, vagrants and disorderlies.

S. M. RALSTON.

Nominated for Governor of Indiana at Convention of Democrats.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The thirty delegates from Indiana to the Democratic national convention were instructed in the platform adopted by the state convention to present to that body the name of Governor Thomas R. Marshall as the "first and only choice of the Democracy of Indiana for the nomination for president."

Samuel M. Ralston, Lebanon, was nominated for governor by acclamation.

SPECIAL MESSAGE.

Governor Recommends that Two State Offices be Abolished.

Lansing, Mich., March 26.—In a special message to the legislature Gov. Osborn quoted and commented on a resolution adopted by the Knights of the Royal Ark of Detroit opposing legislation pertaining to saloons, the bonding thereof, woman's suffrage, and the iniative, referendum and recall, a copy of which resolution had been addressed to each member of the legislature from Wayne county. In his comments the governor mentioned personally and sharply criticised E. D. Stair, chief owner of the Detroit Free Press and Detroit Journal, which papers have opposed some of the policies advocated by the governor.

Specific recommendations to abolish the offices of state oil inspector and state salt inspector, and to transfer the duties of these offices to the state dairy and food department, were made by the governor, in line with similar recommendations in his message to the regular session last year. Bills have been introduced to abolish these two offices accordingly.

Another special message recommends legislation relative to fraternal insurance societies, and a bill in accordance therewith was introduced in the house to provide that no such society shall be admitted to do business in the state without sufficient contributions at stated periods to meet [illegible]

INCOME TAX BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Many Republicans Help Measure in Congress.

Measure Framed by Majority Leaders to Make Up Loss of Revenue Through Removal of Duty on Sugar.

Many of the national house Republicans voted with the majority to pass the Democratic excise tax bill which went through unamended by a vote of 250 to 40.

The measure was framed by the majority leaders to make up for the loss of revenue to the government through the removal of the duty on sugar, as provided by a bill which already has been passed by the house of representatives.

The excise bill had been under discussion by the house for two days, the debate being marked by many speeches sharply criticising the decision of the supreme court of the United States by which a previous income tax measure was declared unconstitutional.

The present bill was prepared with a view to meeting objections raised by the highest court against it in the litigation of a few years ago. It exempts incomes of less than $5,000 a year.

From the time of the first appearance of the measure in the house there were indications that the proposed legislation would be aided by the insurgent Republicans, either actively with votes or passively by neutrality. The expectations then raised were borne out when the ballot disclosed an overwhelming majority in favor of the bill.

An outburst of applause from the Democratic side accompanied the announcement of the vote, and was renewed when it was learned that seventy-nine Republicans had voted for the measure. There were no Democratic votes against the passage of the bill.

The bill would extend the existing corporation tax law to include a tax of 1 per cent on the yearly net incomes of all firms or individuals in excess of $5,000.

The Democrats declare the tax is one on "doing business," despite the fact that it would include salaried people, and claim it would bring in sufficient revenue to offset the estimated loss of $60,000,000 resulting from putting sugar on the free list.

BURY DEAD FROM MAINE

Ceremonies Are Conducted in City of Washington.

At Washington City the funeral for the bodies recovered from the battleship Maine's wreckage in Havana harbor and which arrived here on the scout cruiser Birmingham this week was second only to that of President McKinley in point of size of the escort and character of the ceremonies.

The cortege which escorted the sixty-five bodies included large details of men from the army and navy.

Funeral services were held in the afternoon at the state, war and navy departments.

RELEASED ON BAIL.

Georgia Woman Who Is Accused of Trying to Murder Husband.

MRS. DAISY GRACE

ATLANTA, GA.—The secret release of Mrs. Daisy O. Grace, who is accused of having drugged and shot her husband, followed by her midnight flight from Atlanta for Philadelphia, has aroused the indignation of the state authorities and of the attorneys for her husband.

Judge Ridley, who accepted the $7,500 bond signed by two professional bondsmen, is being sharply criticised and there is talk of an investigation.

HUNTER'S GUN BURSTS

Wilbur Dubay Found Unconscious in Marshes with Wound in Head.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., March 27.—By the explosion of a shotgun which he purchased Saturday at Igonac, Wilbur Dubay, an employe of the Lake Shore railroad, received injuries that in all probability will prove fatal, physicians say.

Dubay was hunting ducks alone in the marshes at the flats and when a bevy of birds arose Dubay fired. He was found unconscious an hour later by another hunter. Dubay's eyes were filled with powder, which may cause loss of sight, and there was a deep wound above the left eye.

The stranger who found Dubay, and who neglected to give his name, took the wounded man to the home of a farmer and called a physician.

Dubay is twenty-four years old and unmarried.

TREATS GLADWIN CITIZENS

Electric Light Promoter Gets in Touch with Business Men.

Gladwin, Mich., March 26.—Charles W. Kuehl gave an elaborate banquet here at the Graham house to about seventy-five of the leading business men. An ordinance has been passed by the council to grant Mr. Kuehl a franchise to produce electric lights here and it will come to a referendum vote next Monday.

The banquet was simply a means of getting Mr. Kuehl and the business men acquainted and the sentiment seemed all to be in favor of the franchise. It requires about 60 per cent of the voters to approve it, but it is believed it will receive about 80 per cent. Mr. Kuehl promises to have lights here by August.

TO PRISON SIXTH TIME

Harry Brown, Only 18, Sent Up for Robbing Pullman Car.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 25. — Although but twenty-one years old, Harry Brown, the thief who robbed a Pullman car in this city recently, was sentenced to prison for the sixth time. Brown was given from eight months to fifteen years in Jackson.

He has served the greater part of his life in prisons and reformatories, and when sentenced declared that he was just as willing to go to prison as to have his freedom.

Convict Seeks a Retrial.

Hancock, Mich., March 27.—Formatti Hendrickson, an attorney, now serving a life sentence at Marquette for the murder of Mrs. Ida Kaarela, last November, announced he will file a petition for a retrial on the ground that Con Bedall of Hancock, one of the jurors, is not a citizen.

Gain $9,427,047 in Deposits.

Lansing, Mich., March 27.—As compared with the report issued Dec. 5, the statement of State Banking Commissioner Boyle shows an increase of $4,651,994.33 in commercial deposits and $4,775,052.28 in savings deposits, or a total of $9,427,047.21 in deposits during the last three months.

MANISTIQUE—Being suddenly attacked by a family cat Robert Johnson, four years old of Indiantown, a suburb, was so badly lacerated about the face by the animal's claws that a physician had to be called to attend the youngster. One cut had to be closed with stitches. It is likely the boy will bear the scars for life.

LANSING—Max Allen, a resident or Charlotte, has been appointed an Detroit House of Correction for five years. She and her husband, Edward "Red" Hatfield, fleeced William Terry, an Eaton Rapids farmer, out of $53 by the old "badger game." The husband got a five-year term in the state prison.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Almost A Miracle

One of the most startling changes seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all are family thought he was going into consumption, but be began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Nnow he is scund and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. The Health of Women Wage Earners

Health is a social question and must be dealt with by government. The regulation of the scale of wages of women by the state is a step toward the preservation of the health of the worker. Those who insist on trying to bolster up the morals of the vast army of workingwomen, must first turn their attention to the physical welfare of these women. Mary Ann must have before her the ideal of pure womanhood, but Mary Ann must eat and be warm and have a roof over her head in order to protect that womanhood. Nor must she become a mother who is a beast of burden, a weary, bedraggled servant of a parasitic trade. Two children out of every four or five die before the age of five years. If the mothers can be given a little more comfort and a very little more leisure, we shall not find it necessary to raise the cry of race suicide in the streets.—From Woman and the Wage Question,' by Jeanne Robert in the American Review of Reviews for April.

Ray-Killed Bacteria.

A method for sterilizing milk without heating or adding preservatives is claimed to have been effectively demonstrated recently in Hollard. An apparatus has been constructed, it is explained, whereby the milk flows in a thin stream along an electric light, the ultra-violet beams working on the bacteria. The result is attributed to the quality of the ozone formed under the influence of the light.—The Argonaut.

HENRY WILSON

The many friends of Henry Wilson were pained to hear of his untimely death, which occurred about 11 o'clock Wednesday night, March 20, 1912. Death was caused by Arterit-scleroses of which disease his brother, Abner passed away just 10 months previous.

Since January 1st, Mr. Henry Wilson had been in poor health making a trip to Battle Creek Sanitarium in February from which he received no benefit. After returning home he grew rapidly worse until his death Wednesday night.

He was the third of nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson his birth occuring at their home in Franklin July 24, 1850. Here he spent his boyhood days and was educated in the Tecumseh schools. Later he and his brother Abner went to Kansas, and taught at Lawrence, both returning to Michigan to teach in schools around the county.

He was united in marriage to Ellen Arnelia Bradley, September 20, 1876. To them three children were born all of whom survive, Mrs. Frank Osborn, of Columbus, Ohio, Halleck Wilson, of Detroit, Mich, and Mrs. George Witherall of Tecumseh.

He was a member of the well known firm of Wilson Bros., extensive celery growers and commission merchants. The firm carried on operations in California, Florida and New York. For twenty three years the brothers have been engaged in this business,

He was a member of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M. of Royal Arch Chapter and Council, also of Tecumseh Chapter No 51, O. E. S.

The funeral was held from the home Saturday at 2 p. m., Rev. B. R Weld pastor of the Presbyterian church officiating Mrs. Weld sang very sweetly, "Saved by Grace" a long time favorite of Mr. Wilson's, also "He Lifted Me" another song he greatly loved. He was a very great lover of flowers, and the many beautiful tributes seemed especially fitting.

DIED, WEDNESDAY MARCH 20th IN LONDON, CANADA JOHN REID, AGED 83 YEARS

Mr. Reid was the Father of Alex Reid of Tecumseh and We Clip the Following from the London Evening Free Press of March 20.

Slavery in America seems almost a thing of the past century, but there died in London this morning an ex American slave, John Reid, 429 Hill street, who since 1857 had been a resident of this city, having come to Canada from his home in Stanford, Kentucky, where he was born 83 years ago.

He was a well known character of the city having for close to 30 years been an employe of Thompson Oatmeal Mills. His wife, two sons, Alexander, Tecumseh, Michigan and John of this city; three daughters, Mrs. Charles Bell, this city, Mrs. Professor Wallace, of Adrian, Mich. and Mrs. Ellen VanPatter at home, survive him.

A CHEERFUL VIEW

A Massachusetts family had a family horse of which they were very fond When it got too old for service, they sent it to spend its declining years in the pastures of a farmer friend

Inasmuch as the distance would be too much for old Frank, he was shipped by rail to his new home.

Among those who watched his departure with regret was the owner's eight-year-old daughter. For a long time she sat gloomily looking out of a window. At last, after a deep sigh. she turned with a cheerful expression to her father and said:

"I was just thinking how funny old Frank must look sitting on the plush cushions."—April Lippincott's

New York Uses Much Water.

In the whole world there are only about 1,500,000 people. An inch of rain on our watershed normally would give two gallons of water for every man, woman and child on the surface of the earth. Put it another way: If every man, woman and child on the face of the earth should walk up to to the lakes, reservoirs, etc., which hold New York city's water supply, and each pour in two gallons of water, it would not be enough to last that city ten days.

Says Women are Funny at a Card Party

Kathleen Norris, the author of "Mother," in the first chapter of her new serial, "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne," in the April Woman's Home Companion, makes one of her characters says:

"Women are funny at a card party, It takes them an hour to settle down and see how everyone else looks, and whether there happens to be a streak of dust under the piano; and then when the game is just well started, a maid is nudging you in the elbow to take a plate of hot chicken, and another, on the other side, is holding out sandwiches, and all the women are running to look at the prizes. Now when men play cards—"

But nobody would listen to an account of how men play cards.

SOCIAL EVENTS

TECUMSEH MASONS ENTERTAINED

Tuesday Evening March 24

FORTY-FIVE FROM HUDSON COME BY SPECIAL TRAIN

A notable event of Blanchard Council No. 34 R. & S. M. of the Masonic Fraternity was that of Tuesday evening when Putnam Council R. & S. M. of Hudson made them a visit coming by special train, 45 strong, they were joined by twenty from Adrian.

Coming from Hudson were 21 candidates "who came to make common cause against their old enemy the King of Babylon." They were met at the train by a delegation of Tecumseh companions and taken at once to the club rooms of the Temple where a general reception was held after which the visitors strolled about the village and called on friends.

At 5.30 p. m, they were invited to the dining room where dinner was served to 150, the motto being. "We Live to Eat and We Eat to Live, Sometimes Smoke, Nothing Missing."

Promptly at 7:30 the gong sounded and the Council was opened and the "Tecumseh Indians" pounded upon a class of 29 novices in a manner that which sustained their previous reputation along this line of work.

In the super-excellent Master degree during the two hours "Flight to Jerico" the candidates were permitted to make a short halt, on their parade escorted by the celebrated Indian band, for a heart to heart talk with the professor of anatomy, who showed himself well skilled in the arts and sciences, no requests were made by them for fees advance, all declaring they had value received.

Among the notable visitors was T. I. Grand Master of the Grand Council, John Nichol of Ionia. A number also came from Clinton and Manchester. Letters of regret were received from some of the Grand Officers, who were unable to be present Dr E. M. Palmer of Brocklyn, who seldom fails to be present sent his regrets, with a short poem which was fully appreciated by those present The visiting companions were loud in their praise of the social conveniences of the Temple. The club room being especially commended, At the close of the meeting they adjourned to these rooms and waited for the train which was half an hour late, A short program was given during the evening consisting of short talks by different members, W. S. Dickinson and Elmer Slayton also singing several solos.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

The Research Club met Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Mary Whitelock. After a short business session, Mrs. Andrew Wilson gave a very interesting paper on the "Literary outlook of the day. Mrs. Mize leader of the winning side in the recent contest was asked to toast the losers, but she preferred to toast the winners and did so in these words:

"Here's to the ladies who strictly were in it
Who did not lose their heads for a minute,
They played well the game but drew the limit
And we're going to have all the fun there is in it "

The losers then served a two course supper: the first course consisted of crackers, dried apples water and toothpicks: they were all urged to eat bountifully of this course. The next course was a pot-luck supper which could not be excelled. At the close of the refreshments Mrs. Belcher in behalf of the winning side thanked the losing side for their entertainment.

SURPRISE PARTY

31st Anniversary of the Marriage of Jonah Waldron and Wife

A very pleasant company gave Jonah Waldron and wife a complete surprise on Tuesday evening to celebrate their 31st anniversary. Those present were Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Hartzog, A. VanValkenburg, wife, and Leon, Dr Waldron, wife and Clara, J. L. VanDoren and wife, Mrs. George Kay Harold and Carlisle, O. B. Finch and wife and James Henderson and wife.

They went well laden with light refreshments and a beautiful chair, which they presented to Mr. and Mrs. Waldron as a testimonial of the high esteem in which they were held Goood nights were said at a late hour.

STAG PARTY

W. T Eccles invited twelve of his friends to celebrate his birthday on the farm on Tuesday evening Mrs. Eccles served for them a three course turkey dinner.

The company presented Mr. and Mrs Eccles with a beautiful pair of automobile robes which will serve to remind them of old friends so kind and true. Their surprise at the time left them nearly tonguetied. The stag party was surely a success.

PLEASANT GATHERING

The R. N. of A. and the Modern Woodmen had a very pleasant social time at the K. of P. hall Tuesday evening. There were thirty coupe present to participate in the dancing. Ice cream and cake were served the company departing at a late hour.

Merry Go-Round

The Merry-go-round club was very pleasantly entertained Monday evening, by Mr. and Mrs. Wade L. Jones. The lucky prize winners at cards were Floyd Ager and Mrs. Leon Rosacrans. Later in the evening the hostess served a most delightful luncheon, and a social hour was spent in merry chat the guests leaving at a late hour.

ITS TIME TO CHANGE

What One Tax Payer Thinks

Tecumseh, Mich., March 26, 1912.

To the Editor:—

I notice by the annual statement required to be published by law, the expenditure of the public money and I believe it to be the duty of every voter to interest himself enough to carefully look it over and see that our public officials as such are doing their duty in collecting and spending our money, looking after our township property, our welfare and are working for our best interests. No matter what party we belong to or what party is in office, it is the same moral and legal duty incumbent.

Last year we elected a solid Republican ticket in this township, and this year the same officials are asking for re-election. and as opposed to them the Democrats have nominated a splendid ticket. As individuals, no one can question the esteem and respect of a single member on either ticket and it is only as officials I question their competency.

In the first place, on Monday there should be no politics to govern our voting principles as we vote for and elect only men to run our township, and hence, irrespective of on which ticket their name appear, we should elect only men the most fitted for the various offices.

First, let us see if those asking for re-election are worthy of the position They make no apologies for their actions make no promises for the future and stand upon their records made. And most of them have held their various offices for several terms.

Last year the condition our highways were in was a burning question and our township board stated that, if elected, they would intercede and act with the highway commissioner and see that our public money in this line was wisely and judiciously spent; I see by the financial statement that about $3000 was spent on our public highways outside of the Village of Tecumseh, and we are only half of a regular sized township. And I submit we have the poorest roads of any around and are the laughing-stock of our neighboring communities The roads where most of the work has been done are now almost impassable.

Our road scraper, we bought and paid good money for, stands in a ditch frozen in snow and ice nearly to the top of the wheels, about one mile north of town, and has been ever since last fall there exposed to the elements, when we have a road scraper house to house it in.

I also notice that of all the dogs owned or harbored in this town, not a dollar of dog tax was collected as is shown by the town board's statement yet the law places a tax of $1.00 on each male dog and $3.00 on each female dog

Again this statement shows that each member of the election board drew $4.50 for their services on election day while, if I am not mistaken the law allows but $2.00 a day and $1.00 for each half day, and our town board allowed the bill.

Glance over that statement and see what each member of the township board drew. Look at what the highway commissioner drew and which was allowed by this board and then see if they were not well paid for what they did.

There are numerous other things I might mention but it appeals to me that as a taxpayer, the foregoing is sufficient. These men only spent a small portion of their time looking after the public welfare and follow other occupations for a living.

If these men were running your private business, Mr. Voter, would'nt you call a halt? Then why not on Monday register your vote against those squandering our money and try a change Why should we be so bound up in party as to be taxed unjustly to support such policies and be made the laughing-stock of our neighbors. I do not believe those running on the Democratic Ticket will permit it. Let's try them.

Yours Truly,
Garland R. Gillespie

THINK THIS OVER

This Offer Should Gain the Confidence of the Most Skeptical

We pay for all the medicine used during the trial, if our remedy fails to completely relieve you of constipation. We take all the risk. You are not obligated to us in any way whatever, if you accept our offer. That's a mighty broad statement, but we mean every word of it. Could anything be more fair for you?

A most scientific, common-sense treatment is Rexall Orderlies, which are eaten like candy. Their active principle is a recent scientific discovery that is odorless, colorless, and tasteless; very pronounced, gentle, and pleasant in action, and particularly agreeable in every way. This ingredient does not cause diarrhoea, nausea, flatulence, griping, or other inconvenience. Rexall Orderlies are particularly good for children, aged and delicate persons.

If you suffer from chronic or habitual constipation, or the associate or dependent chronic ailments, we urge you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk Remember, you can get them in Tecumseh only at our store. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 90 tablets, 50 cents Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store B. J. Pulver.

Billous? Feel heavy after dinner? Tongue coated? Bitter taste? Complexion sallow? Liver needs waking, up. Doan's Regulets cure bilious attacks. 25 cents at any drug time.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Cold, LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is to often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable medicine that stops the cough promptly by healing the cause: soothes the inflamed air passages, and checks the cold. Keep always on hand. Backache Almost Unbearable

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Toomey, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were most unbearable I gave Foley's Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a hard day's work and not feel the effects."

RICH PIANO MEN TO JAIL

Millionaires of Chicago and Steger, Ill., Get Drastic Dose.

At Chicago Monday John B. and Christ G. Steger, millionaire piano manufacturers, owners of a large loop skyscraper and practical owners of the town of Steger, about twenty miles from Chicago, were sentenced to the county jail by Judge Scanlan.

Three other men well known in the piano business were also sentenced and fined.

The charge against the quintet was that they violated an injunction of the circuit court issued by Judge Walker several weeks ago.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Tecumseh residents? After you have read the following, quickly answer the question.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich says: I cannot say to much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great benefit I have received from their use. I never used another remedy that did me so much good. Since 1906, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occassions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys. The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain accross the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, getting them at Wright & Son's Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disapeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

116 MINERS ENTOMBED

Terrible Colliery Disaster Occurs in Oklahoma.

At McCurtain, in Oklahoma, fourteen workmen were rescued from the San Bois mine, where an explosion occurred. The rescue makes a total of twenty-five miners brought forth alive from the workings and has aroused hope for the safety of others of the 116 miners trapped by the explosion.

Fifteen bodies had been recovered at last reports. This leaves seventy-six still imprisoned or dead in the shaft, if the total of 116 at work at the time of the explosion is correct.

An appeal for aid for the families of the victims has been issued at a mass meeting.

During the night many bodies, blackened and mutilated almost beyond recognition, were recovered, and others located.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

STURGIS — Declaring that her soul had visited "the beautiful land" and that she had been told it was not her time to be called was the statement of Mrs. Nellie Smith, ninety years old, who was found in an unconscious condition at her home. Mrs. Smith further told the neighbor who found her that while her soul had been visiting she had been informed that the summons would come soon. In spite of her advanced age she still retains possession of her faculties and is a well educated woman.

GRANT—After he was accused by Eugene Houghton of Ensley township, Newaygo county, of attempted murder by shooting, Dennis Hawley conducted his own defense at the examination. Admitting the shooting he attempted to show that he had provocation because Houghton carried a revolver, which had been sent him by a neighbor. The hearing drew such a crowded house that the McKinley hall was substituted for the town hall. Hawley was bound over to the June term of the circuit court.

PETOSKEY — Having been conscious-stricken twenty-five years after taking $5, some one returned by mail that sum of money to a Petoskey woman. An unsigned letter explained that the money had been taken from the woman's cousin when they were purchasing goods in a local store a quarter of a century ago. The Petoskey woman remembers the occurrence and has forwarded the money to her cousin.

IONA—George Arnold of Belding pleaded guilty in court here to forgery and Judge Davis sentenced him to one to fourteen years in Ionia prison. Arnold confessed forging the name of L. A. Arnold to a check that came to the Peoples State Savings bank in Belding, where he worked.

GRAND RAPIDS — A physician, Dr. William De Kleine, by virtue of his office as coroner of Ottawa county, was appointed acting sheriff of the county. Sheriff Andre resigned owing to his indictment by the grand jury.

CEDAR SPRINGS—A fierce fire of unknown origin destroyed the general store building of E. W. Bratt at Edgerton with a heavy loss. The building contained the postoffice and the Grand Rapids and Indiana ticket office and the loss to the government and the railroad also will be considerable. The building was owned by George E. Recter.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 22nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows. to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the same premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

WAR IS COSTING ITALY MUCH

The correspondent of the London Daily Express who is now with the Turkish forces in Tripoli says that the Turks are hoping much from the cost of the war to Italy. The war is costing Turkey nothing, but the Italians are spending vast sums in incessant cannonading at nothing more vulnerable than the desert sands. The correspondent says that there are Italian prisoners in the hands of the Turks and that they are well treated, and especially the wounded. He then adds: "The Turkish doctors have other patients, too. I was in one of the medical tents this morning, and there entered a muffled little figure in the dress of an Arab girl. Hiding her face, she crouched on the floor, and the doctor, removing bandages and pads, showed me a ghastly cavity in the poor little creature's shoulder. An Italian bullet had entered—from behind!—and had passed through, making a dreadful wound. I questioned her, and the child, still muffling her face in her striped robe, told me how the Christian soldiers broke into her father's house and killed her mother and sister, and how she, being near the door, had run out into the street. Some of the soldiers followed her to the door, and stood there firing at her as she ran down the street; and 'At last,' said she, 'one of those Christians shot me as you see, here in the shoulder, and I fell down.'"

MULEY HAFID GOES HUNTING

Sultan of Morocco Uses the Telephone, Wireless and Acetylene During Day's Sport.

Muley Hafid, Sultan of Morocco, has evidently made up his mind to make the best of things and have as good a time as he can.

A short time ago he expressed the desire to go partridge and rabbit hunting. To go out without an army would have been impossible to him a few months ago, before the French occupation of Fez. But he started out one morning with a small escort, and had good luck at hunting, while no rebellious tribesmen took a shot at him.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon he found a tent set up and luncheon served. On the way home he stopped at a French fort, used the telephone to call up his palace at Fez and saw for the first time wireless telegraph in operation.

After many trials the operator succeeded in getting into communication with the station on the Eiffel Tower, and the Sultan sent a message to his minister in Paris, El Mokri.

Acetylene lamps were used to light his entry into Fez, and the Sultan was as pleased over the day's sport as a child with a new toy.

Benefits of the Fire.

The fire alarm sounded and a vagrant who had been huddled in a dark hallway crept out and joined the crowd hurrying to the midnight fire. Presently others of his fraternity appeared.

"Why do all you Johnnies always break your necks to get to a fire?" said a man who was something of a fire fiend himself.

The vagrant pointed to a woman who was emerging from a nearby apartment house carrying a pail of steaming coffee.

"There's the answer," he said. "At every winter fire that gives the firemen a hard tussle the women of the neighborhood bring out coffee and sandwiches to brace them up. Sometimes the firemen don't have time to snatch a bite, sometimes they do. Anyhow, there is sure to be something left over, and the women—well, it's a hard-hearted woman that won't give a poor devil a cup of coffee a night like this."

The man kept an eye on his candid derelict. He got two cups of coffee and two sandwiches.

California Wine Grapes.

The total number of tons of wine grapes handled by the wineries in this vicinity during the last season reaches the surprising total of 70,000 tons, writes a Lodi correspondent. If this 70,000 tons of grapes had been converted into sweet wine the total number of gallons would approximate 5,600,000. It would be safe to say that at least 10 per cent. of this tonnage was converted into dry wines, which would bring the number of gallons up to a higher figure.

As between table and wine grapes the wine grape industry at the present time looks to be in the better shape. At $10 a ton for the common variety of grapes a rancher can show some profit. As table grapes have been selling for the last year or so there is little or no profit in them.

Music Fever.

"When the Patti fever was at its height," he said, "a worthy Philadelphia couple decided to buy tickets at $8 each. So they drew $16 out of bank.

"But $16 seemed a good deal of money to spend on a single evening's music. In brief, after a serious talk, the worthy couple decided to devote the $16 to charity.

"So they sent the money to a poor man whom they knew—and the poor man bought two tickets with it, and took his wife to hear Patti."

No Time to Ride.

Twilight had let her curtain fall and pinned it with a star, as the man in the motor car, wrapped and furred against the sharp cold, spun along the country road. At a turn he came upon a tramp sitting on a sheltered log, asleep or frozen. It was up to him not to let the homeless one freeze to death and he went to his rescue.

"Here!" he said, shaking him; "here! Wake up! You'll freeze! Come along with me!"

The tramp straightened up, rubbed his eyes, looked at the man and the car waiting in the road and shook his head.

"Aw," he growled, "go on and lemme alone! This is no kind of a night to be riding around in an open car."—William J. Lampton in Judge.

Overheard.

"Heigho!" said Bildad, as Jimpsonberry flashed by in his motor car. "I wish I had a motor car."

"Oh, nonsense, Bill," said Slathers. "What's the use? You couldn't afford to keep it."

"No," said Bildad, "but I could afford to sell it."—Harper's Weekly.

WELL KNOWN MINISTER

Restored to Health by Vinol

Rev. D. Schneider, who is a well known minister in Rice Lake, Wis., writes:

"I had a very severe stomach trouble last year from which I was kept in bed three months. I had engaged the services of a doctor, but to no avail. I then read of Vinol and determined to try a bottle. Before it was used up I was out of bed, and four bottles made me a well man. Vinol is a splendid medicine, and I can gladly recommend it."

Prominent men from all over the country do not hesitate to endorse this wondeful tonic.

For twelve years Vinol has been sold on the "money back" plan, and every year strengthens its popularity and proves by continued tests that it will do what we claim for it.

BANKING

ATTENTION is called to the statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank, a bank that has built up a business in the past 19 years of nearly a half million dollars. This has been accomplished by a conservative and careful attention to its business, and its accommodations to its patrons. It was the first bank in Tecumseh to pay interest to its depositors, which it has done since its organization, amounting to $66,000.00. It has also paid $31,000.00 in dividends to its stockholders, besides accumulating a very good amount of surplus and undivided profits now on hand—good proof of its successful management. Depositors' money is safe and ready for them when wanted. While the money is in the bank it is never idle, it is continually growing. It draws 3 % interest for all full calendar months, one month or more, either on book accounts or on Certificates of Deposit. All customers are treated alike—the merchant, the farmer and the small depositor. To those who are not at present patrons of the bank we extend an invitation to open an account with us, or call on us for such advice as we are able to give.

PRIMARY BILL IS LAW

Illinois Representatives Vote Senate Measure through.

President Files Petition, Winning Coveted Place in Vote—Roosevelt and Clark Ready.

Springfield, Ill., April 1. — A presidential primary law became effective when Governor Deneen signed the bill passed by both houses of the general assembly.

President Taft's petition under the act was filed at 4:35 p. m. His name will get first place on the Republican primary ballot. The petition was prepared by W. A. Northcott, United States district attorney, and L. E. Wheeler, postmaster at Springfield. It contains 1,629 signatures.

The Roosevelt and Clark petitions were to be filed Monday morning.

The house passed the senate bill by a vote of 110 to 0. Seventy Republicans, thirty-seven Democrats, one Prohibitionist and two Independents voted for the measure. The total vote included eight more than the two-thirds necessary to make the law effective for the gubernatorial primaries April 9.

Governor Deneen signed the bill at 8:25 o'clock at the executive mansion, where he was ill in bed with a severe cold and fever. The bill was carried to him by one of his secretaries after Attorney General Stead had pronounced it correct in form without passing on its constitutionality.

Speaker Adkins signed the bill about 11 o'clock in the morning and Lieutenant Governor Oglesby affixed his signature ten minutes later.

After Governor Deneen's signature had been obtained the bill was filed with Secretary of State Rose. Immediately thereafter Mr. Rose announced he was authorized at once to receive the petitions of presidential candidates.

The Taft, Roosevelt and Champ Clark forces were the first to start the preparation of petitions. The local managers of these three candidates got their petitions ready during the afternoon.

Mitchell's Voice Gives Out.

DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE

Princess Victoria Louise of Germany Prey of Melancholy.

Promising Love Affair with Count Fugger Is Ruthlessly Terminated by Royal Papa.

Berlin, April 1.—An unfortunate love affair with Count Fugger, an army lieutenant, that was nipped in the bud by the Kaiser, is given as the real cause for the trip and "rest cure" Princess Victoria is taking with her father on the Mediterranean. The princess, who is nineteen, was deeply in love with the count, who is a member of an old Bavarian family.

PRINCESS VICTORIA LOUISE.

The affection was mutual, but it was necessary to represent to the princess that marriage was impossible, not only on account of the difference in the lovers' ranks, but also because the Fuggers are devout Roman Catholics.

The princess succumbed to a distressing attack of nervous prostration in consequence of this state of affairs, and was required, at the height of the court season, to abstain from further participation in it. It was announced at the time that she was suffering from an "affection of the throat."

Rumor has connected the princess with several of the eligible scions of Europe's royal houses. Among them were the Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and the Prince of Wales.

The princess has a charming personality and much sympathy is expressed for her.

SENATOR TAYLOR PASSES BEYOND

Tennessee Man Dies from Shock of Operation.

CAME OF PROMINENT FAMILY

Had Held Many Public Offices and Thrice Was Elected Governor of His State—Age was Sixty-Two Years

Washington, April 1.—Senator Robert Love Taylor of Tennessee died at Providence hospital. Shock from an operation for the removal of gallstones was the cause of his death.

The body was taken to Senator Taylor's apartments, Stoneleigh. The funeral party will leave Washington for Nashville tonight, where funeral services will be conducted Wednesday.

Senator Taylor was sixty-two years of age

Born in Happy Valley, Carter county, Tennessee, he was the son of Nathaniel G. Taylor, congressman and commissioner of Indian affairs under President Johnson. His mother was Emily Haynes, sister of Landon C. Haynes, confederate senator from Tennessee and prominent in the confederacy.

He was elected to congress in 1879. After serving in the lower house of congress for one term he served as presidential elector-at-large and as pension agent at Knoxville, Tenn. He was thrice elected governor of his state.

Retiring from politics for a time, he lectured for several years upon the lyceum platform, his most popular lecture being "The Fiddle and the Bow"

A Republican will probably succeed to the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Taylor. It is believed here that Governor Hooper, who is a Republican, will name Newell Sanders of Chattanooga to succeed Senator Taylor. Mr. Sanders has been prominent in the politics of Tennessee for many years

SENATOR GORE ASSAULTED

Maniac with Club Makes Diversion in Waukesha, Wis.

Waukesha, Wis., April 1. — Senator Gore of Oklahoma narrowly escaped death when a crazed man, Charles Schomulla, attacked him with a club while the senator was speaking in behalf of Woodrow Wilson at the opera house.

Only the quick action of the presiding officer of the meeting, Judge P. C. Harmin, who knocked Schomulla down, saved the blind senator.

Schomalla told the sheriff that he had planned to kill Colonel Roosevelt when the Oyster Bay candidate passed through Wisconsin on his way from St. Paul to Chicago. Roosevelt, however, had not made his trip via Waukesha.

The Old and Fatal Excuse.

New York, April 1.—Annie Russo, three and one-half years old, was shot and killed by her fourteen-year-old uncle, Horace Dessarel, in the home of an aunt. The boy didn't know that a shotgun he was playing with was loaded.

EXPLORER SCOTT IS HEARD FROM

His Ship, Terra Nova, Returns to New Zealand.

MAY HAVE REACHED THE POLE

Message Sent to His Base of Supplies Makes No Such Claim—States His Intention of Passing Another Year in Antarctic.

London, April 1. — The Daily Mail prints a Central News dispatch from Akaros, New Zealand, dated April 1, 9:20 a. m., saying the Terra Nova, Captain R. F. Scott's Antarctic ship, arrived there early Monday morning and anchored.

She did not bring Captain Scott, nor any members of the expedition, but fetched a brief message from the explorer, sent to the base at McMurdo Sound, to the effect that he would spend another winter in the Antarctic to continue his work.

Apart from this message the latest received from Scott at the base was that on Jan. 3 he was 150 miles from the south pole and advancing.

Captain Scott, the best equipped and most experienced of Antarctic adventurers, set out June 1, 1910, from London to plant the English flag at the bottom of the world. He had in mind not merely the attainment of the south pole, the goal of great explorers since Peary's triumph in the north, but the possibility of continuing his journey and emerging in Weddell sea, possibly within a few hundred miles of Cape Horn.

A German expedition under the leadership of Lieutenant Wilhelm Fitchner, sailed from Montevideo in November, 1911, intending to push south on the opposite side of the south pole region to that chosen by Captain Scott and Amundsen. Lieutenant Fitchner wanted to push as far south as possible through Weddell sea in order to determine the relations between the eastern and western portions of the land. An Australian explorer, Dr. Mawson, who was a member of the Shackleton expedition, left Australia in November, 1910, with an object similar to that of Lieutenant Fitchner. If Captain Scott found the pole and then pushed on he may have come in contact with Lieutenant Fitchner or Dr. Mawson. In that case the results to science would be immensely greater than the mere attainment of the pole itself.

Captain Scott, with a carefully selected crew and highly competent scientific staff, sailed in the remodelled whaler Terra Nova from Port Chalmers, New Zealand, on Nov. 29, 1910.

Captain Scott went on his journey with twelve men, eight ponies, two teams of dogs and his motor sledges. No definite word has reached civilization as to what progress he made. He hoped to reach the pole by Dec. 22, 1911. It is entirely possible, as Sir Ernest Shackleton and other explorers pointed out, that the captain made his goal within the time he had set for himself, and that he may have been there almost simultaneously with Captain Amundsen without either knowing of the others' proximity.

The lack of news as to whether Captain Scott reached the pole is explained by the assumption that if he did he could not get the news to the base before the freezing of Ross sea obliged the Terra Nova to sail away. Scott's decision to remain another winter in the Antarctic is received without any surprise. By some of his friends the opinion is hazarded that possibly he is trying to cross the ice barrier to the opposite side of the continent.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MAKING MONEY WITH GAS

Up-to-Date Equipment Installed in New Melting House of British Mint.

Four tons of gold will on an average be melted down each working day in the wonderful new melting house now being completed for service next year at the royal mint, near the Tower of London.

The new melting house will be the most complete in the world. It is much larger than the existing one, and is to contain ten furnaces, all heated by gas. The present melting house has only four such furnaces. Gas furnaces alone are now used at the royal mint for the melting down of precious metal, coke furnaces having been finally banished in March last. No less an amount than £80,000,000 worth of gold has been melted down by gas since the special furnaces were introduced.

Many experiments were carried out before gas was accepted as the best medium for the melting. In connection with the tests Mr. Rigg, the superintendent of the operative department, paid a number of visits to factories in London and the country and made a tour in Canada and the United States with the object of obtaining evidence as to the value of gas as a fuel. At length a special type of furnace was designed by officials at the mint, and a gas burner made by Mr. S. N. Brayshow, of Manchester, was adopted.

Ordinary gas is taken from the street main for the melting and mixed with air from a powerful blowing engine. It is found that by the use of gas the crucibles for the gold last longer than they did when coke was employed, each crucible enduring eighteen heatings under gas as against twelve under coke. In addition, the cost is less, having been reduced from 7d. to 5d. for each hundred weight of gold melted.—London Mail.

Rate Schedule Lacking.

It was the day before Christmas in one of the big railroad offices, says the San Francisco Call. They were talking about the good old days when they were all children and there was no interstate commerce commission.

"Well," observed the optimist, "I guess old Santa will come around as usual."

"Nope," replied the grouch. "Don't look for him this year."

"Why not?" asked the optimist.

"Well," came the the answer, "under the new law he's a common carrier, and the old man hasn't filed his rate schedule."

AMUSEMENTS.

"THE ROSARY".

Chicago, April 16, 1910.

Rowland & Clifford

Gentleman: Allow me: in my own humble manner, to congratulate you most heartily on having secured for the the people of this country in general, a play, which is to my mind, the acme of perfection and the greatest of its kind ever produced on the American or any other stage, a play which has for a theme the most beautiful thought that was ever conceived by man, that of purity surrounded by its most natural environment, the Catholic church.

"The Rosary" has a great purpose to serve, and I have no doubt as to its fulfilling that purpose to the utmost, inasmuch as it contradicts the popular idea of people outside the Catholic church, of the greatest of all earthly institutions, the Catholic priesthood, which has been so foully assailed by proselyting ministers everywhere,

The author, Mr. Rose, deserves the highest praise and greatest honor that has ever been conferred upon any playwright, and his is truly a great mind when he can conceive and give us as the fruits of his labors the beautiful passages of "The Rosary".

Wishing you all the success possible, I beg to remain

Yours fraternally,
Frederick L. Lumpp, Lecturer
Thomas Aquinas Council, No. 1089,
Knights of Columbus.

"The Rosary" will be the attraction at the Bradley Opera House next Monday night, April 8 The Company is under the management of Messrs. Gaskill & MacVitty (who had Rasalind at Red Gate here early in the season) and guarantee the production to be first class in every way. A complete, magnificent scenic and electrical production is carried. The production will be given exactly as during its New York, Chicago and Boston run.

Dr. Hornaday Gives Some Sound Advice to Young Women Tourists From the West.

A short time ago a party of young women tourists from the west visited the New York zoological park and called on Dr. Hornaday, to whom they had a letter of introduction. The director personally conducted their inspection of the park, answered their rattling fire of questions and placed at their disposal so far as possible his vast fund of information on topics in his line. As they were about to leave he surprised them by giving them some advice in a different direction and of a nature that visitors to New York do not usually receive.

"Now, girls," he said, "of course you wish to see everything in New York, but do not visit the slums. It will not add one thing to your education. I have lived in New York eleven years, and if there are any slums here I do not know where they are nor do I wish to know unless I could do some good there. The casual visitor cannot. Only a morbid and unwholesome curiosity would prompt anyone to seek such places for the purpose of looking at degradation, and you can use your time to better advantage. There are so many important and attractive things to be seen in New York that you cannot afford to waste your time on unworthy sights. Try to see the pleasant and valuable things and leave New York clean its own slums—hoping that may be soon."

It has been reported since that several mothers and fathers are grateful to the director for his unexpected advice.

AMONG THE MILLINERS

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, were the opening days of the millinery store of Miss Julia A. Hough, and it presented a very pleasant appearance indeed. The pretty hats in the various fancy braids of milan, hemp and opalescent with their dainty flowers, laces and maline trimmings were every where in evidence, be it great or small they are bound to please, Miss Hough has given special attention to the little folks, and has some dainty hats with their fluffy trimmings of lace and flowers.

Miss Pierce had a very pretty display, Among her braids was the tagal, a fine smooth braid that was very effective, the broad macreme band trimming was used very effectively, fancy ribbons, malines and flowers making every thing lovely. A large black hat with white lace crown and white plume was quite noticeable, and a flower hat of lilacs was beautiful. A touch of cerise was seen on meny hats Every thing will be bright and beautiful for Easter,

NEW MEXICO BRIBE SCANDAL

Four Members of the State Legislature Are Under Arrest.

Four members of the New Mexico legislature were arrested at Santa Fe charged with accepting bribes to vote for certain candidates for United States senators. Bribes amounting to $500 each are said to have been paid them. A bathroom figures in the incident.

The arrest of the legislators, all members of the house of representatives, was effected by means of a ruse and came as a climax to negotiations extending over several days, it is alleged.

Those arrested are Representatives Julian Trujillo and J. P. Lucero of Rio Arraba county and Manuel Cordova and Luis Montoya of Taos county. They are alleged to have been caught with the money in their possession.

DENY COAL TRUST PROBE

Government Officials in Chicago Discredit the Rumor.

Chicago, March 25.—Rumore that a nation-wide investigation of an alleged "coal trust" was under way by the government were denied by government officials.

The story afloat was that a gigantic octopus, with headquarters in Chicago, had been discovered by the government investigators. The story is said to have been based solely upon the inquiry being conducted by the department of justice into associations of coal dealers in the northwest and against which prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust act may be instituted.

LA FOLLETTE IN LEAD

Carries North Dakota Primaries Over Roosevelt and Taft.

On the latest returns the state of North Dakota has declared for Robert M. LaFollette as its choice for the presidency over Theodore Roosevelt in about the ratio of 7 to 4. Returns so far at hand show that Taft secured about 3 per cent of the vote, although it is admitted that his friends made no effort to show any strength.

The weather was cold and stormy all through the cattle country, thus cutting down the vote perceptibly.

116 MINERS ENTOMBED

Terrible Colliery Disaster Occurs in Oklahoma.

At McCurtain, in Oklahoma, fourteen workmen were rescued from the San Bois mine, where an explosion occurred. The rescue makes a total of twenty-five miners brought forth alive from the workings and has aroused hope for the safety of others of the 116 miners trapped by the explosion.

Fifteen bodies had been recovered at last reports. This leaves seventy-six still imprisoned or dead in the shaft, if the total of 116 at work at the time of the explosion is correct.

An appeal for aid for the families of the victims has been issued at a mass meeting.

During the night many bodies, blackened and mutilated almost beyond recognition, were recovered, and others located.

LARK OF BRITISH DUCHESS

Her Grace of Sutherland Danced at London Masked Ball in Male Attire.

A carefully concealed sensation of the brilliant "Arabian Nights Ball," given at Covent Garden, came to light in London when it was learned that among the glittering throng of oriental dancers was her grace the duchess of Sutherland in male attire—that of a maharajah. The incident was deemed so serious that a family conclave was called at Stafford house, the magnificent Sutherland residence, in St. James street.

But it was not the duke who caused the trouble, but the earl of Rosslyn, the countess' brother, who ordered his sister to "give an account of herself." The duchess took umbrage at this style of censor and citing his somewhat lurid career, bade him defiance.

"I would like to know," she is reported to have said, "who appointed you as censor of this family's morals; so don't talk rot."

A cross-examination elicited from the duchess the fact that while she did wear a man's clothes at the ball and also painted her face to a swarthy hue to resemble the eastern potentate, her trousers were very baggy and a cloak enveloped her figure.

So at the conclusion of the inquisition the duchess figured that the earl of Rosslyn owed her an apology.

"You see it was all perfectly innocent," she said, "and done just for a lark. You really should get down on your knees to me for stirring up such a fuss."

YEARLY PAPER OF ALASKA

In the bad old days the masters of the whaling vessels sailing from San Francisco to the far north used to give the Alaskan Eskimos raw "fire water" in order to secure the valuable furs they had obtained during the long arctic winter. Little they dreamed that these fierce children of the north would one day be so advanced as to print their own newspaper, a writer in the Wide World exclaims. After the terrible slaughter by the whalers of the alcohol frenzied natives of Cape Prince of Wales, in Bering strait, it was a rather ticklish job for a white man to start a Bible class. Still, H. A. Thornton attempted it, but he was shot dead by a boy of fourteen, who was killed in his turn by his own kinsman. This affair happened in 1890. Two years after W. T. Lopp appeared on the scene with his wife. They settled at Cape Prince of Wales, and year after year, until 1902, they taught humanity to the Eskimos. The reindeer was introduced from Siberia, and Mr. Lopp got his pupils to learn to rear the herds. He also taught them boat building, carpentering, etc., and, to put a final touch to his valuable work, he had a small press brought from the states, and it was not long after that his pupils were able to compose and print their own paper. This is probably the only yearly newspaper in the world—the Eskimo Bulletin.

A New Kind of Exercise.

It is a morning exercise invented by a Parisian actress, who takes the newspaper and tears it up. The fragments are thrown upon the floor in a thousand pieces. Then she gets up and collects those pieces, and the point is that not a fragment is lost. For this is the new way of gardening—the stooping cure that is recommended by every doctor. You can do it in your home, and do not require a garden. It is only to buy the morning paper, tear it into fragments, chuck them on the floor, and pick them up. Quite as good as gardening.

Aerial Postal Service in Italy.

Italy is the latest country to try an aerial postal service. The Italian aeronaut Dal Mistro recently carried a sack of mail between the Bologna and Venice postoffices in a Duperdussin monoplane, covering the distance of 101 miles in one hour and twenty-eight minutes.

CHARLES LAVERN PATTISON

He had been in poor health since the holidays, being at Fort Worth Texas at the time, where he underwent an operation. Two weeks ago he came home to his father and grew rapidly worse, until death came to his release. He was a member of the 31st Michigan Regimental band for two years after leaving Tecumseh, and has been with various theartrical companies. He leaves a widow, his father, two brothers and a sister to mourn his loss.

The funeral was held Saturday at 9:30 a. m, Rev. Weld officiating, Those present faom out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pattison and daughter Margaret of Wyandotte, Mr. and Mrs. Will Wilbur and Glenn of River Rouge, Mr, and Mrs. Harry Pattison and son of Cheasing

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee

We guaratee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Tecumseh only at our store—The Rexall Store B. J. Puluer.

NEWLOW SPREADERS

The following list of names are some of the many satisfied owners of Newlow spreaders. There is no spreader sold that is so popular, easy loading, as strongly built, as light draft, or as little neck weight and whip

Do not believe what anyone tells you against this spreader, as they are simply trying to further their own intrests. See one of these spreaders work yourself on the farm of an owner. Look over the general construction and you will need no advisement on what spreader to purchase if you are looking for a strong, simple, well built machine and you will find it the lightest draft spreader sold of the same capacity. Examine this and other machines in their original packages and even a blind man could tell the difference in construction

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill. and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

WHEN meekness becomes self-conscious, it vanishes.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case For sale by all druggists

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich,, says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Delila Miles, of Tower, Mich, had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She ssys, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich, says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

SUGAR JURY DISAGREES

Unable to Agree after Thirteen Hours' Deliberation.

New York, April 1.—The jury in the sugar trial, which announced after thirteen hours' deliberation that it could not agree, stood 11 to 1 for acquittal at its final vote. One of the jurors said that this proposition on which they were voting at that time was not between giving the defendants "a clean bill of health" and conviction, but a compromise verdict and conviction.

The compromise verdict which received the 11 votes, according to this juror, would have been for acquittal on the ground that the statute of limitations had interviewed. The juror quoted said that he and several others of those who voted for this compromise verdict would not have consented to a verdict of acquittal.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys.
Spells of backache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N, Ottawa St, Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney suffers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 12nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows. to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63 folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty-seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the same premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 183 at page 358.

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN RIVER

Hammond Police See Many Indications of Murder.

Hammond, Ind., April 1.—The body of a well dressed man, whose clothing caught in a piling in the Calumet river here, was taken from the water by the police, and presents a mystery with many phases pointing to murder. In the clothing were letters addressed to V. C. Barnes, general delivery, Chicago, from his mother in Sussex, England, begging the recipient to let her know when he wanted money. It is impossible to tell from the body how the man was killed as it has been in the water several weeks.

Locomotive Explosion Kills One.

Tuscola, Ill., April 1.—Alva Friddle, brakeman, was killed and D. R. Petrow, engineer, and W. E. Peters, fireman, were seriously injured when the boiler of a freight locomotive on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad exploded near here. Friddle was caught when the engine overturned.

REBELS ATTACK TRAIN

Zapatistas Kill Eight Passengers and Fifty Soldiers.

Disabled Train Presents Terrible Appearance When It Is Returned to Capital City.

Mexico City, Mex., April 1. — Eight passengers, nearly fifty soldiers and a native engineer, were killed when a band of Zapatistas attacked a passenger train on the way from this city to Cuernavaca.

Of the guard of fifty soldiers all but a few were killed. Those who were not killed were wounded. Several women were among the passengers killed. The American conductor was clubbed on the head with the butt of a musket and remained in a dazed condition for several hours.

The train, which returned here in the shape of an engine and a second class coach, presented a terrible appearance. The dead were piled in heaps on the floor of the coach, which was covered with blood. The loss of the Zapatistas is unknown.

President Madero is determined not to resign, but to remain in office and support the constitution.

The situation here is quiet now.

HUNTERS SAVED BY BOY

Two Men Hang to Limb Over Icy Water Until Rescued.

Rochester, Ind., April 1.—While hunting ducks in the Tippecanoe river, one mile north of this city, Charles Bailey and William Hanna, sportsmen of this city, had a narrow escape from drowning when their boat was capsized. Each man weighs more than two hundred and twenty-five pounds and they were unable to swim in the swift current, which tossed them about until they managed to grasp an overhanging tree limb, just as they were ready to give up the battle. With the icy water swirling around their legs, the men were compelled to wait more than half an hour before a passing boy, Edward Garber, heard their cries for help. The rescuer was on the opposide side of the river and it took him fifteen minutes to reach the drowning men's side.

Just as the boy arrived at the scene Bailey lost his hold once and slipped into the water. A rope was thrown him and he was dragged to safety. Both men were more dead than alive, and it was several hours before they were able to leave a farmhouse, to which they were taken. The hunters are lavish in praise of the boy who worked his way across the swollen stream by swimming and wading.

OFFICERS ARE BLAMED

Jury Gives Verdict on Blunt's Death When Convicts Were Slain.

Springfield, Neb., April 1.—The coroner's jury in the inquest over the body of Roy Blount shortly after midnight returned a verdict recommending that Chief of Police Briggs of South Omaha, his special deputy, John C. Trouton, and Sheriff Hyers of Lincoln be held to the District court for the killing of Roy Blount while he was held by escaping convicts.

The jury also recommended that Sheriff Grant Chase of Sarpy county be censured for not preventing the shooting which resulted in Blunt's death.

MOBS RIOT AGAIN IN ROCK ISLAND

First Day of Open Saloons Is Disorderly One.

ONE MAN KILLED, 80 ARRESTED

Battle Follows Raid of Club by Militia—Man Found Shot to Death in Alley—Troops Not to Blame, Says Sheriff.

Rock Island, Ill., April 1.—One murder, a vicious attack by sluggers, scores of fights and eighty men arrested, was the record of the first day of open saloons at Rock Island since the militia closed down the places after the fatal rioting of last Tuesday.

The dead man is Rufus Phoenix, who was shot and his body thrown in an alley. His death is shrouded in mystery, the sluggers claiming he was shot by the soldiers, while the commanding officer of the state forces declares his men have not fired a shot since they assumed charge of the city.

Walter Rice of Galesburg is badly battered as a result of being taken for Chief of Police Brinn. Rice and Brinn look very much alike, and dress almost exactly the same. It is thought Rice was attacked and beaten by a band of sluggers who thought they were assaulting the chief of police.

Eight men, participants in street fights, many of them intoxicated, are in the city and county jails

Following a free-for-all fight at the Lincoln club and the interference of soldiers and police, Rufus Phoenix, chauffeur for Captain Walter Rosenfield, who is campaign manager for Lawrence Y. Sherman, candidate for governor, was found dead in the alley outside of the club. He had been shot through the left lung. Two stories are being circulated as to how he met his death.

One is that in a dispute in a poker game he was shot and his body taken outside the club to avoid publicity. The other is that in the scramble of club members to get away when the police and militia arrived he was shot down in trying to escape.

Fifteen men found in the club when the raid was made are locked in the police station. Coroner Rose will hold a rigid investigation as soon as he finishes with the inquest on the two riot victims. Sheriff Bruner declared that Phoenix had not been shot by a militiaman.

Young Offender.

A woman left her baby in its carriage at the door of a department store. A policeman found it there, apparently abandoned, As he passed down the street, a gamin yelled: "What's the kid done?"—Collier's.

WELL KNOWN MINISTER

Restored to Health by Vinol

Rev. D. Schneider, who is a well known minister in Rice Lake, Wis., writes:

"I had a very severe stomach trouble last year from which I was kept in bed three months. I had engaged the services of a doctor but to no avail. I then read of Vinol and determined to try a bottle. Before it was used up I was out of bed, and four bottles made me a well man. Vinol is a splendid medicine, and I can gladly recommend it."

Prominent men from all over the country do not hesitate to endorse this wonderful tonic.

For twelve years Vinol has been sold on the "money back" plan, and every year strengthens its popularity and proves by continued tests that it will do what we claim for it.

LORIMER IS UPHELD BY HIS COLLEAGUES

Senate Committee Vote, 5 to 3, Favors Him.

Probers Decide that Previous Action by Senate on Illinoisan's Case Bars Second Proceedings—Edward Hines Exonerated.

The right of Senator Lorimer to his seat in the United States senate was upheld by the special investigation committee, which decided that the senate's vote sustaining Mr. Lorimer in the last congress on substantially the same charges barred any further proceeding against him. The vote was 5 to 3.

Those who voted for Lorimer were Dillingham, Gamble, Jones, Fletcher and Johnson. Those who voted against him were Kern, Lea and Kenyon.

The matter will next be fought out on the floor of the senate.

The committee's action was sweeping. It not only adopted the "resadjudicata" resolution prepared by Senator Jones of Washington, but other resolutions favoring the Lorimer contentions.

The Jones resolution declared that the pending case had already been covered by the previous trial of Lorimer in the senate, and that again to place the Illinois senator on trial would not be in accord with the principle of "resadjudicata."

By a vote of 6 to 0 the committee adopted a resolution declaring that if there was any corrupt dealing in connection with Lorimer's election, Lorimer had no knowledge of it.

The committee also took action, declaring that there was no conclusive evidence of a legislative "jackpot." On the resolution declaring that Lorimer had no knowledge of any corrupt dealing, Senators Kenyon and Lee, who opposed Lorimer, refrained from voting.

The session was not only protracted, but it was a stormy one. Much feeling has been aroused in the committee by the long investigation, and by the partisanship which has been shown for and against Lorimer.

It is practically certain that a minority report also will be made from the committee and a notable debate is expected when the case reaches the floor of the senate.

ANOTHER DYKE BURSTS

Floods from the Kankakee River Ar Causing Enormous Loss.

The destructive flood in the Kankakee valley in Illinois has resulted in the loss of a million dollars worth of property. Fifty thousand acres of river bottoms were inundated when the Hack dyke on the Kankakee river went out and flooded the towns of Shelby, Water Valley and Thayer, in Indiana. These towns now are under water.

Brown dyke is in peril and is expected to go out. If it does, 100,000 more acres will be flooded. Railroad bridges are in danger, as the flood is washing many embankments. At Hessville and Black Oak, the Calumet river is far over its banks, and these places are under several feet of water.

APRIL ELECTIONS.

Flint Turns Down Socialist Mayor. Results in Other Cities.

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—Most noteworthy among the municipal elections in Michigan Monday was the defeat of the Socialist mayor of Flint, for reelection. Mayor Menton went down under a large majority for Charles S. Mott, the Independent candidate, by upwards of 1,500 majority. The entire Independent ticket was elected.

Another remarkable incident of the municipal elections was the victory of the Rev. Father J. P. Dunigan, Republican candidate for Mayor of Lapeer.

Local Option Contests.

In the local option contests the wets won 11 out of 25, six of which heretofore were dry: Arenac, Ingham, Lapeer, Ogemaw, Otsego and Presque Isle changed from dry to wet; Lake Leelanau, Oakland and Roscommon remain wet, and Grand Traverse decided its first local option contest for the wets.

The drys captured two wet counties, Mecosta and Wexford, while Alcona, Antrim, Branch, Cass, Charlevoix, Isabella, Kalkaska, Missaukee, Oceana, Oscoda, Shiawassee and St. Joseph counties voted to remain dry.

MRS. JOHN BANCROFT, JR.

Young Husband Granted a Divorce from Her.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Mrs. Madeline Du Pont Bancroft sought seclusion as a result of the decision of the Superior court, granting a divorce and the custody of their son to her husband, John Bancroft, Jr., a millionaire society leader.

The case was sensational from start to finish, and a fortune was spent by both sides. Mr. Bancroft in his suit made Max Heibler, Jr., a Munich student, the codefendant with his wife.

FIRE IN BROWN CITY

One Young Woman Dead and Three Men Injured.

Opera House Block Is Totally Destroyed, with Loss of $9,000—Cause Is Gasoline Explosion.

Brown City, Mich., April 2.—Pearl Kennedy, sixteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Kennedy, a widow, is dead; N. G. Cronse, local grocer and restaurant keeper, lies in a critical condition, from burns received in rescuing the girl; James Hilliker, who assisted Cronse, is suffering from severe burns, and Dell Shier, a fireman, is laid up with two fractured ribs and other injuries, as the result of a fire which destroyed the opera house building.

Grocer Cronse attempted to fill the gasoline tank of his restaurant coffee urn with a five gallon can while the light under the urn was burning. An explosion occurred which threw the blazing gasoline over the floor. In a moment the whole store floor was in flames.

The building, which was a three story brick veneer structure and one of the largest in town, was totally destroyed despite the heroic efforts of the fire department, entailing a loss placed at $9,000. It was owned by John J. Kerns, president of the City Savings bank, and was not insured, the policy on the building having

MURDERS HIS WIFE WHILE DESPONDENT

Charlevoix Farmer Then Takes His Own Life.

Told His Wife Before Committing the Double Crime That He Felt Like Shooting Some One.

Boyne City, Mich., April 1.—During a fit of despondency, Charles Knapp, a farmer living near Boyne Falls, fired two shots with fatal results at his wife, then shot himself.

He had been feeling ill the past two weeks and after dinner again complained. He told his wife he felt as if he was going to shoot some one and shortly after retired to a bed room upstairs. She followed later to [illegible] him. Their fifteen-year-old daughter, with a half-brother of Knapp, remained below, and after a time heard a scuffling upstairs, but they paid no attention until Mrs. Knapp screamed and asked her husband to "quit." Then both rushed to the stairs, and when half way up were startled by a shot, followed quickly by another. They rushed for assistance to neighbors and when they returned with help, found Knapp downstairs, on a sofa with a bullet hole through his head and his wife upstairs with two shots in her head. She never regained consciousness and died. Knapp was brought to the Boyne City hospital where it is yet impossible to say if he will recover. The couple always appeared happy and no motive other than insanity can be given at this time.

ESCANABA MAKES PROTEST

Wants to Know What Power Railroads Have to Kill Lake Ports.

Washington, April 2.—Demand that the interstate commerce commission determine what power railroads have in building up or killing ports on Lake Michigan is made in a brief filed with that body by Attorney George M Stephens of Chicago in behalf of Escanaba, Mich.

It cites that the Goodrich Transit company and the Mutual Transit company no longer stop their boats at Escanaba, with the result that freight rates for the local dealers have increased enormously. The city is on the Chicago and Northwestern and Escanaba and Lake Superior railroads. The complaint is directed against the latter and the Ann Arbor railroad.

The brief indicates that Escanaba with one of the finest harbors on the lake, has been cut off from shipping and the business of its merchants ruined by arbitrary action of the railroads.

One illustration is 100 pounds of iron shipped from Pittsburg to Ishpeming. To haul it 388 miles from Chicago passing through Escanaba, the tariff is 28 cents. The Chicago dealer can deliver it in Ishpeming for 46 cents while the freight for the Escanaba dealers is 51 cents.

The chief greivance is against Menominee, where the lake boats continue to stop. The brief says Menominee can get whisky from Baltimore and ship it back to Escanaba for 12 cents a hundred pounds less than the Escanaba dealer can get it direct.

ARRESTED AT HIS BOOKS

Teller of a Grand Rapids Bank Said to Have Stolen $5,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 29.—J. Edward Johnson, teller of the Michigan Trust company of this city, was arrested late at night while working over his books in the bank, charged with embezzling $5,000 from the institution.

Johnson is said to have admitted his theft, declaring he spent the money in bucket shop speculation.

Consecrate Big Church Bell.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 2.—The largest church Angelus bell in the city was consecrated by Bishop Henry Richter, assisted by many of the priests of western Michigan. The bell, which was christened "Mary," weighs about 4,000 pounds and will hang in the belfry of St. Alphonsus' church. It was presented by the women of the congregation.

MICHIGAN WOMEN WIN

Equal Suffrage Measure Is Passed by State Legislature.

Lansing, Mich., March 30. — The woman suffrage amendment, which provides that an amendment to the constitution granting women the right to vote be submitted to the people at the next general election, passed the house. It had already passed the senate.

Wild excitement prevailed in the house when the measure came up for a vote. Women packed the galleries, and when the passage of the measure by a vote of 75 to 19 was announced they broke into enthusiastic cheering. It was some time before order could be restored.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. THE BEST PLOW YOU CAN BUY
SOME OF THE REASONS

The only sulky plow made with which you can turn either gee or haw equally well, leaving no hard spots, and avoid the necessity of plowing out corners.

It is the lightest draft riding plow made, due to the entire absence of landside friction and the even distribution of the load. The weight of the plow and driver is CARRIED instead of being DRAGGED along.

One share on the No. 11 will outlast four walking plow shares. It holds to the ground at all times, especially in dry weather. May be used with or without tongue. The turning and scouring qualities of the OLIVER PLOW BASES are unequalled.

Chicago, May 13, 1910.

Messrs. Rowland & Clifford.

Gentleman: After a close study of every detail of your play "The Rosary," I am compelled to say that it is without a flaw as produced by the excellent company at the National Theater recently. I believe I voice the sentiments of hundreds of Knights of Columbus who witnessed the play at my suggestion, that you are to be congratulated and thanked for giving us the benefit of a clean, wholesome and elevating entertainment.

Very truly yours,
M. H, Panly, M. D.. Lecturer.

"The Rosary" will be the attraction at the Bradley Opera House, next Monday, April 8. The company is under the management of Gaskill & MacVitty who had "Rosalind at Red Gate" here earlier in the season. "The Rosary" is produced and staged with a wealth of special scenery and and electrical egects.

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

The U, of M. Glee Club at the Baptist church Tuesday evening was one of the most delightful entertainments of the season and was worthy of a crowded house.

Local interest also added to the occasion, Mr. Glenn Munn, Pianist, being a nephew of Mrs. R. S. Moore and Mr. Kenneth Westerman 1st Tenor nephew of Mrs. Arthur Harding. As a Quartette the young men were fine and the readiness with which they responded to encores was most charming.

The soloists were perfect in their various roles.

Mr. Westerman rendering "The Perfect Day" and "I Hear You Calling Me" in such clear sweet tones that it carried the listener along with him to the very last note his encore was very fine.

Mr. Porter was especially happy in his selections which were quite varied and gave the audience much pleasure.

Mr, Jacobs had a most charming personality and his little Scotch song especially was most delightfully given The encores were bright and happy in every number.

Mr. Munn a pianist and accompanist showed marked ability and his Piano solos were received with close attention by the audience

Everyone went away with a pleasant feeling around the heart, the sweet strains lingering with them as they went.

Birthday Dinner

M E. Conklin was the victim of a very pleasant surprise Tuesday, when eighteen of his relatives met at the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Wallinger, to celebrate his 78th birthday.

A most sumptuous dinner was served to which all did ample justice and "Met" was as young as any of them and bids fairs to enjoy many more birthdays

NO NAME CLUB

The closing meeting of the No Name Club was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Teachout. A 7 o'clock chicken dinner was served after which cards were the diversion of the evening. Dr. Hendershott winning first prize and Comfort Chase the second. Good-byes were exchanged with many wishes for the meeting together another season, each one feeling that winter had been a very pleasant one.

ANNIVERSARIES

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Robbins celebrated the 53rd anniversary of their wedding day on Friday of last week.

For fifty years they have been residents of Tecumseh, and have a large circle of friends both old and young who wish them many happy returns of the day. Their daughter Mrs. J. E. Newburn of Cleveland, was here to help them celebrate.

Friday of last week Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stewart celebrated the 30th anniversary of their wedding day. A very fine dinner was served with covers laid for 36.

Relatives were present from Holloway, Britton, Manchester, Detroit and Tecumseh. Glenn Stewart came from Detroit and Roy Lowery and family from Manchester to help their parents celebrate the day.

The children presented an elegant extension dining table and the relatives a set of dining chairs to match, other gifts of silver, glass and china, were also received. The guests made merry for the time they were present and left behind them a host of good wishes for their host and hostess.

The friends and neighbors numbering about 35 surprised Mr. and Mrs, Will Waldron last Saturday in honor of their 30th wedding day. The ladies brought filled baskets for a splendid dinner, and passed the time afterward in sewing carpet rags for the lady of the house, and very lively social chat. While there they discovered that it was the 20th anniversary of Freeman Gove and wife, so another surprise was planned for the evening which also was a perfect success. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant social neighborly time enjoyed by all,

RECEPTION AND DANCE

At the close of the entertainment at the Baptist church Friday evening, Mrs. R, S. Moore gave a reception to the young men of the Quarette, after which they adjourned to the K. of P. hall, where they were entertained by the Young Men's Club with a dancing party. About forty couples were present, Will Coller and wife furnished the music. The dancing was prolonged until a late hour, all having a most delightful time.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

At the last meeting of the Research Circle the regular election of the officers occurred, resulting in the re-election of all the old officers:

Pres.—Mrs. Milburn Keysor.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. Andrew Wilson.
Sec.—Mrs. Will Mobbs.
Treas.—Mrs. E. C. Bryan.
Delegate to State Federation—Mrs. Wm. Mobbs.
Alternate—Mrs. George Sanford.
Alternates—Miss Mary Whitlock Mrs. A. W. Mills.

The Annual Symposium will be held April 16, in Grange Hall. The gentlemen being the invited guests.

WIT AND WISDOM

Monday evening the Wit and Wisdom Club met with Rev. and Mrs. Hartzog. There were 54 in attendance, the largest number for the season, but the re-constructed parsonage was fully able to entertain them all. The "Sweet Family" was repeated by request, and they were all just as accomplished and jolly as ever and acquitted themselves in a manner quite creditable to the training of their mother.

At the close of the program, fine refreshments were served and an hour of social visiting completed a most enjoyable evening,

NEWLOW SPREADERS

The following list of names are some of the many satisfied owners of Newlow Spreaders. There is no spreader sold that is so popular, easy loading, as strongly built, as light draft, or as little neck weight and whip

Do not believe what anyone tells you against this spreader, as they are simply trying to further their own intrests. See one of these spreaders work yourself on the farm of an owner. Look over the general construction and you will need no advisement on what spreader to purchase if you are looking for a strong, simple, well built machine and you will find it the lightest draft spreader sold of the same capacity. Examine this and other machines in their original packages and even a blind man could tell the difference in construction

SOUR GRAPES

Tecumseh Herald print shop is a most delightful place; the work is done by ladies who each set type from a case; of couse they're very quiet and there is a constant hush, such as would cause a printer man with shame to almost blush; but of course they are good looking, and as the story ran, they make a good impression on a level heeded man. For instance in the Herald items we are apt to find, which sweetly tell the story and are fashioned like this kind: Mr. C. V. Skinner, of Hudson, made the Herald office a call last week, renewing his subscription, and remembering the office with a dandy Easter basket of candy.—Hudson Post—Detroit Free Press.

Tecumseh Herald print shop is certainly first rate. We said it a while ago and now we reiterate. And where the types are placed in line by ladies dainty hand the people try to be real nice and seem to understand that fair compositors like to be appreciated, and when they call upon the shop have their arms well freighted with packages wrapped daintily and filled with something good, and use the cutest phrases (which 'tis said are understood). They never find a bit of fault, nor say they errors make, but tell them they are perfect, types never make mistake. Nor do Tecumseh youths alone graces behold—for following implies they captivate the old: "M. E. Conklin is celebrating his 78th birthday to-day. He remembered the Herald force with sweet pea blossoms We all wish him as many happy returns of the day as he can enjoy."
—Hudson Post.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 463 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

WHEN meekness becomes self-conscious, it vanishes.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal,

Mrs. Delila Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

is the way Miss Alta Abel of West Baden, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes: "I was a complete wreck—always tired, worn out and nervous, I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed.

"Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life. That nervous and tired feeling is all gone. I have gained in health, flesh and strength, until I feel like another person." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, overworked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

TAFT WINS IN INDIANA

Delegates at Large Instructed to Vote for Him.

At Indianapolis, Ind., the Indiana Republican convention adopted resolutions instructing the state's four delegates at large to the national convention to vote for the renomination of President Taft.

National Committeeman Harry S. New, former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks, James E. Watson and Joseph D. Oliver were elected delegates at large.

The majority report of the credentials committee seating contesting Roosevelt delegates was defeated by a vote of 772 to 667.

The Roosevelt delegates held a separate convention in the rear of the hall upon the adjournment of the regular convention and elected as delegates at large former Senator A. J. Beveridge, Fred Landis, Edwin M. Lee and Charles H. Campbell.

The primary in New York state resulted in Taft capturing eighty-three of the ninety delegates to the national Republican convention in Chicago. Roosevelt men charge fraud.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys
Spells of backache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

Many Tecumseh people rely on it.
Here is Tecumseh proof.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney suffers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R.V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Miss Marjory Boyce of Tecumseh, was a guest the last of the week of her aunt, Miss Lulu Gilmore.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Dibble of Macon, were visiting in town the last of the week.

PRIMARY BILL IS LAW

Illinois Representatives Vote Measure Through the House.

A presidential primary law for the state of Illinois became effective when Governor Deneen signed the bill passed by both houses of the general assembly.

President Taft's petition under the act was filed at 4:35 p. m. His name will get first place on the Republican primary ballot. The petition was prepared by W. A. Northcott, United States district attorney, and L. E. Wheeler, postmaster at Springfield. It contains 1,629 signatures.

The Roosevelt and Clark petitions were filed Monday morning.

The house passed the state bill by a vote of 110 to 0. Seventy Republicans, thirty-seven Democrats, one Prohibitionist and two Independents voted for the measure. The total vote included eight more than the two-thirds necessary to make the law effective for the gubernatorial primaries April 9.

ROOSEVELT IN CHICAGO

Delivers Three Speeches and Then Departs for St. Louis.

Col. Roosevelt arrive in Chicago on the Pennsylvania limited from New York and made the first speech of his presidential campaign here at the Auditorium theater. He also spoke at two overflow meetings, at Wicker Park hall and at Northwest hall. At 11:45 p. m. he left for St. Louis.

500 MINERS HAVE DESERTED THE PITS

Hard and Soft Coal Mines Are Closed Down.

General Feeling Is That the "Suspension" Will Be Short-Lived and That the Men Will Return to the Mines.

It is estimated that half a million coal miners quit work in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania and in the "central competitive field" of the bituminous portion of the industry.

Officially the movement is a "suspension" of work and whether it is to develop into a widespread strike depends upon the outcome of the voting in the union ranks and of conferences between the men and employes within the next ten days.

Anthracite miners are more apprehensive than the bituminous miners as to the ultimate outcome. No definite agreement for the hard coal men is in sight, whereas the bituminous conference at Cleveland adjourned after the men's representatives had abandoned practically all their demands except for increased pay. On this point the men modified their terms considerably.

The union men are taking a referendum ballot as to whether the modified terms for a new wage agreement are to be accepted and there is a general feeling that the result of the ballot will be a return to work.

The outcome of the voting in the "central competitive field"—comprising Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois—will influence new wage scales in other sections of the country where the present agreements do not expire until May 1 or later.

Southern and southwestern mines and those in the Rocky mountain states will be affected. West Virginia and Kentucky bituminous fields will not be greatly affected. Nonunion labor predominates in these mines.

Approximately 500,000 men are directly affected and some 300,000 more, scattered throughout the coal districts of the country, are watching the progress of the "suspension." It probably will be at least thirty days before all mines will have resumed, if the referendum votes and conferences result favorably. The last ten days of the thirty may present a problem as to fuel supply to industries of all character.

John Mitchell in an interview at Wilkesbarre, Pa., said:

"I am very glad to see by the newspapers that the operators have agreed to another conference with the mine operators' committee in Philadelphia on April 10. This makes a chance of reaching an amicable agreement regarding the mine workers' demands.

"The soft coal operators and the mine workers have reached an agreement. It came at the eleventh hour and it indicates that a discussion of the issues of both sides of a controversy and calm judicial judgment of a situation is likely to lead to a peaceable settlement at this time and I do not care to say anything regarding the mine workers' demands, but I repeat that the outlook for a peaceable settlement is hopeful from my general observations in the anthracite fields, and I believe both sides will get together in the next ten days and patch up their difficulties and there will be no strike."

SENATOR TAYLOR DEAD

Tennessee Man Dies from Shock of Operation.

Senator Robert Love Taylor of Tennessee died at the Providence hospital in Washington. The shock from an operation for the removal of gallstones was the cause of his death.

Senator Taylor was sixty-two years of age

He was elected to congress in 1879. After serving in the lower house of congress for one term he served as presidential elector-at-large and as pension agent at Knoxville, Tenn. He was thrice elected governor of his state.

Retiring from politics for a time, he lectured for several years upon the lyceum platform, his most popular lecture being "The Fiddle and the Bow"

The death of Senator Taylor created a vacancy in the senate which will be filled temporarily by an appointment to be made by Governor Hooper, a Republican. The appointee will serve until the legislature meets, which will be the remainder of the unexpired term of Senator Taylor. The term will expire March 4, 1913.

COURT HITS OIL TRUST

Upholds Ouster of Concerns by Missouri Decisions.

At Washington Monday the anti-trust laws of Missouri were upheld by the supreme court of the United States.

The court approved of the state's action in ousting the Standard Oil company of Indiana, and the Republic Oil company of New York, from the state and fining each $50,000 under these laws.

COURTHOUSE TO BE PROPPED

Precaution Taken Against Collapse of Bad Axe Building.

Bad Axe, Mich., March 29.—The courthouse at this place, a brick structure built thirty-seven years ago in not a very substantial manner, is in danger of collapsing. Several years ago the supervisors had several heavy iron rods put through the building to keep it from spreading. Since that time the south wall has bulged out in the center about four inches with numerous cracks appearing therein. The west wall has broken away from the vaults in the offices of the treasurer and register of deeds, leaving an opening of about two inches.

After a consultation with the committee on care of county buildings, Circuit Judge Watson Beach ordered Contractor McLellan to procure heavy timbers and prop up the walls of the building to prevent its falling during the murder trial of Dr. MacGregor, which takes place next week, when it is expected the courtroom will be crowded to its utmost capacity.

Editor's Mean Revenge.

An editor who was courting a woman of uncertain age, but positive bank account, was cut out by a gentleman from a neighboring town, who married her and took her home. Whereupon the editor sought a mean revenge by heading account of her wedding: "Another Old Resident Gone."

New York Uses Much Water.

In the whole world there are only about 1,500,000 people. An inch of rain on our watershed normally would give two gallons of water for every man, woman and child on the surface of the earth. Put it another way: If every man, woman and child on the face of the earth should walk up to the lakes, reservoirs, etc., which hold New York city's water supply, and each pour in two gallons of water, it would not be enough to last that city ten days.

TEACH HOW TO MARKET

Class Is Conducted by Kansas City Y. W. C. A.

First "Field Trip" Made to Market in Part of Course in Teaching How to Purchase.

Kansas City, Mo., April 8.—A large group of young women composing a class in marketing conducted at the Y. W. C. A., by Miss Beulah Jackson, made its first "field trip" when it visited the city market. The trip was made as part of the course that is designed to teach how marketing should be done to get the best results for the money expended.

"Our marketing is not done with a wicker basket and a harangue on the tongue," Miss Jackson said. "Nor are we ready to argue a market dealer into a reduction of the price. We generally agree with the price, but we have something to say as the quality of the vegetables, meat or forge stuff which we are about to purchase.

"The course taken by the class includes a study of meats. At our last session a butcher demonstrated carving before the class and showed the different cuts of meats."

WIND HURLS HOUSE 200 FEET

Chicago, April 8.—A windstorm ripped its way across the northern suburbs of Chicago. Frame buildings were torn from their foundations, chimneys were blown down, windows were broken, and greenhouses were crushed by the drive of a forty-five mile wind weighted with a heavy rain. Lightning also did considerable damage. A score of persons were injured.

The most spectacular event happened near Niles Center on the farm of Peter Tilges. The farmer, his wife and five children were in the small frame house when it was lifted into the air and carried 200 feet before it again touched the ground. All of the occupants were slightly injured, two of the children being burned when they fell with a stove through the floor as the house touched the ground.

AVIATION ROUND BEING ARRANGED

Great Air Event to Take Place in August.

BEGINS AND ENDS IN CHICAGO

Many of Principal Cities of Central West Interested in Project of Aero Club of America Now in Preparation.

New York, April 8.—Following the precedent set in Europe last year, a great American aviation circuit is being organized by the Aero Club of America, with the co-operation of the aero clubs of Illinois, Michigan, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

The distance of the proposed circuit is 1,310 miles and the starting and finishing points will be at Chicago. It is planned to have the race during the month of August, preceding the International cup race, the date of which is Sept. 9. This, it was thought, would induce the foreign contestants, who are coming over for the championship event to take part in both races.

The route proposed is Chicago, Milwaukee, Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Omaha, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Jefferson City, St. Louis, Charleston, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and Chicago. Stops will be made at each city where there will be "control" or station and possibly at other cities situated along this route. The circuit is open to all licensed pilots of all nationalities, who will be free from injunction under the Wrights' patents.

Already the various cities have pledged considerable of the money towards the prize fund, which, it was said, will be $100,000, including a grand prize of $25,000, second prize, $5,000 and a third of $2,500.

Among the additional prizes are those for the first and second machine to reach each control and a special prize for American built machines first to arrive.

C. W. French of the Aero Club of America is now on a tour of the cities included in the circuit. He has visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Omaha and Kansas City and will next take in St. Louis. While the western cities will provide the prize fund, it was said the Aero Club of America will bear the administrative expenses. Among the members who have been active in the project are Harold McCormick of Chicago, Russell A. Alger of Detroit, and Robert J. Collier. It is thought the race will attract at least twenty participants.

LAY CORNERSTONE TUESDAY

Alpena Will See Its New Federal Building Fairly Started.

Alpena, Mich., April 8.—The cornerstone of Alpena's new federal building, for which congress appropriated $100,000, will be laid Tuesday afternoon. The Masonic grand lodge of Michigan will have charge of the ceremonies.

Addresses will be made by Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, and Ex-Congressman Charles Mulholland of Toledo. The speakers will also make addresses at the Chamber of Commerce banquet in the evening.

HAMLET IS DEVASTATED

Tornado Cuts Lively Pranks at South Fallsburg, N. Y.

No Lives Are Lost, but Buildings Are Demolished and Cars Blown from Track.

Middletown, N. Y., April 8.—Buildings were demolished, railroad cars blown from the rails, trees uprooted and many people injured in the path of a tornado which devastated South Fallsburg, Sullivan county. While many received injuries none were fatally hurt so far as has been reported here.

There had been several light showers and the temperature had fallen from 65 to 40 when a black cloud made its appearance in the west. It swept down on the village with a roar. Buildings rocked on their foundations and roofs of buildings and small trees and limbs of trees were flying through the air. Scores of people, thinking that their dwellings were about to collapse, rushed to the streets, only to be blown over or knocked down by flying missiles.

The big three-story general store of Chester Couch was razed. Hatch's big feed mill and Gardner's cider mill were partly demolished and a number of other buildings were roofless.

At the Ontario and Western station several loaded freight cars, which stood on a switch, were unroofed and several empty cars were blown from the rails. A number of houses were twisted from their foundations. The tornado seemed to center its intensity at Fallsburg, for although there were high winds and rain all around the village, no great damage was reported elsewhere.

KNOX CROSSING JAMAICA

Is on Automobile Trip from One Side of Island to Other.

Guantanamo, Cuba, April 8.—Secretary of State Knox and party sailed from here on the cruiser Washington for Kingston, Jamaica, where they were due this morning. They will cross the island by automobile and arrive at Port Antonio in the evening. They will sail for Havana on Monday night and will arrive at the Cuban capital on the evening of the 11th.

In Guantanamo the party visited the naval station and rifle ranges and spent the rest of the day up to the time of sailing in resting quietly.

SEARCH FOR CRAZY OUTLAW

Washington Woodsmen After Tornow, Who Murdered Six Persons.

Tacoma, Wash., April 8.—Three posses of woodsmen are seeking John Tornow, the outlaw supposed to have murdered six people about the head waters of the Wynoochie river, north of Gray's Harbor. Rewards offered by the authorities aggregate $5,000.

Tornow's brother believes the hunted man is demented. He has warned the posses to use the greatest caution. Probably no effort will be made to capture Tornow alive.

Shoots at Target and Hits Boy.

Doylestown, Wis., April 8.—John Chemo, aged fourteen, probably will die as the result of a bullet wound received when Allen King, living south of here, shot at a target on the door of what he considered was a deserted sawmill. The lad was behind the door and the bullet struck him.

DESOLATION IN WAKE OF FLOOD

Tennessee Land Owners Working to Hold Back River.

COTTON GROUND UNDER WATER

Mail Service Being Carried on Through Emergency Channels from Ohio River to Rocky Mountains —Many Towns Isolated.

Memphis, Tenn., April 8.—The flood crest, rapidly going south, is leaving behind it a wake of desolation which will cost planters millions of dollars and leave thousands homeless. For fifty miles below Memphis the land owners and renters are still desperately working to hold back the rushing river, but with scant success.

From six to ten feet of water floods the fertile St. Francis basin, the source of one-tenth of the entire cotton crop of the world. It will be days before this water will have run off, and days before the river will have lowered to a sufficient depth to allow the planters to rebuild their levees.

Interruption of the mail service is the latest problem which confronts both the residents of the valley and the government officials. From the Ohio river to the Rocky mountains, as showing the greatest scope of this record flood, the mail service is being carried on through emergency channels, and in many districts no mail has been received since Tuesday.

Most of the cities and towns in the Mississippi valley are isolated so far as mail communication is concerned, and the situation in the lower valley continues to grow more serious. Henry M. Robinson, railway mail superintendent at New Orleans, reported by wire that the volume of water now moving out of the Mississippi in the lower river is unprecedented and further trouble is expected before it has passed off into the Gulf of Mexico.

J. M. Mastin, superintendent at Omaha, reports the same conditions with ice gorges in the northwest tributaries, the Loup, Platte and Elkhorn rivers.

Short end trains and substitute mail trains are making short connections throughout the valley. In some places pouches of mail are being carried across open places in the trackage by cable from one short end train to another.

Postmaster General Hitchcock issued instructions to every railway mail superintendent in the valley to use every effort to keep the mails moving and avoid so far as possible congestion at any junction or big handling point, so that they can be moved quickly when regular traffic is resumed.

WILL STICK FOR RECOGNITION

Leaders of Mine Workers Prepare for Conference in Philadelphia.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 8.—The district leaders of the mine workers will leave here Tuesday for the conference in Philadelphia, and will meet National President White there the same day. There will not be as many delegates to this conference as there were in New York. According to the ruling of President White only the district presidents and their secretaries will attend. President White is privileged to call in the national board member of each district if he so desires. This he will likely do, in order that the national body may have proper representation.

The mine leaders will leave here with the determination to accept nothing but recognition of the union as basis of settlement.

MINE WORK STARTS TUESDAY

Some Englishmen So Anxious to Labor They Begin This Morning.

London, April 8.—Reports from the mining districts state that, with few exceptions, the miners are ready to obey the order of their federation and return to work on Tuesday. The men at some pits are so anxious to return that they ignored the Easter Monday holiday and resumed work today. The remainder are likely to go back to work on Tuesday as ordered.

The output at many of the mines for several days will be small or nil, as much clearing and repairing work will be necessary.

LOSS OF LIVES CLOSES MINE

Fee Owners of Norman Iron Pit Cancel the Lease.

Duluth, Minn., April 8.—So great has been the loss of life during the last eight months in the operation of the big Norman mine, near Virginia, Minn., that the fee owners have cancelled the lease held by Oliver Iron Mining company (the United States Steel corporation.) The notice was served Feb. 15, but the papers were not filed until now.

Not only has there been a great loss of life in the operation of the mine during the last year, say the fee owners, but the mine has been operated in a "reckless, haphazard, and ruinous manner" they claim.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Almost A Miracle

One of the most startling changes seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all are family thought he was going into consumption, but be began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Know he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MISERY loves company, but the sentiment is not reciprocated.

Michigan

John Lane, St. Joseph, Mich., a member of A. W. Chapman, Post No. 21, G. A. R. was cured through the use of Foley Kidney Pills. He says, "I tried various kidney remedies but all failed to help me until I took Foley Kidney Pills and I can honestly say that cured me completely."

WANT NO CLERICAL CLOTHES

"What did you send these things around to me for?" he asked. "They seem to be in pretty good condition."

"They are in good enough condition," said the missionary, "but they will never be acceptable to the derelicts we expect to distribute them among until the ministerial cut is modified. Every coat in the lot has belonged to a preacher, and its style betrays its ownership.

"Most of the men who apply at the mission for hand-me-downs haven't much pride left, but they balk at a parson's coat. Unless actually driven to it, they will not wear one.

"Clothes twice as badly worn but of a business cut are chosen instead. Most ministers have hard work disposing of their clerical clothes. Conscientious scruples against masquerading in religious garb have nothing to do with these men refusing the ministers' coats. They simply don't want them because they dread the taunts the coats are likely to provoke among their fellows."

Old Volume Sold.

Bunyan's copy of Foxe's "Book of Martyrs" was offered at auction at Messrs. Sotheby's rooms in London recently. There were only two bids, and the book was finally bought in at $3,000. The vendors were the trustees of the Bedford Literary institute. The book was to have been sold in London last May, the institute being in financial difficulties. It was expected to realize from $10,000 to $50,000. At the last moment, however, the attorney general intervened in order to ascertain whether the trustees were empowered with the right to sell the book, and it was withdrawn from the sale. After investigation the attorney general came to the conclusion that the sale could not be withdrawn, and consequently the book came under the hammer. A first edition of Walton's "Complete Angler," published in 1653, at 35 cents, fetched $3,750.

Drainage of the Zuyder Zee.

A great project is again before the people of Holland—the draining of the Zuyder Zee. The sea, which, as every one knows, is at the north of Holland and covers an area of 50,000 hectares, a hectare being practically two acres and a half.

Just half a century ago a scheme to drain the southern portion of the sea was first mooted and although it received considerable support, the opposition was greater, but now an association has been formed and a bill will be introduced into the chamber. The promoters see that with an increased population means must be taken to enlarge the country and this reclamation of the sea is suggested as capable of accomplishment. If the sea is conquered there are several lakes which can be dealt with later.

Modern Appliances for Whaling.

The use of the modern whaling cannon in place of the old-fashioned and more picturesque hand harpoon has been familiar for a good many years, but it is probably not widely known that another modern invention has been pressed into service. Compressed air is now pumped into the whale's carcass until it resembles a toy balloon, and the hole filled with oakum, so that the whaler may set the carcass afloat with a buoy to mark it, without danger of its sinking.

In this way time can be saved in starting on the pursuit of other whales which may be in sight.

CANARY AN ARDENT MOTORIST

Atlanta Man Has a Bird That Has Traveled More Than 20,000 Miles in Automobile.

Many dogs and cats regularly receive their airings in motor cars and have shown distinct preference for these rides, but a canary bird is the latest addition to the ranks of motorists.

Dick Levi of Atlanta, Ga., is the particular canary that has the distinction of being the first in this field and he is said to have traveled over twenty thousand miles in a motor car. J. E. Levi of Atlanta tells an interesting story of Dick. Dick's first ride in an automobile was in a Premier 24, bought by Mr. Levi in Philadelphia in 1906. Dick was one year old at that time, and with Mr. and Mrs. Levi his mileage around Philadelphia, including several trips to Boston, was ten thousand miles.

The three motorists made a trip of twelve hundred miles from Boston to Atlanta in October, 1906, being the first to cover this route in a motor car. They went by way of Baltimore and Philadelphia over the mountains, along the Southern railway. On several occasions they were out all night in their car, sleeping by the roadside. Mr. Levi says they spent three weeks in a constant rain during this trip, all the time running on low gear. Mr. Levi is almost always accompanied by Mrs. Levi, who is also an expert at the wheel of a car, and Dick is always the third member of the party. He has become so enamored of motoring that they are afraid to leave him at home for fear that he will do himself bodily injury. Motoring apparently apparently agrees with him, as he is extremely hardy and is a great singer. Besides his motoring he has made three trips to the Pacific coast and return by train. Mr. and Mrs. Levi would part with him under no conditions, an offer of $250 having been refused, it is said.

JAPANESE SILK IS REVIVED

Chemical Process Has Been Discovered That Strengthens the Fabric and Facilitates Spinning.

According to the North China Daily News the ladies of America and Europe are to have the restoration of the popular Japanese silk fabrics in large supply and greater beauty than ever before. It is claimed that an expert connected with the Fuji Spinning company has discovered a chemical process which will be a great boon to the spinners and also to the admirers of Japanese silk.

While Japanese sericulture was yet in a primitive condition no chemical was used to soften the cocoon before it was spun into thread. Later the spinner succeeded in getting out a thin, soaplike substance, which fulfilled the long-felt want with some success; but the difficulty was that it weakened the fabric and took away the natural luster. Thus Japanese silk has been steadily losing the popularity it once enjoyed and its market has from time to time been encroached upon by the Italian product.

Mr. Inouye has now hit upon a method of strengthening the elasticity and strength of the fabric, and at the same time greatly facilitating the spinning into thread. One more benefit from this process will be that manufacturers will be able to obtain 15 per cent. more produce than by the old-fashioned way.

Furthermore, the new substance has an antigerm and anticorroding effect, and will not injure the hands of operatives. Some time ago an American is reported to have discovered a chemical compound which would preserve silk; and this is said to be something similar in composition to the Japanese invention.

"TOURING JAPAN AND CHINA"

Tuesday April 23, will be the date of the final number of the Entertainment Course. This number will be put on at the Methodist church. Dr. Edwin E. Rogers Pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Bowling Green, Ohio, will give his lecture on, "Touring Japan and China."

Dr. Rogers has been a great traveler. Recently he visited the Philippines, Hawaiian Islands, Ceylon, Japan, Korea, went 2000 miles into the interior of China, penetrated the regions of India, Persia and the Holy land. Went far up the Nile in Egypt and visited the leading countries of Europe. He traveled for information rather than pleasure. He is a careful observer of the manners and customs of the people. Keep this date in mind you cannot afford to miss it.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES

On the evening of Good Friday Union Services were held preparatory for the coming Easter and Easter Sunday was most fittingly observed.

At four o'clock p. m. The Baptist church gave a most beautiful program of Easter music the chorus rendered several numbers which were highly appreciated, the Philomel Quartette was at its best and each soloist seemed to sing with the spirit and the understanding also.

The church was made beautiful with palm, ferns and the Cross that was uplifted for all, stood in the foreground. From the invocation to the benediction everyone listened with close attention.

At five o'clock the Methodist church gave Porter's Oratorio "The Resurrection" and here also the singers were at their best. The music was interspersed by several readings which were most delightfully given and added much to the interest of the entertainment. The close attention given showed how highly the audience appreciated every number.

At 7 o'clock at the Presbyterian church the Sunday School assisted by the Male Quartette and a quartette of young girls gave a most interesting program. The church was beautifully decorated in white and green and the Easter spirit was everywhere manifest. The praises of the risen Christ echoed sweet and clear throughout the church. The large audiences that met in each church felt that this was a glorious Easter day.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE MAN ON THE BOX"

What the "Jackson Patriot said of "The Man on the Box."

A thoroughly capable company presented the dramatization of Harold McGrath's "The Man on the Box" at the Atheneum last night. In spite of the fact that it played at prices a trifle lower than those considered standard, the play production deserved to be ranked with the good ones and should have been greeted with much better business than it was.

In the role of the army man masquerading as a coachman—the role made famous by Henry E. Dixey—Walter Scott Weeks was more than capable, and he had the best of support from Marian Johnquest, as Betty. In fact, this young lady was probably the strongest member of a rather good cast, and her vivacious acting greatly enlivened the whole play. Though not exceptional, the balance of the company was good.

The play itself is one that should appeal to almost anyone. There is an intermingling of comedy, with an occasional tense situation as a result of a plot and a counter plot, with a very dramatic ending in the final act.

On Monday April 15 at the Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh theatre goers will have an opportunity of seeing the dramatization of Harold MacGrath's popular novel "The Man on the Box" which was dramatized for Henry E Dixey and in which he starred for two very successful seasons.

The cast of the special company presenting the play here is headed by Walter Scott Weeks, a young and capable actor, supported by Miss Marion Johnquist and a very capable company. "The Man on the Box" has a record of 200 nights in New York, 100 nights in Boston, 187 nights in Chicago. The company playing here is the same company and production appearing at the "Lyceum Theatre" Toledo, this week Thursday, Friday and Saturday and comes here direct from Toledo.

"The Man on the Box" will be presented with all special scenery and effects, with no detail of stage production slighted and the patrons of the house are assured of seeing one of the most delightful comedies of the present day.

"THE ROSARY"

Those who attended "The Rosary" last evening were given a great treat. It was a play of deep feeling and pathos and the final happy ending of doubt and unbelief, the reconciliation of the husband and wife was a grand culmination of an unhappy state of affairs.

MACCABEE DANCE

The Maccabee party at Witherell Hall Friday evening was a very pleasant one, nearly forty couple being present. Coller, Heidenrich and Witherell of Tecumseh, and Miss Hazel Fisk of Clinton furnished the music, with Robert Codling of Tipton to call. The dancing was prolonged until a late hour.

JOLLY SIXTEEN

The Jolly 16 had a most romatic strawride last Thursday evening to the home of Wm. Powell west of town. There were seventeen ladies in the load and judging from the merry laughter, they took their fun with them.

Progressive pedro was the amusement of the evening, Mrs Will Barrett winning 1st prize and Mrs. Chas. Deery 2nd prize. A fine two course supper was served.

This was the last meeting of the season, and was one of the merriest.

In Praise of Frugality.

ACTUAL STARVATION

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief That Should Interest You

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smeling, and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to everyone who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely, nothing could be fairer. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial according to direction. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to sooth the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, B. J. Pulver.

"I have been somewhat costive, but Doan's Regulets gave just the results desired. They act mildly and regulate the bowels perfectly."—George B. Krause, 306 Walnut Ave, Altoona, Pa.

Zulla.

It is stated that no matter what class of animal is brought to Jerez de la Frontera, Spain, in two generations it acquires remarkable toughness and endurance. This is attributed partly to the climate, but principally to their feeding on a rich, wild clover called "zulla," found only in the province of Cadiz, which people there say is the finest food in the world for horses.

The zulla is very rich in sustenance and grows to three or four feet in height, and with more luxuriance in chalky, clayey soil, such as is found here in the vineyards which produce the famous Jerez wine or sherry. It is never sown or cultivated, as it seems to grow best wild.

Difference of Degree.

"What is the difference," asked a dear and trusting sister of Deacon Philander of Osborne the other day, "between the probate judge and the district judge?"

"Well," replied old Philander, with one of his rare smiles, "you tell the probate judge you can't live without her and you tell the district judge you can't live with her."—New Orleans Picayune.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

WHEN meekness becomes self-conscious, it vanishes.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Della Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

is the way Miss Alta Abel of West Baden, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes: "I was a complete wreck—always tired, worn out and nervous. I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed.

"Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life. That nervous and tired feeling is all gone. I have gained in health, flesh and strength, until I feel like another person." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, overworked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

HIGH LIGHTS ON PARADE

Atlantic City, N. J., April 8.—A hundred thousand visitors joined in the resort's board walk Easter parade. The pageant, featured by a riot of colors, reached its height at noon. Hosiery and bonnets vied for popular attention when frisky west winds swept the esplanade.

Heavy showers interrupted the afternoon parade and in the evening a steady rain set in.

Dies Greeting Aged Sister.

Logansport, Ind., April 8.—"I must see my sister before she dies. She is eighty years old now," said Samuel Cotner, general manager of the Bankers' Life Insurance company, Omaha, Neb., and founder of the Cotner university, of Lincoln, Neb. Cotner and his wife came here to visit Mrs. Mary Barnett. Cotner dropped dead of heart failure as he entered his sister's home. He was sixty-nine years old.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys
Spells of backeache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.
Many Tecumseh people rely on it.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney sufferers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

HARD FIGHT WTH EAGLE

New York Bird Attacks a Lumberman Who Killed Its Companion.

Glen Falls, N. Y., April 8.—Milton Steives of this city was nearly killed in a fight with a bald eagle near North Creek lumber camp. He was rescued, badly wounded, by a fellow lumberman and is under the care of physicians. Steives came upon two eagles devouring the carcass of a calf and shot one of the birds. Before he could reload his gun the other eagle attacked him.

He struck at the bird repeatedly with his rifle butt, but the eagle, although one of its wings was broken, was getting the better of the battle when a rescuer killed the feathered fighter with a club. The bird weighed seventy-five pounds and measured nine feet from tip to tip.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

KILLS SNAKES IN KALAMAZOO

Six Are Slain in One Afternoon in Business Section.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 8.—On South Burdick street, where hundreds of people were passing every few minutes, a snake hunt took place. A four-foot reptile crawling across the street was discovered and put to death by a number of boys. Within half an hour two more snakes were discovered in the same place.

Before night six snakes had been killed within 100 feet of the place where the first one was found. How the snakes happened to be right in the business section of the city no one can tell.

Contractor J. T. Adams of Columbus, O., has been notified to report at Coldwater to begin the work of laying the ties and rails.

With the exception of four miles between Beadle Lake and Battle Creek, the roadbed is already graded. It is said that cars will be running by Oct. 1. Senator A. G. Kingman is president of the company.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 22nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of Interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles, with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the same premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899, and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D. 1912.

Katherine A. Stockwell, Mortgagee.

BOY HURLED OVER FALLS

Drowned in Whirlpool When Snow Bank Gives Way.

Calumet, Mich., April 8. — Eugene Sullivan, aged fifteen, of Calumet, was hurled a distance of 170 feet into a whirlpool at the foot of Houghton Douglass falls, when a bank of snow upon which he was standing gave way.

Several hundred persons who were watching the swirling waters of the falls, now unusually high, saw the boy go to his death. He came up once, shouted for aid, clutched wildly at a cake of ice, and then disappeared.

Declares Rate Is All Right.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 8.—Answer has been filed in circuit court by the Michigan railroad commission to the suit brought by the G. R. & I. railroad against the commission, restraining it from enforcing the "nine-cent" rate on lumber between Manistee and Detroit. The commission denies that the new rate is illegal or unreasonable and insists that it should be enforced.

New Corporations.

Lansing, Mich., April 8.—New corporations: Elite Laundry company, Detroit, $2,500; stockholders, Wilber and Luella A. Peck and James J. McQuaid; National Silica company, Detroit, $1,000; Regner-Graef company, Detroit, $12,000, stockholders, Bert W. Regner, Anthony H. Graef and Edward E. Heinold; Schroeder-Sessions company, Mancelona, $5,000.

Russians Coming to Michigan.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 8.—John I. Gibson, secretary of the West Michigan Development bureau, says that Russian colonists are coming to western Michigan who have a fund of about $50,000 to invest in land. They comprise a sect which is not in harmony with the Greek church or the Russian government, and desire to leave Russia.

FAVOR PROPOSED INTERLAKE CANAL

Members of Waterways Commission Make Report.

TO CONNECT ERIE AND MICHIGAN

Recommend Also that Railroad and Steamship Ownership Should Not Be Vested in Same Corporation.

Washington, April 8. — Important recommendations for legislation affecting the railroads of the country that own or are interested in steamship lines are contained in final report of the United States national waterways commission. The commission recommends to congress that the power of the interstate commerce commission be extended so as to include control over all water lines. The commission recommends that all water lines be made subject to the same rules and regulations as are now imposed on railroad corporations in so far as they are applicable. The commission says the time has come to take steps to prevent the elimination of water competition through railroad ownership.

This report, following on the heels of the Panama canal bill now pending in the house, which would compel the divorcing of the railroad and steamship business, indicates that there is trouble ahead for some of the railroad lines interested in extensive water business. The waterways commission is headed by Senator Burton of Ohio, and among its members is Senator Smith of Michigan.

SENATOR BURTON.

The commission believes the federal government would be justified in cooperating with the localities which are to furnish funds for the construction of the canal connecting Lake Erie with the Ohio river near Pittsburg to the extent of building the approaches to the canal and of lending army engineers to perform engineers' work. It is estimated that this canal will cost about $60,000,000 and the commission recommends that when this money is in sight the government shall furnish such engineer officers as may be required free of charge.

Concerning the Lake Erie-Lake Michigan proposed barge canal which is intended to serve as a connecting link in a water route from New York to Chicago, the commission says:

"In view of the importance of this project in furnishing additional means of transportation in a locality where it is much needed for the benefit of through traffic as well as for marketing farm products, and for taking care of the needs of the rapidly growing manufacturing centers through which it would pass, the commission recommends that a survey be made by the engineer corps of the United States army to determine what is the most feasible route, the probable cost of construction and its traffic possibilities. In selecting the best route, not only engineering difficulties should be considered, but also the best location of the canal with reference to its use both for local purposes and for through traffic. For carrying out the survey, the commission recommends that a sum not to exceed $15,000 be appropriated by congress.

Find Four Riot Indictments.

Rock Island, Ill., April 8.—The special grand jury called to investigate the causes leading up to the recent riot in which two were killed and nine wounded found indictments against four persons. The indictments will be presented in court Thursday.

Insurance Payable to Undertaker.

Brazil, Ind., April 8.—John Christenberry, fifty-one, a rag picker, is dead here. The trustees was preparing to bury the body when it was found that the man had carried insurance on his life, made payable to Richard Lawson, an undertaker, which was sufficient to give him a respectable burial.

Wants Curfew an Hour Later.

Aurora, Ill., April 8.—A curfew bell to toll at 10 o'clock, instead of at the time honored 9 o'clock, is now advocated by the mothers' congress of Aurora, to call children sixteen years old and less from the streets at night.

Supreme Court Judge Dies.

Martinsville, Ind., April 8. — Judge James H. Jordan of the Indiana supreme court, is dead here.

MONEY IN SUGAR BEETS

Man Who Was a Weeder Purchases Fine Farm.

Saginaw, Mich., April 8.—That the sugar beet industry in Michigan is an important one for the state in more than one way is evidenced in the sale of the 160-acre farm formerly owned by Archie Brown to Casper Miller, a Russian, for $19,500.

The story in connection with the sale is very interesting. Eleven years ago Miller came here with his family, composed of his wife and five children, three boys and two girls, and immediately took up sugar beet work. Contracts were secured to care for several acres of beets, the entire family working during the season. Miller branched out and took larger contracts, until he had sufficient money to buy a home. He was thrifty, and today possesses as fine a farm as any in the state.

New York Uses Much Water.

In the whole world there are only about 1,500,000 people. An inch of rain on our watershed normally would give two gallons of water for every man, woman and child on the surface of the earth. Put it another way: If every man, woman and child on the face of the earth should walk up to to the lakes, reservoirs, etc., which hold New York city's water supply, and each pour in two gallons of water, it would not be enough to last that city ten days.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Recommendation for the summary removal from office of ten members of various city commissions is carried in a formal letter sent Mayor James Rolph, Jr., by the grand jury of San Francisco.

The ten named are holdovers from the administration of former Mayor P. C. McCarthy. Malfeasance in office is charged.

HORSE MEDICINE ISSUE

Little Progress Made in Trial of Case Against Michigan Physician.

Bad Axe, Mich., April 6. — Little if any progress was made towards securing a jury to try Dr. Robert A. McGregor of Ubly, on a charge of having caused the death of Scyrel Sparling, by administering poison.

Scyrel Sparling, his two brothers and father all died from suspicious causes and when their bodies were exhumed, each was found to contain traces of poison.

Much of the time used by the defense in examining veniremen was consumed in questioning the men as to their knowledge of the effect upon a human being of certain horse medicine known to contain arsenic.

A number of the talesmen who are farmers, and said to be acquainted with the medicine, were quizzed as to their opinion of the size of a dose, which might be safely administered to a person.

The defense challenged one venireman for cause who said he had a fixed opinion. It is understood that the prosecution has summoned sixty-seven witnesses and that Miss Margaret Gibbs, nurse, who is awaiting trial on a charge of being an accessory after the fact in the alleged murder, is to appear as one of them.

GOVERNOR OSBORN IN FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Michigan Governor Not Candidate for Re-Election.

Makes Reply to Letters, Personal Requests and Inquiries of Delegations and County Endorsements.

Lansing, Mich., April 9. — A final announcement that he will not be a candidate for re-election was issued Monday by Governor Osborn, in which he says:

"I will not be a candidate this year for governor. It seems necessary and proper to make this statement at this time. This is my reply to hundreds of letters, personal requests, inquiries of delegations and endorsements of counties.

"I confess that I am personally gratified by the active insistence of so many that I should become a candidate. I do not desire office. I have at no time thought of going or have spoken voluntarily to anybody of going as a delegate to the Republican national convention. I have at no time thought of being a candidate for the vice presidency. In other words, I am in exactly the same frame of mind that I was in December 6, 1910, when, I announced that, I would not be a candidate for a second term."

The governor goes on at some length, answering criticisms of his official course, reviewing the work of his administration, and declares he hopes the Republicans will nominate Roosevelt for president and that the Democrats will nominate Woodrow Wilson for the reason that, "Whichever of them is elected will insure an administration in fullest sympathy with the highest welfare of all the people."

GRAND RIVER RECEDING

Three Boys Narrowly Miss Death at Ionia When Boat Hits Tree.

Ionia, Mich., April 10.—Three boys, Leah Smith, Walter Harley and Vere Campbell, nearly lost their lives when they were swept under the Pere Marquette trestle. Their boat was smashed against a tree into which they climbed until a boat could rescue them.

Grand river lowered several inches here and unless heavy rains come on there will be but little to fear. The Steele street bridge, which was completely covered with water, is once more clear, also the Hayes Ionia company property which was covered by the flood, will be ready for work within the next few days. Both Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk are skirmishing the towns for bags and the Pere Marquette has sandbagged the road east of Cleveland street, which is washing badly.

Eaton Farm Home Burns.

Charlotte, Mich., April 9.—The Emma Aulls estate farm residence, two miles south of here, was totally destroyed by fire. The household goods of the tenant, Edward Brown, were also burned. The family was away from home at the time of the fire. The loss will reach $1,400. A defective stove is given as cause.

Freight Wreck at Orleans.

Ionia, Mich., April 9.—The Pere Marquette was blocked at Orleans by a freight wreck due to spreading rails. Seven cars were thrown in the ditch and forty rods of track were torn up. Passenger trains had to go around by Stanton to reach Ionia.

BIG STEAMER AFIRE AT SEA IS BEACHED

Ontario, of Merchants' and Miners' Line, in Flames.

General Wireless "S. O. S." Sent Out Asking Steamers to Go to the Ontario's Aid—Burning Vessel Beached.

The Merchants' and Miners' line steamer Ontario, which carried fifteen passengers and a crew of forty, is on the rocks off Montauk point, with a fire raging fiercely in her hold. The passengers were taken off by a tug early in the morning. The crew is still aboard fighting the fire.

The first message was picked up at the Point Judith wireless station at 2 o'clock. A few minutes later a second message was received saying the operator on the steamer would soon be obliged to leave his room because of the heat. Efforts were being made, it was said, to reach Montauk Point to beach the steamer.

The naval wireless station sent out a general "S. O. S." call, asking all steamers near Montauk Point to go to the assistance of the Ontario. The naval station also took steps to send the revenue cutter Acushnet, at Woods Hole, to the steamer's assistance. Tugs also started out from New London. Soon after the Watchhill life saving crew also started in a big power boat.

Meanwhile the Ontario, under its own steam, reached Montauk Point and was beached about a mile and a half west of the life saving station there. It landed its passengers shortly after 4:30 o'clock. They went ashore just after the fire broke through the deck, making further attempt at fighting it impossible. The passengers were landed after a battle with the surf. None was hurt, although most of them were drenched, according to a wireless message.

Soon after the passengers quit the vessel the flames reached a point barely fifteen feet away from the wireless room. The wrecking tug Tasco from New London is near the scene. She is equipped with wireless.

At 8:30 Captain Bond sent word to shore that the fire was under control. The vessel was then hard aground and apparently in no danger of breaking up. A wrecking tug is on the way from New Yok to pull the vessel off the rocks, if possible, when the fire is extinguished.

WIND HURLS HOUSE 200 FEET

A windstorm visited the northern suburbs of Chicago. Frame buildings were torn from their foundations, chimneys were blown down, windows were broken, and greenhouses were crushed by the drive of a forty-five mile wind weighted with a heavy rain. Lightning also did considerable damage. A score of persons were injured.

The most spectacular event happened near Niles Center on the farm of Peter Tilges. The farmer, his wife and five children were in the small frame house when it was lifted into the air and carried 200 feet before it again touched the ground. All of the occupants were slightly injured, two of the children being burned when they fell with a stove through the floor as the house touched the ground.

FLOOD IS GREATEST IN RECENT YEARS

Eight Persons Drowned and 7,000 More Homeless.

Seven thousand people homeless, 10,000 more fleeing or preparing for instant flight, eight persons drowned, a property loss extending into the tens of millions, dozens of cities up and down the river under water or menaced, and levees giving way before the pressure of the vast wastes of water like cardboard, briefly tells the story of the greatest flood in late history.

Everywhere a grim and determined fight against the great "father of waters" is being waged. Millions of bags of sand and dirt are being used to strengthen levees, long since weakened by the pressure of the flood and by long continued rains. Everywhere in the entire water-swept valley men are working with but one idea or purpose that of staving off impending breaks that would sweep away homes and perhaps lives. In the wake of the flood is the grim spectacle of pestilence which may result from the overflow when the waters recede.

The five-day fight of the people of Cairo to save the Cairo drainage district ended in a complete rout and all hope of saving the industrial and agricultural district of 8,000 acres just north of that city was abandoned. In place of beautiful alfalfa fields and fine manufacturing plants there is a sea of turbid water. The break in the Mobile and Ohio embankment was the beginning of the end.

Water ran through the crevasse all day, but hope was entertained until late in the afternoon of stopping the flow at the Illinois Central right of way. About 3 p. m. a fresh break occurred in the Big Four embankment near the plant of the Pioneer Pole and Shaft company. With a rush the water swept in, hurling houses and lumber piles before them. All along a five-mile stretch of levee from the Illinois Central bridge to Cacho river, the water was up to the very top of the levee. There was nothing to build on and no hope whatever of checking the flow. Hundreds of workers were strung along this levee. They were hastily rushed back into the city for fear that they would be caught between the breaks and drowned. At the plants of the Chicago Mill and Lumber company and the Weis Peterson Box company men were put to work in a desperate effort to remove the veneer material before it was washed away.

Reports from Arkansas towns back of the St. Francis levee, across the river from Memphis, state that many of them are partly flooded from backwater in the inland streams. The St. Francis levee protects an area as large as the state of Delaware and 500,000 people. Thousands have fled to the hills.

The Ohio and Wabash rivers in Indiana, already racing over their levees in many places, have not yet reached their highest mark. The weather observer at Evansville, Ind., predicts the crest will be reached next Tuesday. Most of the levees are strained to the breaking point now, and can never hold out with a continued rise until next Tuesday. In some places the Wabash river is fifteen miles wide and considerable live stock has been lost. It is estimated that losses from the flood along the lower Ohio will be the greatest since 1884.

The arrival at Charleston, Mo., of mail by boat from Belmont, Mo., brings tidings that the latter town has been wiped off the face of the earth and the citizens housed in a house boat where the postoffice is doing business. Loss in property and live stock is beyond estimate and many have lost the savings of a lifetime. It is feared also many lives have been lost in this section.

A high wind caused the breaking of the government levee six miles below Hickman, Ky. Hickman itself is partly submerged and a majority of its citizens are refugees in nearby towns. The break came at 4 p. m. and left hundreds of thousands of dollars' damage in its wake. No lives were lost as far as can be ascertained.

The Mississippi is eight miles wide at Quincy, Ill., and has reached the highest point since 1905.

THREE DIE IN CRASH

Street Car Struck by Freight Train in Chicago.

At Chicago one woman, a man and an infant were killed and eighteen other persons injured, some of them fatally, in a collision of a Chicago and Alton freight train, east bound, and a south bound Kedzie avenue street car at West Thirty-eighth street and South Kedzie avenue.

The car had reached the middle of the crossing when the freight train, east bound, crashed into it.

The car was derailed and one side of it crushed. Broken wood and pieces of shattered glass from the windows were showered over the passengers, most of whom were thrown in a heap on the floor.

LIFE LOST IN GRAND RAPIDS

Man Falls into Canal While Watching Raging Waters.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 10.—The first death due to the flood occurred here when an unidentified man, while watching the raging waters, fell into the east side canal behind the Garrick theater and was drowned.

Grand river registered 15.8 feet in depth, having remained stationary at that stage all day. At 7 o'clock the waters began to recede and a gradual drop will probably continue.

Weather Director Schneider says that practically all danger is now past as only heavy rains will cause new danger.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. A story that is right up to the minute and guaranteed to interest every lover of good fiction. As exhilarating as a ride in a mile-a-minute auto.

CHAPTER I.

The roaring reports of the motor fell into abrupt silence, as the driver brought his car to a halt.

"You signaled?" he called across the grind of set brakes.

In the blending glare of the searchlights from the two machines, the gray one arriving and the limousine drawn to the roadside, the young girl stood, her hand still extended in the gesture which had stopped the man who now leaned across his wheel.

"Oh, please," she appealed again.

On either side stretched away the Long Island meadows, dark, soundless, apparently uninhabited. Only this spot of light broke the monotony of dreariness. A keen, chill, October wind sighed past, stirring the girl's delicate gown as its folds lay unheeded in the dust, fluttering her furlined cloak and shaking two or three childish curls from the bondage of her velvet hood. The driver swung himself down and came toward her with the unhasting swiftness of one trained to the unexpected.

"I beg pardon—can I be of some use?" he asked.

"We are lost," she confessed hurriedly. "If you could set us right, I should be grateful. I—we must get home soon. I have been a guest at a house somewhere here, and started to return to New York this afternoon. The chauffeur does not know Long Island; we cannot seem to find any place. And now we have lost a tire. I was afraid—"

She broke off abruptly, as her companion descended from the limousine.

"We only want to know the way; we're all right," he explained. "This is my cousin; I came out after her, you see. Don't get so worried, Emily—we'll go straight on as soon as Anderson changes the tire."

He huddled his words slightly and spoke too rapidly, the round, good-humored face he turned to the white light was too flushed; otherwise there was nothing unusual in his appearance. And his caste was evident and unquestionable in spite of any circumstance. There was no anger in girl's dark eyes as she gazed straight before her, only pity and helpless distress.

"I can tell your chauffeur the road," the driver of the gray car quietly said. "Have you far to go?"

"To the St. Royal," she answered, looking at him. "My uncle is there. Is that far?"

"No; you can reach there by ten o'clock. I will speak to your chauffeur."

"Do, like a good fellow," the other man interposed. "Awfully obliged. You're not angry, Emily," he added, lowering his voice, and moving nearer her. "Since we're engaged, why should you get frightened simply because I proposed we get married tonight instead of waiting for a big wedding? I thought it was a good idea, you know. It isn't my fault Anderson got lost instead of getting us home for dinner, is it?"

"Hush, Dick," she rebuked, hot color sweeping her face. "You, you are not well. And we are not engaged; you forget. Just because people want us to be—" Too proud to let her steadiness quiver, she broke the sentence.

If the driver had heard, and it was scarcely possible that he had not, he made no sign. By the acetylene light he produced an envelope and pencil, and proceeded to sketch a map showing the route to the limousine's chauffeur.

"Understand it?" he queried, concluding. He had a certain decision of manner, not in the least arrogant, but the result of a serene self-surety that somehow accorded with his lithe, trained grace of movement. A judge of men would have read him an athlete, perhaps in an unusual line.

"Yes, sir," the chauffeur replied. "I'll get Miss Ffrench home in no time after I get the tire on."

The indiscretion of the spoken name was ignored, except for a slight lift of the hearer's eyebrows.

"How long does it take you to change a tire?"

"About half an hour; it's night, of course."

An odd, choking gurgle sounded from the gray machine, where a dark figure had sat until now in quiescent muteness.

"Half an hour!" echoed the gray machine's driver, and faced toward the chuckle. "Rupert, it isn't in your contract, but do you want to come over and change this tire?"

"I'll do it for you. Darling," was the sweet response; the small figure rolled over the edge of the car with a cat-like celerity. "Where are your tools, you chauffeur? Quick!"

The bewildered chauffeur mechanically reached for a box on the running-board, as the young assistant came up, grinning all over his malign dark face.

"Oh, quicker! What's the matter, rheumatism? They wouldn't have you in a training camp for motor trucks on Sunday. Hustle, please."

There never had been anything done to that sedate limousine quite as this was done. Even the preoccupied girl looked on in fascination at a rapidity of unwasted movement suggesting a conjuring feat.

"By George!" exclaimed her escort. "A splendid man you've got there! Really, a splendid chauffeur, you know."

"Would you like to get into your car?" he asked the girl. "You will be able to start very soon."

"I see that," she acknowledged gratefully. "Thank you; I would rather wait here."

"Is your chauffeur trustworthy?"

"Oh, yes; he has been in my uncle's employ for three years. But he was never before out here, in this place."

There was a pause, filled by the soft monotone of insults drifting from the side of the limousine, for Rupert talked while he worked and his fellow-worker did not please him.

"Wrench, baby hippo! Oh, look behind you where you put it—you need a memory course. You ought to be passing spools to a lady with a sewing machine. Did you ever see a motor car before? There, pump her up, do." He rose, drew out his watch and glanced at it. "Five minutes; I'll have to beat that day after tomorrow."

The driver looked over at him and their eyes laughed together. Now, for the first time the girl noticed that across the shoulders of both men's jerseys ran in silver letters the name of a famous foreign automobile.

"I am very grateful, indeed," she said bravely and graciously. "I wish I could say more, or say it better. The journey will be short, now."

But all her dignity could not check the frightened shrinking of her glance, first toward the interior of the limousine and then toward the man who was to enter there with her. And the driver of the gray machine saw it.

"We have done very little," he returned. "May I put you in your car?"

The chauffeur was gathering his tools, speechlessly outraged, and making ready to start. Seated among the rugs and cushions, under the light of the luxurious car, the girl deliberately drew off her glove and held out her small uncovered hand to the driver of the gray machine.

"Thank you," she said again, meeting his eyes with her own, whose darkness contrasted oddly with the blonde curls clustered under her hood.

"You are not afraid to drive into the city alone?" he asked.

"Alone! Why, my cousin—"

"Your cousin is going to stay with me."

She flung back her head; amazement, question, relief struggled over her sensitive face, and finally melted into irrepressible mirth under the fine amusement of his regard.

"You are clever—and kind, to do that! No, I am not afraid."

He closed the door.

"Take your mistress home," he bade the chauffeur. "Crank for him, Rupert."

"Why, why—" stammered the limousine's other passenger, turning as the motor started.

No one heeded him.

"By-by, don't break any records," Rupert called after the chauffeur. "Hold yourself in, do. If you shed any more tires, telegraph for me, and if I'm within a day's run I'll come put them on for you and save you time."

Silence closed in again, as the red tall light vanished around a bend. The gray car's driver nodded curtly to the stupefied youth in the middle of the road.

"Unless you want to stay here all night, you'd better get in the machine," he suggested. "My name's Lestrange—I suppose yours is Ffrench?"

"Dick Ffrench. But, see here, you mean well, but I'm going with my cousin. I'd like a drive with you, but I'm busy."

UNION DEPOT

Big Musical Comedy Success To Be Presented By Civic Club

Much interest is being manifested in the coming production of "Union Depot" by local talent, which will be given in the Bradley Opera House, Thursday evening April 18th, for the benefit of the Civic Club. Rehearsals are being held every afternoon and evening under the personal direction of Myrtle Randolph Madden of the Bock Entertainment Co.

Sixteen up to date musical numbers will be given in connection with lively Union Depot scenes. Stunning costumes will be displayed, and there will be several elaborate electrical effects. The ladies of the Civic Club are working hard to make the affair a big success. Reserved seats will be on sale Tuesday April 16th, at Hay's Bakery.

THE DUAINE SERVICE GRAND CONCERT

The much anticipated concert by Mr. Duaine Service and assistant artists occurred as planned on Tuesday evening. That it was an unqualified success is the unanimus verdict, and such a musical treat as Tecumsehites can heartily appreciate.

The large auditorium of the Presbyterian church was filled almost to its capacity by a responsive and representative audience of the town's music-lovers while charming decorations of white and green about the rostrum, served as an effective stage-setting.

A slight disappointment was occasioned at the outset by Mr. Weld's announcement that Mrs. Reed of Adrian, was unable to be present on account of illness. Mr. William August Zapfe baritone of Toledo, filled the rather difficult position of substitute in a wholly gratifying manner.

Mr. Zapfe opened the program with the popular "Faust" aria, "Even Bravest Heart." His voice is a bass-baritone of large power and dramatic quality, and the number was given with much ease and grace. He responded to an enthusiastic encore with a ballad which displayed effectively the lyric quality of tone of which he is also master.

Miss Winnifred Ward as reader won her audience from the start. She is a performer of much versatility, combining strength, humor, delicacy and pathos, at every moment under control of the most excellent taste. Her strongest number was probably "The Lost Word" by Van Dyke, with which she greeted her hearers; tho this may be said to have divided honors with the fine impersonation of the book agent, some of the realistic touches in which were fairly convulsing. He selection in French Candian dialect was given with much skill and she responded very graciously to two eager encores. Miss Ward would be assured a warm reception should she again favor Tecumseh with an appearance.

Mr. Service's first entrance was greeted with hearty applause by the friends who were anxious to hear what three years of hard work had accomplished for this young local artist since his last public appearance. The results he presented were in no sense disappointing. It was at once evident that his technique has progressed steadily, while in breadth, power and purity of tone his work is easily entitled to rank with that of many a performer on the concert stage of more maturity and larger experience. It is apparent that Tecumseh is to have cause to be proud of yet another of her sons, when Mr. Service advances into the broader musical field where he is so sure of winning a high place.

The Mendelssohn Concerto was delightfully given. The exquisite tones of the Andante, followed by the brilliant passages of the Finale, gave opportunity for great display of versatility. Mr. Service responded to the burst of applause which greeted his conclusion with a dainty arrangement of his own of Annie Laurie melody.

Merely to say that Mrs. Wood was at the piano is sufficient assurance of satisfaction. She was at her best on this occasion and contributed largely to the success of all the musical numbers. With Mr. Service her accompaniments were especially effective, furnishing adequate support, never over-balancing, and conveying always the feeling of sympathy essential to a harmonious whole. With Mr. Zapfe Mrs Wood surmounted the trying difficulty of appearing almost without preparation since he did not reach town until a short time before the hour for the performance.

Both Mr. Service and Mrs. Wood were remembered by the Men's Class under whose auspices the concert was given, and numerous friends about town with handsome flowers.

Mr. Zapfe's second number, "The Sword of Ferrara," Bullard and Oley Speaks, "On the Road to Mandalay," were as warmly received as his first.

Mr. Service introduced his next number, the popular Legende in G minor of Wieniawski, with a graceful description of his own favorite conception of the theme. This selection was interpreted with great sympathy and won a hearty encore, to which the artist responded with a charming 8th Century Gavorte by Gossec.

After a final groups of readings by Miss Ward, Mr. Service brought the program to a close with the Grand Militaire Fantaisie, Leonard rendered with appropriate dashing style. Here Mr. Service and Mrs Wood seemed fairly to vie with each other in the brilliance of their work. Czibulka's "Love's Dream after the Ball" an encore supplied the final note of popularity to Mr. Service's very heavy program. It is certain that his many admirers wish him all success in his already promising career, of which this occasion has been the brilliant debut.

"THE MAN ON THE BOX"

Few comedies produced in recent years have aroused so much hearty laughter as the play "THE MAN ON THE BOX", taken from Harold McGrath's popular novel of the same name, and the theatre goers of this city undobtedly will be well pleased to learn that this good play will be the attraction at Bradley Opera House, next Monday, April 15.

From the start to finish its plot, its characters, and its incidents are provocation of laughter. Comedy is all in high favor with theatre goers, and the full capacity will surely be required for this performance.

The play will be presented here by a special company, by Mr. Walter Scott Weeks in the role of "Bob Worburton," and supported by Miss Marion Johnquest and a good cast. The play will be staged with special settings, and the production will be complete to the smallest detail. Seats now on sale at Hay's Bakery. This is the same company and production playing at the "Lyceum" theatre, Toledo, last week Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Coming here direct from Toledo.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Della Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams. 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

Elephant Lived for Centuries.

When Alexander the Great conquered Porus, king of India, he took a great elephant that had fought gallantly for the defeated king, named him Ajax, dedicated him to the sun, placed upon him a metal band with the inscription, "Alexander, the son of Jupiter, dedicated Ajax to the sun." The elephant was found alive 350 years later.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys
Spells of backache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

Many Tecumseh people rely on it. Here is Tecumseh proof.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney suffers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE HEART

If the blood is poor and filled with the poisons from diseased kidneys or inactive liver, the heart is not only starved but poisoned as well. There are many conditions due to impure blood—such as dropsy, fainting spells, nervous debility or the many scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc All can be overcome and cured by

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

This supplies pure blood—by aiding digestion, increasing assimilation and imparting tone to the whole circulatory system. It's a heart tonic and a great deal more, having an alterative action on the liver and kidneys, it helps to eliminate the poisons from the blood.

To enrich the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles, thereby feeding the nerves on rich red blood and doing away with nervous irritability, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and do not permit a dishonest dealer to insult your intelligence with the "just as good kind." The "Discovery" has 40 years of cures behind it and contains no alcohol or narcotics. Ingredients plainly printed on wrapper.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of wrapping and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the French cloth-bound book. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsh of Wilkinsburg Pa. come highly recommended as entertainers on lecture courses and we hope the people will avail themselves of the opportunity to spend an enjoyable evening and help the Library at the same time.

ARE MICROBES IN YOUR HAIR?

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness

Professor Hans of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the hair roots, and over come baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair root, follicle, and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises —we simply ask you to give Rexall Hair Tonic a thorough trial and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00 Remember, you can obtain it in Tecumseh only at our store—The Rexall Store. B. J. Pulver.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION

Notice is hereby given that the Democratic County Convention for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State Convention which said State Convention will be held in Bay City, Michigan, on Wednesday, May 15th 1912, at 11 a. m. and for such other business that may properly come before the County Convention, will be held at the Court House in the City of Adrian, on SATURDAY THE 13TH OF APRIL A. D. 1912 at 1:30 p. m.

The several townships of the county and the several wards of the cities of Adrian and Hudson are each entitled to six delegates to the county convention.

All democrats and those in sympathy with democratic principles are cordially invited to attend the County Convention and by a preferential vote taken there manifest their choice of a candidate for the democratic nomination for the office of President of the United States of America.

STEAL WILSON'S SUIT CASE

Chicago Thieves Also Get Candidate's Private Correspondence.

Some thieves in Chicago, believed to have been employed by political enemies, stole a big suit case containing wearing apparel and important private correspondence and papers from the apartments of Governor Woodrow Wilson at the Hotel Sherman. He departed for Syracuse, N. Y., with only the clothes he wore.

The presidential candidate was disturbed when he discovered his loss, but asserted there was nothing in the case that he would fear to show to any interested person or to the country at large.

At Atlantic City, N. J., one hundred thousand visitors joined in the resort's board walk Easter parade. The pageant, featured by a riot of colors, reached its height at noon. Hosiery and bonnets vied for popular attention when frisky west winds swept the esplanade.

Heavy showers interrupted the afternoon parade and in the evening a steady rain set in.

COAL STRIKE ENDED

One Million Men Will Return to the Mines in Great Britain.

At London, Eng., the Miners' federation after a long conference decided to advise all the miners in Great Britain to resume work.

This means that 1,000,000 strikers probably will return to the mines at once, and that 1,500,000 workers in other industries, thrown out of employment through lack of coal, also will be given work again soon.

State Will Not Pay Tips.

The anti-tipping campaign started by commercial travelers has enlisted a powerful recruit in W. E. Davis, state auditor of Kansas. Mr. Davis has decreed that Kansas state officials, when traveling on the state's business, are not entitled to charge the public treasury for tips paid. It cost Kansas just $3,000 in 1911 for tips distributed by state officials, and Mr. Davis has issued a set of rules for the benefit of employes who travel for the state, in which he says; "Tips or gratuities are recognitions of special service, not an actual and necessary expense for the service itself and will not be allowed." The controller of the treasury of the United States, on the other hand, has ruled that tips are a necessary incident of travel and are properly collectible from the public funds.

Too Frivolous.

"I didn't mind my daughter getting engaged now and then."

"Well?"

"But she went and got married to some jobless dub she met at a summer resort. I call that carrying frivolity too far."

SAVE NATION'S MONEY

President Taft Points Out the Way in Message to Congress.

President Taft has just sent to congress his second special message on economy and efficiency in the government service. He recommended the passage of legislation designed to save more than $11,000,000 annually to the people of the United States.

Probably his most striking proposals were that the local government offices in the treasury, postoffice, justice, interior and commerce and labor departments be placed in the classified service and that the revenue cutter service be consolidated with the light house service in the department of commerce and labor.

By the first change, the president said, congress could effect a saving of at least $10,000,000 annually, and, although in his message he gave no figures for the consolidation of the two services of the sea, in a previous message on the same subject early in the year he predicted economies that would reach about $1,000,000 yearly.

ELGIN'S $150,000 FIRE

Illinois Town Suffers Heavy Loss in Business District.

Fire destroyed more than $150,000 in business property at Elgin and for a time threatened part of the business district.

Features were the calling out of Company E, Illinois National Guard, to man four leads of hose, the checking of a near-stampede at the Grand theater, and the going out of electric lights in the business district when water flooded conduits in which the light wires are located.

The firms which suffered loss:

Isaac Cohlen & Co., dry goods, basement, main floor and second floor, 8 Grove avenue, loss of $80,000 on stock, insurance $37,000.

Lethin Brothers, tailor shop, second floor, 8 Grove avenue, $8,000 loss, $3,500 insurance.

Miss Ivy Wallace, milliner, 8 Grove avenue, loss $7,000 in new spring hats not yet unpacked from cases, due to cold weather.

Elgin Fruit and Candy company, 12 Grove avenue, stock worth $20,000 destroyed by fire and water, $14,000 insurance.

First National bank of Elgin, damage to skylights approximately $1,000.

RODGERS FALLS TO DEATH

Trans-Continental Aviator Is Killed in California Flight.

His biplane fell 250 feet into the breakers at Long Beach.

Rodgers fell from his seat in the machine and his body shot downward ahead of his biplane, striking in the shallow surf. His neck was broken and he died instantly.

Calbraith Rodgers was the first aviator to accomplish a trans-continental flight. He flew from Sheepshead Bay, N. J., Sept. 17 and landed at Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 5. It was estimated that in the fifty days he covered 4,231 miles, exceeding Harry Atwood's record by 2,752 miles.

Rodgers was born in New York, Feb 12, 1879 He is a cousin of Lieutenant John Rodgers, U. S. N., who is also an aviator, and a son of the late Captain Rodgers, U. S. A. He is also a grandson of Commodore Perry.

AFTER GRIP

Look Out for Trouble

The after-effects of the Grip are apt to be serious, but a normal healthy condition may be restored in a surprisingly short time by Vinol.

Watertown, Wis.—"After a severe attack of the Grip my system was in a very weakened, nervous and run-down condition. I began taking Vinol with the very best results, and in a short time I began to feel like an entirely different person, and I am better and stronger than I have been for years." Adelaide Gamm. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down, as Vinol, and we ask people in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it.

FORMER DETROIT GIRL

Clara Ward Chimay Rigo Ciccardi to Wed Again.

CLARA TO MARRY AGAIN

Former Princess Chimay Soon to Become Bride.

She Is Also Having Trouble About Her Rent, Which She Must Pay Every Month.

Paris, April 15.—Clara Ward of Michigan, who was at one time the Princess De Chimay and afterwards eloped with and married Rigo, the musician, and later on became Mme. Riccardi, is soon to marry M. Casellato. Just now the much-married American is experienceing difficulties in the courts.

The future Mme. Cssellato rented a flat for which she agreed to pay $6,000 a year. She was unable to keep up her payments and the proprietor claimed the guarantees or that she should pay her rent in monthly installments. The American refused and the proprietor, who was frightened, appealed to the courts for protection. The prospective bride was then ordered to pay her rent monthly or move out.

Her future husband did not appear on the scene.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

One Man Dies and Two Are Hurt at Clinton, Ind.

Clinton, Ind., April 15.—William K. Jardine, thirty, a Scotch miner, was killed and two others were injured when a flash of lightning ran down a clothes line and demolished a shed, under which they had taken refuge.

A dog, which also had sought shelter from the storm under the shed, was killed. Jardine's two companions will recover. The storm swept over a large territory and did considerable damage.

Five Die of Ptomaine Poisoning.

Halifax, N. S., April 15.—Five of the six children of Patrick and Mrs. Magee of St. Mary's Road, Prince Edward Island, are dead from ptomaine poisoning brought on by eating decayed herring for dinner. The sixth child was away when the fatal meal was indulged in.

FRENCH LINER IN DISTRESS IN ICE

Niagara with 700 Passengers Has Narrow Escape.

HOLES STOVE IN HER HULL

Communicates by Wireless with Cunarder Carmania, Which Stands by Until Assured of Other Boat's Safety.

New York, April 15. — The French liner Niagara bound for this port from Havre with about 100 cabin and more than 600 steerage passengers, was for an hour in great peril off the banks on Thursday afternoon.

The sea flowed into her through holes stove in her hull by ice floes, through which she had been picking her way for several hours. Paul Faguet, agent of the French line, got a wireless message saying that the Niagara would dock today. The Cunarder Carmania, in from Liverpool and Queenstown, brought word of the French ship's distress.

Captain Dow of the Carmania found the Atlantic lane unexpectedly frosted when he looked from the bridge seventy feet above the sea on Thursday morning. He had run into an extensive field of ice.

The wireless operator startled Captain Dow about 12:10 p. m. by bringing him a wireless from the Niagara, which was on the starboard quarter of the Cunarder, saying that the Frenchman had two holes punched in her below the water line and would the Carmania stand by her as she was in peril. In about an hour another message came from the Niagara saying that she could take care of herself. The Carmania then changed her course southward and proceeded in a dense fog.

The fog veil would lift occasionally and reveal groups of bergs to the north of the ship. One of these was low lying and long and when Captain Dow got his first glimpse of it faintly in the outline he thought that it was another ship. Within three hours the passengers sighted twenty-five bergs, the greatest number ever seen from a liner, the nearest of which was not more than a quarter of a mile away.

The passengers united in declaring that the vision of the colony of bergs, when the sun came out and broke his lances on their shimmering masses was better than a moving picture show of the highest class. The tank steamer Excelsior, in from Hamburg, passed on Wednesday an ice field fifteen miles long, in which there was a bark, which displayed no signals.

PANIC IN WHEAT PIT

Brokerage Firm Suspends and Another Cleans Up $1,000,000.

Chicago, April 15.—May wheat took a jump of 4½ cents, causing a bear panic on the board of trade.

As a result of the sudden and unexpected rise, C. E. Gifford & Co., members of the board of trade, suspended business, scores of traders found themselves short of delivery, and A. J. Lichtstern, millionaire broker, came out victor to the amount of $1,000,000, it is estimated, when the panic subsided.

TWO ARE KILLED AND FIFTY HURT

Floor of Unfinished New Jersey Church Caves In.

TEMPORARY PROPS GIVE WAY

Planking Bows Into Form of Hopper Into Which Crowd Is Precipitated, and Lumber Piles Fall Upon Struggling Mass.

New York, April 15. — Two women were killed and about fifty persons severely or dangerously injured by the caving in of the floor of an unfinished Roman Catholic church at Harrington Park, N. J.

The temporary wooden supports under the floor could not stand the weight of 300 eager men and women who had rushed into the edifice, snapped and the planking bowed down to the cellar ten feet below in the form of a hopper.

Into this place the men, women and children were thrown and upon them came heavy piles of lumber which had been left in the room. It was this lumber that did most of the damage, although suffocation beneath the struggling mass accounts for the two deaths.

The ceremony of laying and blessing the cornerstone of the little Church of Our Lady of Victory at Harrington Park drew a crowd of about 400 devout churchmen and churchwomen from the surrounding suburbs. The church is really well advanced toward completion, but the cornerstone had not been blessed.

Naugle & Wisener, the contractors, have the stone walls of the basement, the shingled sides and the high gothic shingle roof in place; the belfry installed and the high front steps up. The church sits on a side hill, about 100 yards from the station, so it has not been necessary to do any excavating.

Inside the church the first layer of flooring was put down a week ago, but this was not supported by the iron supports which are to go in there. The carpenters had not thought of it to put anything in there yet, because they did not use the floor. Later they did put beneath it at irregular intervals about ten supports made by nailing three joists two inches by six inches together. These rested on concrete blocks in the cellar. It will have to be determined by the investigations of the Bergen county coroners and the county prosecutor who is to blame for permitting three hundred people to rush in on such a flmsy superstructure.

KEYSTONE STATE FOR ROOSEVELT

Pennsylvania Primaries Duplicate Illinois Landslide.

PENROSE EXPECTED TO RETIRE

Colonel Will Have 70 of State's 76 Delegates and May Get Them All—Think Result May Presage Penrose's Exit from Politics.

Philadelphia, April 15.—Fairly complete returns from all parts of the state only accentuate the sweeping Roosevelt victory in the Pennsylvania primaries.

On the final round up, after the state convention, which will elect twelve delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention, Roosevelt will have 70 of the 76 delegates from this state and it seems quite likely that he will have the entire delegation.

The supporters of President Taft carried but one district west of Philadelphia, that comprising Lancaster county, where Mayor McLain has almost an unassailable organization.

In Philadelphia the Taft supporters apparently carried the First, Second, Third and elected one delegate in the Fifth district. But in the First district State Senator Edwin S. Vare, the Republican organization leader, and his running mate, as delegate, have announced that to their minds Colonel Roosevelt is the only Republican capable of saving the country to Republican rule.

The recapitulation shows that at the present writing President Taft may count on the votes of E. T. Stotesbury and John Wanamaker, who were elected as delegates in the Second district; K. H. Bromley, who was elected in the Third; C. A. Disston of the Fifth and W. Geist and William H. Keller, the two delegates elected in the Lancaster district. This is the sum total of the Taft delegates unless complete returns make minor changes.

SENATOR BOIES PENROSE.

Not only have the Roosevelt followers swept the state for their delegates, but they have elected the majority of the 372 representatives to the state convention, which will elect twelve delegates-at-large to the national convention.

These twelve delegates already are counted for Roosevelt, but the state convention will have another and more potent effect on Pennsylvania. It marks the passing of United States Senator Penrose as a member of the national committee, and many persons are predicting that it also marks the beginning of his exit from politics.

The Roosevelt followers will absolutely dominate the state convention. They will nominate an auditor general and a state treasurer, and for the first time in many years will have absolute control of the election machinery of the state.

In this same convention the twenty-five men nominated at the primaries as candidates for the state senate, when elected will hold over until the time comes for the selection of a successor of Senator Penrose. From late returns eighteen of these men are opposed to Senator Penrose and the ideas for which he stands.

M'KINLEY IS INDIGNANT

Accuses Roosevelt of Conducting Campaign of Socialism.

Washington, April 15.—Director William B. McKinley of the Taft campaign issued a vitriolic statement, in which he said:

"The outcome of the Pennsylvania primary is plainly indicative of the fact that national issues are playing only a small part in some states in the campaign for the Republican nomination. Instead of constructive statesmanship being put forth in effort to solve the problems before the country and as a bid for votes on the ground of merit, a nation-wide campaign of wilful and malicious misrepresentations, villification and assault on the president of the United States has been substituted.

"Such a campaign, amounting in fact to a conspiracy, made not only to humiliate the president personally, but to commit the Republican party to rank socialism, has not only been countenanced but conducted by Former President Theodore Roosevelt."

EXPLOSION WRECKS PLANT

Gas Engine Power House in South Chicago Ruined.

Chicago, April 15. — Scattering bricks, parts of machinery and timbers for a space of more than a block and endangering the lives of 100 men, an explosion destroyed the gas engine power house of the Illinois Steel company at East Eighty-Sixth street and Calumet river, causing a property loss of more than $100,000.

Before the debris had settled flames burst from the shattered structure and all the available fire fighters in the southern end of the city were required to prevent the fire from spreading to the surrounding buildings.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Almost A Miracle

One of the most startling changes seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all are family thought he was going into consumption, but be began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Nnow he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver, filling the system with bilious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Piles would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25, C. A. Wright & Son.

A Backsliding Santa Claus.
Mrs. Peavish says that before they were married Mr. Peavish used to say that if she would let him be her Santa Claus he would devote his life to sliding up and down the chimney for her. And now it makes him mad to have to take up ashes from the grate.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

In "The Light Eternal," the big spectacular religious drama announced for presentation at the Bradley Opera House on Monday evening, April 22, Tecumseh theatre patrons will have opportunity of seeing probably the most powerful dramatic offering ever given in this city. This play has the unique distincition of being able to draw and please a larger percentage of population than any other attraction that has ever toured the State of Michigan. Early in January the company made a series of three night stands in all the larger Michigan towns, and is now completing a return tour of two night stands in the same cities. From six to twelve performances of the play have been given in the following cities: Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Battle Creek, Lansing, Saginaw, Bay City, Port Huron, Flint and Ann Arbor. "The Light Eternal" has been given one week each this last season at the Lyceum theatre, Detroit, and has played to virtual capacity at every performance given in the State. The company comes to Tecumseh in its original form and with the complete scenic equipment—which will crowd the Bradley stage to the limit, but which, the company management assures us, is sufficiently large to properly stage the attraction with a little crowding

ANNOUNCEMENT

To Tecumseh Theatre Patrons:—

In announcing the presentation of "THE LIGHT ETERNAL" at the Bradley Opera House on date of Monday evening, April 22, I wish to give my personal assurance as to the quality and merit of the attraction.

Just before Christmas I witnessed a performance of the play in Toledo, and was so impressed with its power and beauty that I have been negotiating ever since for a date in Tecumseh.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL" will be given in Tecumseh with the orginal cast and complete production on the above date and I wish to impress upon the public the importance of this engagement. Unquestionable this is the strongest drama, played by the best cast, and most elaborately staged of anything ever in Tecumseh. The sale of seats opens Friday morning at Hay's Bakery, Phone 99. It is advisable to get seats early.

Very respectfully,
Ed. L. Mark, Mgr. "The Bradley"

Its easy

to get good canned tomatoes if you are willing to pay the price of CHEF and just as easy to get your money back if you are not satisfied with CHEF quality.

CHEF Tomatoes are nearly all tomato—not much juice. They are whole tomatoes—not parts of tomato. They are uniformly ripe—free from overripe or underripe spots.

The are as good tomatoes as you could select in your own garden. They are so much better than most tomatoes that they must be seen to be appreciated.

Genius and Its Tribulations.
"Genius," says the Washington Post, "is the most curious psychological phenomenon with which the mind of man has ever grappled." And the great trouble is that the mind of man never can be sure even while the grappling is going on that genius is really being grappled with.

The Divine Law.
And what is the divine law to a man? To hold fast that which is his own, and to claim nothing that is another's; to use what is given him, and not to covet what is not given; to yield up easily and willingly what is taken away, giving thanks for the time he has had it in his service.—Epictetus.

NEW REFORM IDEA BEGUN

Duluth Discards Plan of Punishing Girls for Petty Offenses.

Duluth, Minn., April 15. — Duluth started on its plan of reforming instead of penalizing petty offenders, by turning one of its school buildings into a home for girls who otherwise might be sent to the reformatory.

It will be conducted along ideas which take no account of punishing offenders and endeavor only to reform them. Girls convicted in juvenile court will be sent to the institution, taught to work and be given ennobling surroundings. The institution is due to the work of humanitarians, who claim that the state schools often do more harm than good to the girls who are confined there.

High School Notes

A meeting of the Y. W. C. A. was held at the home of Mrs. B. R. Weld and the following musical program was given. A selection by the Girls' Quartette which was followed by a reading by Miss Nellie Rathbun, Mrs. B. R. Weld very pleasantly sang a solo, and Miss Alice Brown gave a piano solo, Miss Brush also sang a solo. After this program an election of officers followed:

President—Geneva Satterthwaite
VicePres.—Winnifred Hall
Secretary—Ruth Hastings
Treasurer—Mabel Skinner

Refreshments were served at the close of a delightful evening.

During the year there have been 45 pupils enrolled in the kindergarten of the West Branch, 12 new pupils have entered since spring vacation.

The 3rd and 4th grade pupils of the West Branch are interested in studying the life and paintings of Sir Joshua Reynolds.

Earl Hanham of Ypsilanti visited the High School last Monday morning.

A basket ball meeting was held Wednesday afternoon. About fifteen girls have been enrolled for practice.

The class in Civil Government are studying McKones, "Michigan State and Local Government."

Mr. Smith's class in Physical Geography took an excursion trip last Wednesday morning. They studied especially the formation and work of flood plains.

SUB DISTRICT ORATORIAL CONTEST

A very attended audience listened to a fine program, composed of declamations and orations, at the Baptist church Friday evening. The winners in both oratory and declamation were Miss Hart and Mr. Dunn of Adrian, Miss Fann and Mr. Sheldon of Hillsdale stood second in the contest. The other contestants did well and are deserving of praise. The winners deserved the honor which they received for they showed their training and also adaptability. Miss Iona Ely of Hudson, the only girl orator gave a splendid oration and with a fine delivery. This is the first time that the Tecumseh High Schools have been elligible to enter this contest. The contestants were judged on thought composition, and delivery. The delivery. The judges were: Mr. Carl Binns of Addison, Mr. M. W. Hensel of Blissfield and Rev. D. Stanley Shaw of Hudson who judged on delivery only and Mr. Tripp of Morenci, Mr Hanford of Britton and Mr. McKennon of Manchester judged on thought and composition.

NATIONAL ALASKA ROAD

Government May Build 1,000 Miles of Railroad.

Project Is Authorized by Bill for Construction Brought in by Smith of Michigan.

Washington, April 15. — A bill for the construction and equipment of 1,000 miles of railroads in Alaska by the government was introduced by Senator Smith of Michigan. Development of natural resources and to secure a supply of coal for the navy are the declared purposes of the bill.

The creation of the Alaskan railway commission, composed of five members to be designated by the president is proposed. The commission will aid the president is determined the route of the road and in having it constructed. A report on progress must be submitted each year by the president.

Provision is made for the condemnation of land in Alaska. Existing lines may be acquired by purchase or lease, but the provision is not mandatory. The interstate commerce commission must determine the reasonableness of rates and handling charges.

The secretary of the treasury is authorized to issue bonds as a popular loan to cover the expenses of construction.

HENRI BRISSON IS DEAD

French Statesman of Renown Passes Away in Paris.

Paris, April 15.—Henri Brisson, the French statesman and for many years president of the chamber of deputies, is dead. He was seventy-seven years of age.

M. Brisson was nineteen times president of the chamber of deputies, from 1876 to 1912. He was three times a candidate for the presidency, against Jules Grevy, Cassimir-Perier and Felix Faure.

Theatrical Manager a Suicide.
New York, April 15.—Michael Mintz, manager of the Lipzin theater at 235 Bowery, shot himself with a revolver on the stage and died within an hour. Business troubles are said to have led him to end his life.

FOOTBALL, DEADLIEST SPORT

New York, April 15.—In an effort to show that football is a more brutal and deadly sport than bull fighting a statistician has compiled a table showing the total casualties in Spain from bull fighting during 1911. There were 872 bull fights, attended by 7,000,000 people, but only ten bull fighters were killed and sixteen injured. The fatalities among the animals, however, are shown to have reached 4,400 bulls and 5,600 horses.

Football casualties for 1911 were given as thirteen killed and 500 injured. In 1909 there were thirty-three deaths.

A SPANISH JOURNEY

A fine audience greeted Prof. Chas. Philip Wagner of Ann Arbor, Friday evening, at the Presbyterian church and embarked with him on a journey through Spain. The trip was a delightful one, and with the Professor as guide and interpreter was also very interesting. The lecture was especially interesting as it was personal history, and the Monday Club, under whose auspices he came, have had Spain for their study for the past year.

It was a matter of regret that his lecture should be shortened on account of the Oratorical Contest at the Baptist church as everyone was deeply interested and would gladly have listened longer.

Prof. Wagner is a personal friend of Mr. and Mrs Chas Burridge, who entertained at six o'clock dinner for him.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should Be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirments of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time day or night; do not cause diarrhœa, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c 25c, and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall store B. J. Pulver.

Can't look well, eat well or feel well with impure blood feeding your body. Keep the blood pure with Burdock Blood Bitters. Eat simply, take exercise, keep clean and you will have long life.

Hives, eczema itch or salt rheum sets you crazy. Can't bear the touch of your clothing. Doan's Ointment cures the most obstinate cases. Why suffer. All druggists sell it.

Don't use harsh physics. The reaction weakens the bowels, leads to chronic constipation. Get Doan's Regulets. They operate easily, tone the stomach, cure constipttion.

"My child was burned terribly about the face, neck, and chest. I applied Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. The pain ceased and the child sank into a peaceful sleep."—Mrs. Nancy M. Hanson, Hamburg, N. Y.

Bit in Her Case—
Woman's wit readily adapts itself to all places and all occasions. A woman lecturer was delivering a practical talk on beauty and the beauty cult for the entertainment of the Woman's Professional league of New York at an interesting session one afternoon.

In the course of her lecture the speaker emphasized the point that certain measurements were fundamentally important. Unhappily, however, the lecturer herself had a form—if her unusual bulk could be dignified by such a term—that was fashioned on anything but the lines of the Kellermann type.

Proceeding with her dissertation on measurements, she held up a very fat, round wrist, and said: "Now, twice around my wrist, once around my throat. Twice around my throat, once around my waist. Twice around my waist——"

"Once around Central Park!" exploded an irrepressible young thing out in the audience, and the storm of laughter that followed was altogether immeasurable.—Sunday Magazine.

On Thursday evening April 11, at 8 o'clock, the marriage of Florence Rae Beland and Earl Freeman Sines was solemnized at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Frederick Beland in Macon. The wedding march was played by Miss Mable Ager, a school girl friend of the bride. The bride's pastor, the Rev. Schwede of the German Luthern church performed the ceremony, the bridal couple standing before a bank of ferns and palms. After congratulations a most bountious wedding dinner was served to about thirty guests, immediate relatives of the bride and groom,

The house was decorated in pink and white, streamers being attached from the electric light chandelier to different parts of the bride's table. The bride wore a gown of delicate blue messaline and carried pink carnations. The gifts were beautiful and useful, among which was a bank book and a generous check from the bride's only brother. John Wyrill and family were present from Tecumseh.

FARMERS! BUILD SILOS!

A silo is one of the most profitable investments a farmer can make. One acre of good land will produce 12 tons of corn silage. This silage, with hay, will feed 2 milk cows for 10 months. If properly cared for, these cows will bring in from $150 to $190 for cream alone, to say nothing of 2 calves that can be raised, nor considering the value of the skimmed milk for the pigs and chicken feed. The can profits can be obtained in feeding sheep or steers. Can you beat this on an acre of any other farm product? Remember! Special low prices on Saginaw Silos delivered before June 1st. No better silo made. Ask the man who has one.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Delila Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amoun claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be fore closed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the [illegible] premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

As They See Us in England.

Political riots in America are carried out in a thoroughgoing fashion. Lord Rosebery tells a story of a friend of his who visited Baltimore when an election for congress was in progress. Turning in for a shave he complained to the negro barber that his razor was very blunt. "Very likely, sir," was the reply; "I was out last night at an election meeting."—London Chronicle.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys.
Spells of backeache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

Many Tecumseh people rely on it. Here is Tecumseh proof.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney suffers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

ROCKEFELLER AS FIRE CHIEF

Oil Magnate Loans His Engine Company to Neighbor in Need.

Tarrytown, N. Y., April 15. — John D. Rockefeller helped out his neighbor, James Butler, at Eastview, when Mr. Butler's cottage caught fire from the kitchen range. He sent his fire company down from Pocantico Hills when the alarm was sent out and they did good work. The only fire department at Eastview is that at the county almshouse and the men were unable to cope with the blaze.

Mr. Rockefeller's company was telephoned for and they were soon dashing down the hills behind one of Mr. Rockefeller's teams. Assistance was called for from Elmsford and Tarrytown, but by the time outside help arrived the blaze was under control. The damage amounted to $3,000.

THE HEART

If the blood is poor and filled with the poisons from diseased kidneys or inactive liver, the heart is not only starved but poisoned as well. There are many conditions due to impure blood—such as dropsy, fainting spells, nervous debility or the many scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc All can be overcome and cured by

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

This supplies pure blood—by aiding digestion, increasing assimilation and imparting tone to the whole circulatory system. Its a heart tonic and a great deal more, having an alterative action on the liver and kidneys, it helps to eliminate the poisons from the blood.

To enrich the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles, thereby feeding the nerves on rich red blood and doing away with nervous irritability, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and do not permit a dishonest dealer to insult your intelligence with the "just as good kind." CHAFF SUFFRAGE ORATORS

London Crowd Amused by Speech of Sylvia Pankhurst.

London, April 15.—The suffrage demonstration in Hyde Park drew a crowd of the curious, most of whom appeared to be amusedly hostile. There were three platforms from which speakers delivered addresses. The chief speakers were Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who is out on bail on a conspiracy charge and therefore could not attend, and a sister of Christabel Pankhurst, for whom the police are looking on a similar charge, and Colonel Arthur Lynch, M. P., who commanded the Second Irish brigade on the Boer side during the war in South Africa.

The speech of Sylvia Pankhurst was interrupted continuously by chaff and she was greeted with persistent cries of "Where is Christabel?"

SHOW PALACE BURNS

Chicago, April 15. — The rescue of terrified children from death by fire when lightning struck the electric light wires leading into Clayton Mark's $50,000 Lake Shore palace, and caused a fire which burned the structure to the ground, is attributed to the bravery and coolness of Mr. and Mrs. Mark.

Awakened at 2:15 in the morning by the choking fumes of smoke and the crackling of burning woodwork, Mr. and Mrs. Mark refused to leave the structure until their children had been carried to safety.

Confess Seven Murders.

Birmingham, Ala., April 15.—Arthur and Walter Jones, brothers, finished detailing their confession to the county authorities of how they assassinated three white men and four negroes in the mining section of Jefferson county, Alabama, in the last seven years.

"Not—"

"Fit," completed Lestrange definitely. "Can you hang on somewhere, Rupert?"

Lestrange was already in his seat, waiting.

"What's that for?" asked the dazed guest, as, on taking his place, a strap was slipped around his waist, securing him to the seat.

"So you won't fall out," soothed the grinning Rupert. "You ain't well, you know. Not that I'd care if you did, but somebody might blame Darling."

The car leaped forward, gathering speed to an extent that was a revelation in motoring to Ffrench. The keen air, the giddy rush through the dark, were a sobering tonic. After a while he spoke to the man beside him, nervously embarrassed by a situation he was beginning to appreciate.

"This is a racing car?"

"It was."

"Isn't it now?"

"If I were going to race it day after to-morrow, I wouldn't be risking it over a country road to-night. A racing machine is petted like a race horse until it is wanted."

"And then?"

man on the place who wouldn't give his ears to be seen on the same side of the street with Lestrange, let alone to work under him. They do read the racing news. That part of it will be all right, if I can have him."

"If it is necessary—"

"I think it is, sir."

"What is your opinion?" he questioned. "If Dick had been listening I should have asked his, and I fancy yours is fully as valuable. Come, shall we have this racing manager?"

Astonished, she looked from her uncle to the other man. And perhaps it was the real anxiety and suspense of Bailey's expression that drew her quick reply.

"Let us, uncle. Since we need him, let us have him."

"Very well," said Mr. Ffrench. "You hear, Bailey."

There was a long silence after the junior partner's withdrawal.

"Come where I can see you, Emily," her uncle finally demanded. "I liked your decided answer a few moments ago; you can reason. How long have you been a daughter in my house?"

"Six years," she responded, obediently moving to a low chair opposite. "I was fifteen when you took me from the convent—to make me very, very happy, dear."

"I sent for you when I sent for Dick, and for the same reason. I have tried three times to rear one of my name to fitness to bear it, and each one has failed except you. I wish you were a man, Emily; there is work for a Ffrench to do."

"When you say that, I wish I were. But—I'm not, I'm not." She flung out her slender, round arms in a gesture of helpless resignation. "I'm not even a strong-minded woman who might do instead. Uncle Ethan, may I ask—it was Mr. Bailey who made me think—my cousin whom I never saw, will he never come home?"

He voice faltered on the last words, frightened at her own daring. But her uncle answered evenly, if coldly:

"Never."

"He offended you so?"

"His whole life was an offense. School, college, at home, in each he went wrong. At twenty-one he left me and married a woman from the vaudeville stage. It is not of him you are to think, Emily, but of a substitute for him. For that I designed Dick; once I hoped you would marry him and sober his idleness."

"Please, no," she refused gently. "I am fond of Dick, but—please, no."

"I am not asking it of you. He is well enough, a good boy, not over wise, but not what is needed here. Failed, again; I am not fortunate. There is left only you."

"Me?"

Her startled dark eyes and his determined gray ones met, and so remained.

"You, and your husband. Are you going to marry a man who can take my place in this business, in the factory and the model village my brother and I built around it; a man whose name will be fit to join with ours and so in a fashion preserve it here? Will you wait until such a one is found and will you aid me to find him? Or will you too follow selfish, idle fancies of your own?"

"No!" she answered, quite pale. "I would not do that! I will try to help."

"You will take up the work the men of your name refuse, you will provide a substitute for them?"

Her earnestness sprang to meet his strength of will, she leaned nearer in her enthusiasm of self-abnegation, scarcely understood.

"I will find a substitute or accept yours. I, indeed I will try not to fail."

It was characteristic that he offered neither praise nor caress.

"You have relieved my mind," said Ethan Ffrench, and turned his face once more to the fire.

CHAPTER III.

It was October when the consultation was held in the library of the old Ffrench house, on the Hudson; December was very near on the sunny morning that Emily drove out to the factory and sought Bailey in his office.

"I wanted to talk with you," she explained, as that gentleman rose to receive her. "We have known each other for a long time, Mr. Bailey; ever since I came from the Sacred Heart to live with Uncle Ethan. That is a very long time."

"It's a matter of five or six years," agreed the charmed Bailey, contemplating her with affectionate pride in her prettiness and grace. "You used to drive out here with your pony and spend many an hour looking on and asking questions. You'll excuse me, Miss Emily, but there was many a man passed the whisper that you'd have made a fine master of the works."

She shook her head, folding her small gloved hands upon the edge of the desk at the opposite sides of which they were seated.

"At least I would have tried. I am quite sure I would have tried. But I am only a girl. I came to ask you something regarding that," she lifted her candid eyes to his, her soft color rising. "Do you know—have you ever met any man who cared and understood about such factories as this? Men who could take charge of a business, the manufacturing and racing and selling, like my uncles? I have a reason for asking."

"Sure thing," said Bailey, unexpectedly prompt. "I've met one man who knows how to handle this factory better than I do, and I've been at it twelve years. And there he is—" he turned in his revolving chair and rolled up the shade covering the glassed door into the next room, "my manager, Lestrange."

The scene thus suddenly opened to the startled Emily was sufficiently matter-of-fact, yet not lacking in a certain sober animation of its own. Around a drafting table central in the bare, systematic disorder of the apartment beyond, three or four blue-shirted men were grouped, bending over a set of drawings, which Lestrange was explaining. Explaining with a vivid interest in his task that sparkled over his clear face in a changing play of expression almost mesmeric in its command of attention. The men watched and listened intently; they themselves no common laborers, but the intelligent workmen who were to carry out the ideas here set forth. Wherever Lestrange had been, he was coatless and the sleeves of his outing shirt were rolled back, leaving bare the arms whose smooth symmetry revealed little of the racing driver's strength; his thick brown hair was rumpled into boyish waves and across his forehead a fine black streak wrote of recent personal encounter with things practical.

None of the group in the next room had noticed the movement of the shade, absorbed in one another; any sound being muffled by the throb of adjacent machinery. Bailey obeyed the request, and leaned back in his chair.

"That's Darling Lestrange," he stated with satisfaction. "That's his own design for an oiling system he's busy with, and it's a beauty. He's entered for every big race coming this season, starting next week in Georgia, and meantime he oversees every department in every building as it never was done before. The man for me, he is."

Emily made an unenthusiastic sign of agreement.

"I meant a very different man from Mr. Lestrange," she replied, her dignity altogether Ffrench. "I have no doubt that he is all you say, but I was thinking of another class. I meant—well, I meant a gentleman."

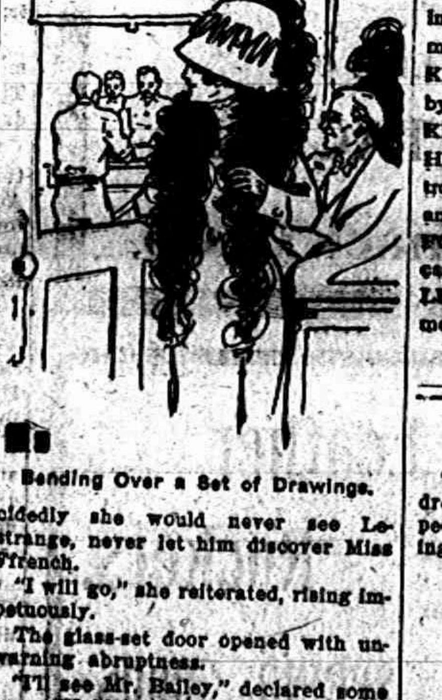
"Oh, you meant a gentleman," replied Bailey, surveying her oddly. "I didn't know, you see. No; I don't know any one like that."

"Thank you. Then I will go. I—it does not matter."

She did not go, however, but remained leaning on the arm of her chair in troubled reverie, her long lashes lowered. Bailey sat as quietly, watching her and waiting.

The murmur of voices came dully through the closed door, one, lighter and clearer in tone, most frequently rising above the roar pervading the whole building. It was not possible that Emily's glimpse of Lestrange across the glass should identify him absolutely with the man she had seen once in the flickering lights and shadows on the Long Island road; but he was not of a type easily forgotten, and she had been awakened to a doubling recognition.

Now, many little circumstances recurred to her; a strangeness in Dick's manner when the new manager was alluded to, the fact that her rescuer on that October night had been driving a racing car and had worn a racing costume; and lastly, when Bailey spoke of "Darling" Lestrange there had flashed across her mind the mechanician's ridiculous answer to the request to aid her chauffeur in changing a tire: "I'll do it for you, Darling." And listening to that dominant voice in the next room, she slowly grew crimson before a vision of herself in the middle of a country road, appealing to a stranger for succor, like the heroine of a melodramatic fiction. Decidedly she would never see Lestrange, never let him discover Miss Ffrench.



Bending Over a Set of Drawings.

"I will go," she reiterated, rising impetuously.

The glass-set door opened with unwarning abruptness.

Helpless, Emily stood still, and straightway found herself looking directly into Lestrange's gray eyes as he halted on the threshold.

It was Bailey who upheld the moment, all unconsciously.

"Come in," he invited heartily. "Miss Ffrench, this is our manager, Mr. Lestrange; the man who's going to double our sales this year."

Emily moved, then straightened herself proudly, lifting her small head. Lestrange had recognised her, she felt; the call was to courage, not flight.

"I think I have already met Mr. Lestrange," she said composedly. "I am pleased to meet him again."

868 KNOWN SURVIVORS OF TITANIC

Over 1,300 Persons Are Drowned.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR LOST.

His Bride Is Reported Among the Survivors.

CAPTAIN SINKS WITH SHIP

Hope That Some Survivors May Be on Virginian Gone.

sides the Carpathia, which were believed to have reached the scene of the wreck of the steamship Titanic, the largest vessel in the world, which ran into an iceberg off the banks of Newfoundland, in time to aid in the rescue, are leaving empty handed. A message from the Virginian and from the Parisian stated that they found no survivors to take on board when they reached the scene of disaster.

The Cunard liner Carpathia, with 868 survivors on board, is proceeding slowly through a field of ice en route to New York. The United States government has directed that the customs regulations be waived and that everyone be landed at once.

Thirteen hundred and forty-one lives were lost in the sinking of the great White Star liner Titanic off the banks of Newfoundland, as indicated after sifting all the wireless reports.

The 868 survivors of the ill-fated Titanic on board the steamship Carpathia, steaming to this city, are not expected to arrive before Friday morning. The Carpathia is a thirteen knot liner and it was estimated that it would take her from seventy-five to eighty hours to reach port.

Repeated calls were made for information relative to the fate of Major Archibald Butt, President Taft's military aid, who is returning from a visit abroad. President Taft telegraphed the company early in the day and was promised immediate word if anything definite regarding Major Butt was received.

Members of the Guggenheim and Straus families had representatives at the White Star offices throughout the night in anticipation of definite word concerning Isidor Straus and Benjamin Guggenheim. These names were not in the survivors' list just received.

Numerous inquiries were received regarding the fate of Henry B. Harris, the theatrical manager, and his wife. The list shows Mrs. Harris had been saved, but no word came regarding her husband.

Advices from Montreal state that Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railway, is among the survivors aboard the Carpathia. His wife and daughter already had been reported saved.

The Bradstreet Commercial agency has given out a telegram received from the Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic, saying that Colonel John Jacob Astor was among hundreds who lost their lives in the catastrophe; that his body had been recovered and that his wife was safe on the Carpathia.

Captain Smith of the Titanic went down with his boat, directing the work of rescue until the last.

Major Archibald Butt, President Taft's military aid, is still unreported, as are many other persons of international reputation. J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine, owners of the White Star line, is one of the survivors, as is his wife.

Wireless reports said the Cunard liner Carpathia has on board 868 survivors, the total thus far known. She is steaming for New York and should arrive on Friday. The rescued passengers drifted in lifeboats for many hours before succor came.

Of the foregoing summarized reports concerning the awful tragedy in the ice fields of the Atlantic, two were fraught with hope as the day dawned. The first was that the rescue ship Carpathia carried nearly 900 survivors, as against 675 reported to be on board the previous day. The second was the message that the Virginian might have others on board, whose safety would reduce the list of dead.

The Titanic now lies buried two miles beneath the ocean's surface, midway between Sable Island and Cape Race. Her position when she struck the places in the boats. This would indicate that the Titanic's condition was iceberg was given as latitude 41.46 north, longitude 50.14 west.

False news and false hopes and an international belief that the palatial Titanic was practically unsinkable, followed the slowly unfolding accounts of her loss in a way without precedent.

Eager crowds in a dozen cities in the United States besieged bulletin boards when it became known that the giant liner had really sunk with terrible loss of life.

In New York throngs of men and women crowded into the White Star line offices seeking news of relatives.

Vincent Astor, Colonel Astor's son, spent the entire night waiting for some wireless tiding of his father, alternately visiting the White Star line headquarters and the newspaper offices.

The brief dispatches show that the passengers and crew passed through thrilling experiences from the moment the monster Titanic crashed into the iceberg in the dead of night until the Carpathia, several hours later reached the scene and rescued the survivors from life boats floating in a sea of ice.

The collision occurred at a time when the passengers had retired or were about to go to bed. The shock sent many to the decks partly dressed. A wireless dispatch came through Campertown, N. S., saying that the passengers were ordered to the life boats at once and that many were scantly dressed as they took their such that no time could be spared to return to staterooms for additional clothes.

Daylight came and with it arrived the Cunnarder Carpathia, which found only the life boats filled with crew and passengers floating where the Titanic had passed under the waves.

KALAMAZOO — At a Kalamazoo special election a heating franchise asked for by Charles H. Gillam of Chicago was voted down, the plurality against it being 949, the vote being exceedingly light. Charges that money was being used in the election and that unfair means had been used were freely made.

GRAND RAPIDS — The formal transfer of the Muskegon Interurban road to the United Light and Railways company, which recently purchased it, occurred here. The road will be equipped with a new safety block signal system, limited trains will be added and the system made thoroughly up todate.

CHARLOTTE—John Knowles, of this place, aged eighty-four, father of Alderman Claude Knowles, was struck by a Michigan Central passenger train here. His head was crushed and his body badly injured and he cannot survive. His grandson, Roy Knowles, was killed here in an auto accident last August.

MANISTEE—A number of playing boys found the body of a man on the beach of Lake Michigan which was later identified as that of Thomas Grabowsky, aged seventy-two, who fell in the river while on his way home near the harbor mouth one night last December.

HOLLAND—Harm Ensign, who is a Vriesland farmer, rescued his ten-year-old son from the blazing family residence and was seriously burned, while the boy is likely to die from his burns. The house was entirely destroyed.

GENERAL GRANT DIES IN A NEW YORK HOTEL

His End Comes Suddenly and Causes a Shock.

Had Recently Undergone an Operation at a Hospital for Throat Trouble —Chokes to Death in the Presence of Wife.

The news of General Grant's death was a shock to many army officials, none of whom had been informed he was so critically ill. So suddenly did the end come that his sister-in-law, Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago, was on a train at the time, on her way home from Florida, and could not be informed of his death until she reached Chicago. Mrs. Palmer and the other Chicago relatives are expected to come on to New York at once.

The cause of General Grant's death was officially stated to be heart failure. He was granted a leave of absence several weeks ago and was reported to have gone south. Instead, it is now learned, he was taken to a hospital where an operation to relieve the throat trouble from which he suffered was performed. He left the hospital and had been staying at the Hotel Buckingham. Few knew of his presence there.

General and Mrs. Grant had retired, when at 11:30 o'clock the general was taken with a violent fit of coughing and choking. When Mrs. Grant was awakened he couldn't answer to tell what was the matter.

She tried her best to relieve him, and when she found that he was rapidly becoming worse she became hysterical and rushed to the wall phone in the room and called up the clerk and told him to send for a doctor as quickly as possible.

Then Mrs. Grant rushed out into the hall, weeping hysterically and crying:

"The old general's son is dying! The old general's son is dying!"

General Grant was dead before a doctor could be found, and could reach his room.

Had General Grant remained in the hospital, it was asserted, where medical attention could be secured instantly, his life might have been saved.

For more than a month past General Grant's whereabouts has been a mystery. Following the announcement that he had been granted a four month's leave of absence, expiring June 1, reports were current that an illness, believed by many to be cancer of the throat, had caused his temporary retirement.

These were denied at Governor's island where it was stated repeatedly that General Grant had simply gone south for a rest.

Major General Frederick Dent Grant, the eldest son of President U. S. Grant, was born at St. Louis, May 30, 1850.

He was with his father in the latter part of the Civil War, serving as voluntary aide and dispatch bearer to General Grant. As soon as he was old enough he was appointed to the military academy at West Point from New York and was graduated and commissioned a second lieutenant on June 12, 1871, being detailed to the Fourth United States cavalry. With this command he spent two years in Indian fighting on the frontier. He became first lieutenant June 28, 1876, and meanwhile in 1873 he had been appointed aide-de-camp to Lieutenant General Philip H. Sheridan with the rank of lieutenant colonel. On June 1, 1881, Lieutenant Colonel Grant resigned from the service after spending the greater part of his time on the frontier.

In 1885 President Harrison appointed him minister to Austria and from 1894 to 1898 he was one of the police commissioners of New York.

He saw further military service in the Spanish war, in the Philippines and in various commands in this country.

General Grant was married Oct. 20, 1874, to Ida M. Honore, daughter of Henry Hamilton Honore of Chicago. They have two children, Lieutenant Ulysses S. Grant III, now stationed in Washington, and the Princess Michael Cantacuzene-Sheranskey, who was Miss Julia Dent Grant.

OCCUPY TRIPOLITAN PORT

A strong Italian expedition has occupied a port on the west coast of Tripoli, the name of which is withheld. The disembarkation of the troops was accomplished without any molestation, as Italian warships escorting a convoy made a feint and bombarded Zuara, where the Turks expected a landing and where they had concentrated in large numbers.

While this was going on the expedition was landed at the other port. The feint was completely successful.

Believed to Have Killed Herself In Her Pasadena, Cal., Home.

At Pasadena, Cal., Miss Louise Kastenbine, prominent in Pasadena society, was found shot dead in her home shortly after midnight. A revolver lay on the floor beside her and the wound appeared to be self-inflicted. Miss Kastenbine's mother discovered the body.

Roosevelt's victory in the Pennsylvania primaries is only accentuated by fairly complete returns from all parts of the state.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of these wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wrigh & Son.

You come to a knowledge of God, not by investigating, but by loving him.

A Mother's Care

A careful mother will not give her child a medicine without knowing it is pure, contains no opiates, and has healing and curative qualities. Such a medicine is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for croup, whooping cough bronchitis, and all affections of the throat, chest and lungs. Best and safest for children and grown persons. Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

Almost A Miracle

One of the most startling changes seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all are family thought he was going into consumption, but be began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Nnow he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1 00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MISERY loves company, but the sentiment is not reciprocated.

Michigan

John Lane, St. Joseph, Mich., a member of A. W. Chapman, Post No. 21, G. A. R. was cured through the use of Foley Kidney Pills. He says, "I tried various kidney remedies but all failed to help me until I took Foley Kidney Pills and I can honestly say that cured me completely."

It Looks Like A Crime

to separate a boy from a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. His pimples, boils, scratches, knocks, sprains and bruises demand it, and its quick relief for burns scalds, or cuts is his right. WHO hungers for praise never gets his stomach filled.

Puts End to Bad Habit

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver, filling the system with billous poison, that Dr. King's New Life Piles would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25, C. A. Wright & Son.

A Backsliding Santa Claus.

Mrs. Peavish says that before they were married Mr. Peavish used to say that if she would let him be her Santa Claus he would devote his life to sliding up and down the chimney for her. And now it makes him mad to have to take up ashes from the grate.

AMUSEMENTS.

Something of the merit and drawing power of "The Light Eternal," the big religious drama announced for presentation at the Bradley Opera House on Monday evening, April 22, may be gathered from the following review of the play taken from the Jackson Citizen Press of a week or two since. "The Light Eternal" has been given five performances in Jackson, each time to the capacity of the Athenaeum theatre.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

The theme of "The Light Eternal" lies in the power of Christian faith and devotion, and the motive is the passionate love of Artemia, daughter of Emperor Diocletion, for Marco Valerius, a warrior and orator and a despised believer in Christ. In the character of Marco, Jonn Milton is superb, and in Louise Dunbar as Artemia, he has a beautiful and talented young woman to work with. The cast is large, and the players personate the characters with a keen realization of the demands upon them Throughout it is a magnificent production.

JOHN MILTON AS "MARCO VALERIUS" IN "THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

The power of this play, (which to witness is certain to make better men women and children of its auditors,) to attract and interest vast audiences is remarkable. It is one of the altogether to few dramatic productions that are a powerful factor in the general uplift. Were there more plays of "The Light Eternal" stamp, and less of the class that arouses in humanity the baser passions, the theatrical business would be indeed raised to a high plane and the profits of the players accordingly multiplied.

About as many people were turned away at the Tuesday matinee performance as were able to secure sittings. The house for the evening performance was practically sold out at noon. The popularity of "The Light Eternal" in Jackson is without a parallel, as no theatrical company has ever played here five time to capacity business. The same condition is said to be true of other cities in which this splendid play has been produced.

TOURING JAPAN AND CHINA

It has only been a century since the western world has come in contact with the great eastern countries. Revolutions in religion, government and commerce have followed in quick succession. The people of the United States were never more interested in Japan and China, than they are today. The citizens of Tecumseh will have the privilege of learning much about those countries next Tuesday evening, when Dr. Edwin E. Rogers gives his lecture, "Touring Japan and China", at the Methodist church. Price 25 cents. This is the final number of the Entertainment Course.

THE TECUMSEH ELECTRIC COMPANY

Obituary

S. W. TEMPLE

Samuel Willard Temple passed away Suddenly at his home Tuesday afternoon.

He has been in failing health all winter, but has been able to be in the store most of the time.

For the past few days he was confined to the house, but on Tuesday felt so much better that he walked to the store and back again, the exertion proved to much for him and death came in a few moments after he reached home.

He has been identified with Tecumseh and its business interests for the past 58 years, and at the time of his death was the oldest business man in town. Wednesday the 17th was his 78th birthday.

Of late Mr. Temple has loved to talk of the days of long ago, especially of his old home in Vermont and but a few days before he died was planning a trip East. It was quite a pleasure to pass an hour with him and hear his reminiscences concerning the business places on the street, and of their owners of the olden time. Now he is gone, another name is stricken from the ever lessening roll of our old settlers.

A widow and three sons, Herbert M. Temple of St. Paul, Minn., Claude W. Temple of St Louis, Mo., and Leon E. Temple of Tecumseh, are left to mourn the loss of a husband and a father.

The funeral services were held this morning at the home, the Rev. Dean Channer of Adrian officiating.

MRS. JAMES POTTER

Mrs. Sarah Potter died Sunday evening, April 14, at the home of her son, Dr. Jesse Potter at New London, Wis., aged 81 years and 10 months. She fell asleep Easter Sunday and never wakened in this life. For more than 40 years she was a resident of Tecumseh, going from here to live with her son, Dr. Jesse Potter after the death of her husband ten years ago.

Three sons and one daughter survive her, James of Tecumseh, Frank of Ballard, Calif., Jesse of New London Wis., and Mrs. Adah Marks of Odanah, Wis. The remains were brought here for burial Tuesday by her son Jesse. The burial was from the home of her son James, with a prayer by the Rev. G. N. Kennedy.

Our little city and its people ever had a warm place in her heart, and here where the best years of her life was spent, it was her desire that when God should call her to her everlasting rest, she might be laid beneath the shady trees of our Silent City, beside her loved ones who had gone before.

CHARLES EVERETT

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death of Charles Everett, which occurred at 8:30 Wednesday evening, at the home of Wm. Powell. Mr. Everett had been helping Mr. Powell with some work and been staying there for a few days. He was taken ill early in the morning and the end came quite unexpectedly. His body was taken to his home Thursday where the funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with burial at Brookside cemetery.

MRS. E. L. BURDETTE

Mrs. E. L. Burdette passed away at 4 a. m. today, after a long painful illness. There will be a service of prayer at the home at 12:30 Sunday, and the funeral will be at the Presbyterian church in Macon at 2:30 p. m., where she will be laid to rest with her kindred, who have passed on before

THE "UNION DEPOT"

The opening of the new Union Depot Thursday evening was an unqualified success, and a fine house greeted the performance.

The opening chorus by the children, was in itself a grand entertainment The jolly newsboys, in their rags and tatters were a happy-go-lucky crowd, and Master Wylie McCann distinguished himself in his clogging stunt and little Harold McCann was not to be left behind. The Cowboys chorus was a fine type of the original article.

The various characters that came and went, as the different trains were called were not to be ignored and the many flirtations and matrimonial episodes were quite life like and real. No place like a depot for side shows.

It would be hard to discriminate in speaking of the choruses The Spanish dance and song was perfect in its graceful changes, and beautiful costumes Spornini also captivated the audience by its charming performance Little Miss Up-to-Date and I'd Love to Live in Loveland were both given with delightful ease and grace. Yama Yama Man was rendered in a most sprightly manner, and brought down the house.

The grand finale, the Aeroplane chorus was a most artistic arrangement and was a most fitting close to the evenings entertainment. The soloists were all at their best and led each chorus finely.

Miss Hazel Zimmerman in Beautiful Lady, deserves special mention.

Mrs. R. S. Moore, as Madame Patti with her troupe needs no further comment.

The entertainment will be repeated tonight, and we bespeak for them a good house.

A TECUMSEH HERALDS SUBSCRIBER WRITES US FROM PEKIN, CHINA.

Wm. M. Olds, Private U. S. Legation Guard

It is not often that the Tecumseh Herald has the pleasure of a letter from Pekin, China and it looked especially formidable addressed Via Sibera. On opening it we found it was from Wm. M, Olds, private of the U. S. Legation Guard, and a former Tecumseh boy who had been in the Philippines and China for the past four years.

The letter was dated March 23, 1912 and reached Tecumseh April 12 just three weeks from the time it was mailed.

He says that the copies of the Herald he has received, since being in China were like old friends from Tecumseh. The conditions of China are not settled but are much better than they were the first of March. He expects to return to old Tecumseh the last of the year and sends us the following poem depicting his anticipating of a return home.

I'll soon be back in Tecumseh
  To that country town so fine
Where the river Raisin winds its way
  Through scenes that once were mine.
I'll visit all my old true friends
  When I again am home,
I'll visit those on "Quaker Hill"
  Where oft I used to roam.
I will stroll down by the river banks
  And there will fish all day,
I have not had such a happy time
  Since I went so far away.
Over to Clinton I will go,
  And make some visits there
It is a good old country town,
  So pleasant and so fair.
In China life is dreary
  And in the Phillipines too,
I've found no place like my old home
  In the world I've wandered through
We leave the best we have on earth
  When far away we roam,
And in our travels ne'er will find
  A place like home, sweet home.
In the service life is easy,
  But I'd rather work all day.
With the farmer in the grainfields,
  And rake the fields of hay,
I'm going to stay forever,
  In the land of fruit and grain
To the fair town called Tecumseh,
  I will soon be back again.

RURAL CARRIER EXAMINATION

Rural Carrier Examination at Adrian and Tecumseh, Mich,, for Lenawee County. Saturday May 4, 1912, to fill a vacancy in the position of rural carrier at Hudson and other vacancies as they may occur on rural routes at Post Offices in the above named county. The usual entrance salary for rural carriers is from $600 to $1,000 per annum.

Age limit, 18 to 55, on the date of examination.

An applicant must have his actual domicile in the territory supplied by a post office in the county for which the examination is announced and be examined in said county.

The examination is open to all male citizens of the United States who can comply with the requirements.

Applicant Form 1341, and full information concerning the requirements of the examination, can be secured from the secretary to the local examining board, Fred C. Dickenson, or the postmaster at any of the places named above, or from the U. S, Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Eligibles on registers established prior to March 1, 1912, can be considered for appointment only at the office for which they were examined. Such eligibles may be examined within one year from the date of their former examinations upon filing applications showing that they meet the requirements of the new examination their old eligibility for their home offices not being canceled.

COUNTY GOOD ROAD LAW

At the last election in Michigan thirteen counties voted on the proposition to adopt the County Good Road system, and eight out of the number voted in favor, these making a total of forty-five now operating under the plan of the State, being over half of the State

The counties voting in favor were Branch, Calhoun, Charlevoix, Eaton, Lapeer, Jackson, Macomb and St Joseph's and those rejecting were Barry, Lenawee, Macinac, Washtenaw and VanBuren. Leanwee was completely snowed under, and Washtenaw lost by 129. It seems a pity that this measure should be opposed as it means so much for the good of the country at large. It is to be hoped that another year will bring better results

RESEARCH CIRCLE

The Annual Symposium of The Research Circle, given Tuesday evening in Grange Hall was one of the most enjoyable affairs ever given by this Circle.

Members were allowed to invite their husbands and gentleman friends which brought the number attending to 150. Lester Coller kindly offered his gallery and adjoining rooms, where the guests remained until summoned to the tables which were arranged in the hall.

A delightful menu was served under the chairmanship of Mrs. Homer Whaley. The young ladies who waited on the guests deserve the thanks of the circle for the skillful manner in which they performed their work,

Mrs. A. W. Mills as toastmistress called for the following program: Vocal solo, "Sing, Smile, Slumber" by Bonnie Brown was given in such a charming manner that she was forced to respond to an encore.

The toastmistress then introduced Mrs. Chas. Deery who respondeded to the toast "Who?" Although Mrs. Deery said this was her first effort and out of her line of work, she proved equal to the occasion. This was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Kenrick entitled "The Garden of Slumber."

Miss Anna Cutting then replied to the question "When?" Among other things she said that she and other members similiarly situated were looking forward to the time when they too, could invite their husbands.

A vocal duet was then given by Mrs Kenrick and Miss Mingay. Also a violin solo by Archie Boyd followed by the response to the toast "Why?" by J. J. Belcher among other things he enlightened his hearers as to why the husbands of the suffragettes in New York State were supporting them in their campaign. They have promised to wear 39c hats. That's why A ladies quartette completed the program and guests departed feeling that a most delightful evening had been spent,

WIT AND WISDOM

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kemp entertained the Wit and Wisdom Club Monday evening, it was officers night and the meeting was of a cosmopolitan nature, several nationalities being present, China and Turkey being in the fore ground.

Dr. Hartzog and Miss Nannie Kyle gave interesting papers on China, and the Rev. B. R. Weld portrayed life in Turkey showing the interior of a harem, a place of worship, the call to prayer and various other interesting bits of history. Mrs. McAlpine and Elmer Slayton gave some fine Irish solos during the program. Refreshments were varied, first course being Turkish, the second course Chinese, chop sticks and all, and finally a good old Irish spread was served. The next meeting will be for the banquet, which will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. North.

ANNIVERSARY SURPRISES

Mr. and Mrs. John Boyce were very delightfully surprised last Saturday evening it being their 30th wedding anniversary. There were about 50 guests present, of relatives and friends. They came with baskets well ladened for a bounteous spread Needless to say they all enjoyed the occasion to the utmost. As a testimonial of their regard for the happy couple, they presented them with a beautiful chair. The social visit was prolonged until a late hour,

Mr. and Mrs. W. B, Keyser were pleasantly surprised Thursday Apr. 11, when about 40 of their friends walked in upon them to celebrate the 40th anniversary of their marriage They came well prepared for the occasion and a most delightful evening was spent. They left several pieces of silver as a token of their esteem.

JOLLY SIXTEEN

The Jolly Sixteen held their closing meeting Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Belding. There were eight tables of pedro played, Mrs. Ina Barrett and O. G, Hunt were tied on the first prize, Mr. Hunt winning out. The second prize was given Mrs, Ethel Mathias and the consolation to Mrs. John Herring.

A fine two course supper was served at the close of the games. The company seperated at a late hour hoping to meet again in the fall for another season.

VAPOR TREATMENT

For Catarrh, Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat and Bronchitis

Everybody knows that breathing HYOMEI a few times a day through the little hard rubber pocket inhaler will in short time drive out catarrh.

Many people regularly use the vapor treatment at night in conjunction with the inhaler, claiming that it hastens results.

This is the vapor treatment: Into a bowl three quarters full of boiling water pour a scant teaspooful of HYOMEI, cover head and bowl with towel and breathe for five minutes the soothing, healing, antiseptic HYOMEI vapor. Try it when using HYOMEI for any nose or throat ailment.

HYOMEI is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to put an end to catarrh, or money back. A bottle of HYOMEI costs 50 cents; a complete outfit, which includes inhaler, $1.00.

Singers and Public Speakers Need It

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says: "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Delila Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and colds."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the [illegible] premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

Dated this 13th day of March, A. D, 1912.

As They See Us in England.

Political riots in America are carried out in a thoroughgoing fashion. Lord Rosebery tells a story of a friend of his who visited Baltimore when an election for congress was in progress. Turning in for a shave, he complained to the negro barber that his razor was very blunt. "Very likely, sir," was the reply; "I was out last night at an election meeting."—London Chronicle.

ANSWERS THE CALL

Tecumseh People Have Found That This is TRUE

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench,
A little cause may hurt the kidneys.
Spells of backache often follow,
Or some irregularity of the urine.
A splendid remedy for such attacks,
A medicine that has cured thousands.
Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

Many Tecumseh people rely on it.
Here is Tecumseh proof.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occassions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began their use. The results were satisfactory and I am in hat other kidney suffers will profit by reading my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

GRAND RAPIDS—The agreed upon date for beginning the trial brought by the government against the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad company, indicted during the federal grand jury session, has been set by United States District Judge Sessions for May 14. The road is charged with giving rebates. Six local lumber companies indicted jointly with the railway company will be tried next in the order that they appear in the counts of the indictments against the railway.

JACKSON — After conducting a most thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Frank Eyick, whose dead body was found on the floor of his room in the Watts block, the coroner decided that death was due to a spasm brought on by acute alcoholism and an inquest will not be held. A sister, who is supposed to live in Niles, has been notified but no realtives have come forward to claim the body.

While on the way to K. of P. meeting Monday night, Bickford Pawson and Frank Reed met with what might have been quite a serious accident. They were driving along at good speed, when in front of Billington's house they collided with another buggy driven by a woman with three children. It was so dark that neither party could see the other until too late. Both buggies were over turned and the people were all under them. Both of the horses broke loose and ran. Mr Pawson's horse was caught near the depot, and the other one about a mile in the opposite direction. All escaped with slight injuries. Mr. Pawson's buggy was fixed so they could get home but the other one was too badly broken. The lady and children were taken home to the Bradley farm by Lloyd Whelan.

Joseph was elected Moderator. The convention will next meet at the Congregational church in Tipton, the third Monday and Tuesday of September.

BOYS AT STATE FAIR

Examinations Coming Soon for Short School Course.

One Lad from Every County to Take Agricultural Instruction at Fair's Expense.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—Arrangements have been concluded for the examination of school boys in Michigan, who will be pupils at the Boys' State Fair school at the state fair here this year. One boy from each county of the state will be delegated to this school and will have his expenses paid for the entire trip from home. At the fair the eighty-three boys will live in a camp at the state fair grounds and will be in charge of able men who will look after their welfare.

It is the object of the fair management to give the boys a short practical course in agriculture and an appropriation has been made to cover the expenses of the boys and additional expenses for lectures on dairying, good roads making, diseases of live stock, agriculture and its kindred arts, by recognized authorities, chosen from the Michigan Agricultural college at Lansing and from other equally well known sources.

It is not improbable that a great many counties in the state will adopt the plan of the state fair and promote a boys' school at the county fair, the delegates to be chosen from the townships by an examination. Thomas M. Sattler, superintendent of education at the state fair and county commissioner of schools of Jackson, Mich., has found the liveliest interest among members of the Michigan Association of Fairs and believes that many counties will select the delegates to the state fair from among the successful boys at the county fair school. The suggestion for this school was made by J. E. Hannon, secretary and manager of the Michigan state fair, who is naturally pleased with the result.

To determine who shall take part in the Boys' State Fair school competition examination will be given. These will be based on the regular eighth grade questions, issued to the respective county commissioners of schools by the state superintendent of schools.

The three boys obtaining the best standing in the examination will meet a committee one week after the scholastic examinations. This committee, composed of the county commissioners of schools, the judge of probate and the master of the Pomona Grange, or the executive officers of the Gleaners, will select one of the boys. The examination will represent 50 per cent of the credits and the special fitness of the candidate the remaining 50 per cent. The successful boy will receive a certificate entitling the holder to the free trip to the fair and return. There will be chosen an alternate for each boy.

Upon the arrival in Detroit, the boys will be met and taken to the fair grounds, where a camp will be occupied. This will be in charge of a committee, chosen by the state fair directors and will consist of M. H. Hull of Dimondale, master of the state Grange; Thomas Sattler of Jackson, commissioner of schools, and Frank Coward of Bronson, treasurer of the state Grange. The boys will bring sufficient clothing for the week and will be expected to strictly observe camp rules, which will not be hard. Should a boy fail to follow rules he will be sent home. Each boy will be engaged in light work in the camp four or five hours a day, and during the remainder of the time will visit the departments of the fair and assist in judging the products on exhibition. The assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A. will have charge of conducting the boys in squads of ten.

The instruction will cover the best methods of stock raising, dairying, good roads making, and other subjects.

"Not—"

"Fit," completed Lestrange definitely. "Can you hang on somewhere, Rupert?"

Lestrange was already in his seat, waiting.

"What's that for?" asked the dazed guest, as, on taking his place, a strap was slipped around his waist, securing him to the seat.

"So you won't fall out," soothed the grinning Rupert. "You ain't well, you know. Not that I'd care if you did, but somebody might blame Darling."

The car leaped forward, gathering speed to an extent that was a revelation in motoring to Ffrench. The keen air, the giddy rush through the dark, were a sobering tonic. After a while he spoke to the man beside him, nervously embarrassed by a situation he was beginning to appreciate.

"This is a racing car?"

"It was."

"Isn't it now?"

"If I were going to race it day after to-morrow, I wouldn't be risking it over a country road to-night. A racing machine is petted like a race horse until it is wanted."

"And then?"

"It takes its chances. If you are connected with the Ffrenches who manufacture the Mercury car, you should know something of automobile racing yourself. I noticed your limousine was of that make."

"Yes, that is my uncle's company. I did see a race once at Coney Island. A car turned over and killed its driver and made a nasty muss. I—I didn't fancy it."

A wheel slipped off a stone, giving the car a swerving lurch which was as instantly corrected—with a second lurch—by its pilot. The effect was not tranquilizing; the shock swept the last confusion from Ffrench's brain.

"Where are you taking me?" he presently asked.

"Where do you want to go? I will set you down at the next village we come to; you can stay there to-night or you can get a trolley to the city."

The question remained unanswered. Several times Ffrench glanced, rather diffidently, at his companion's clear, firm profile, and looked away again without speaking.

"I went out to get my cousin to-day, and my host gave me a couple of highballs," he volunteered, at last. "I don't know what you thought—"

"How old are you?" he inquired calmly.

"Twenty-three."

"I'm nearly twenty-seven. That's what I thought."

The simpler mind considered this for a space.

"Some men are born awake, some awake themselves, and some are shaken into awakening," paraphrased Lestrange, in addition. "If I were you, I'd wake up; it comes easier and it's sure to arrive anyhow. There is the village ahead—shall I stop?"

"It looks terribly dull," was the doleful verdict.

"Then come with me," flashed the other unexpectedly; for a fractional instant his eyes left the road and turned to his companion's face. "Did you ever see race practice at dawn? Come try a night in a training camp."

"You'd bother with me?"

"Yes."

A head bobbed up by Ffrench's knee, where Rupert was clinging in some inexplicable fashion.

"Once I rode eight miles out there by the hood, head downward, holding in a pin," he imparted, by way of entertainment.

"What for?" he asked.

"So we could keep on to our control instead of being put out of the running, of course. Did you guess I was curing a headache?"

"But you might have been killed!" exclaimed Ffrench.

Even by the semi-light of the lamps there was visible the mechanician's droll twist of lip and brow.

"I'd drive to hell with Lestrange," he explained sweetly, and settled back in his place.

Ffrench drew a long breath. After a moment he again looked at the driver.

"I'll come," he accepted. "And, thank you."

It was Lestrange who smiled this time, with a sudden and enchanting warmth of mirth.

"We'll try to amuse you," he promised.

CHAPTER II.

It was a business consultation that was being held in Mr. Ffrench's firelit library, in spite of the presence of a tea table and the young girl behind it. A consultation between the two partners who composed the Mercury Automobile company, of whom the lesser was speaking with a certain anecdotal weight.

"The Journey Will Be Short Now."

"And he said he was losing too much time on the turns; so the next round he took the bend at 72 miles an hour. He went over of course—the third car we've lost this year; I'm glad the season's closed."

"But the driver! Was the poor driver hurt, Mr. Bailey?"

"He wasn't killed, Miss Emily," answered Bailey, with a tinge of pensive regret. He was a large, ruddy, white-haired man, with the slow and careful habit of speech sometimes found in those who live much with massive machinery. "No, he wasn't killed; he's in the hospital. But he wrecked as good a car as ever was built, through sheer foolishness. It costs money."

Mr. Ffrench responded to the indirect appeal with more than usual irritation, his level gray eyebrows contracting.

"We ought to have better drivers. Why do you not get better men, Bailey? You wanted to go into this racing business; you said the cars needed advertising. My brother always attended to that side of the factory affairs while he lived, with you as his manager. Now it is altogether in your hands. Why do you not find a proper driver?"

"Perhaps my hands are not used to holding so much," mused Bailey unresentfully. "A man might be a good manager, maybe, and weak as a partner. It isn't the same job. But a first-class driver isn't easy to get, Mr. Ffrench. There's Delmar killed, and George tied up with another company, and Dorian retired, all this last season; and we don't want a foreigner. There's only one man I like—"

"Well, get him. Pay him enough."

Bailey hunched himself together together and crossed his legs.

"Yes, sir. He's beaten our cars—and others—every race lately, with poorer machines, just by sheer pretty driving. He drives fast, yet he don't knock out his car. But there's a lot after him—there's just one way we could get him, and get him for keeps."

"And that?"

"He's ambitious. He wants to get into something more solid than racing. If we offered to make him manager, he'd come and put some new ideas, maybe, into the factory, and race our cars wherever we chose to enter them. I know him pretty well."

The proposition was advanced tentatively, with the hesitation of one venturing in unknown places. But Ethan Ffrench said nothing, his gray eyes fixed on the hearth.

"He Understands Motor Construction and Designing."

"He understands motor construction and designing, and he's been with big foreign firms," Bailey resumed after waiting. "He'd be useful around; I can't be everywhere. What he'd do for us in racing would help a whole lot. It's very well to make a fine standard car, but it needs advertising to keep people remembering. And men like to say 'my machine is the same as Lestrange won the cup race with.' They like it."

"I don't know," said Mr. Ffrench slowly, "that it is dignified for the manager of the Mercury factory to be a racing driver."

"The Christine cars are driven by the son of the man who makes them," was the response. "Some drive their own."

"The son of the man who makes them," repeated the other. He turned his face still more to the quivering fire, his always severe expression hardening strangely and bitterly. "The son—"

The girl rose to draw the crimson curtains before the windows and to push an electric switch, filling the room with a subdued glow in place of the late afternoon grayness. Her delicate face, as she regarded her uncle, revealed most strongly its characteristic over-earnestness and a sensitive reflection of the moods of those around her. Emily Ffrench's childhood had been passed in a Canadian convent, and something of its mysticism clung about her. As the cheerful change she had wrought flashed over the room, Mr. Ffrench held out his hand in a gesture of summons, so that she came across to sit on the broad arm of his chair during the rest of the conference, her soft gaze resting on the third member.

"My adopted son and nephew having no such talents, we must do the best we can," Mr. Ffrench stated, with his most precise coldness. "Being well born and well bred, he has no taste for a mechanic's labor or for circus performances with automobiles in public. Who is your man, Bailey?"

"Lestrange, sir. You must have heard of him often."

"I never read racing news."

"I read ours," said Bailey darkly. "We've been licked often enough by him. And he's straight—he's one of the few men who'll stop at the grandstand and lose time reporting a smash-up and sending help around. Every man on the track likes Darling Lestrange."

"Likes whom?"

Bailey flushed brick-red.

"I didn't mean to call him that. He signs himself D. Lestrange, and some of them started reading it Darling, joking because he was such a favorite and because they liked him anyhow. It's just a nickname."

Emily laughed out involuntarily, surprised.

"I beg pardon," she at once apologized, "but it sounded so frivolous."

"If you try this man, you had better keep that nickname out of the factory," Mr. Ffrench advised stiffly. "What respect could the workmen feel for a manager with such a title? If possible, you would do well to prevent them from recognizing him as the racing driver."

Bailey, who had risen at the chime of a clock, halted amazed.

"Respect for him!" he echoed. "Not recognize him! Why, there isn't a

HOLD UP LIMITED ON ROCK ISLAND

Two Bandits Rob Passengers in Pullman Car.

ILLINOIS POSSES IN PURSUIT

Just After Golden State Limited Leaves Bureau, Ill., Occupants of "Nottingham" Are Relieved of Money and Valuables.

Moline, Ill., April 22.—Two masked robbers boarded the Golden State Limited on the Rock Island road at Bureau, Ill., robbed every passenger on the sleeper "Nottingham," and then pulled the air rope to signal the engineer to stop.

The engineer disregarded the signal, and one robber then shot a hole through the air brake hose at the end of the car, thereby setting the emergency brakes, and they left the train. Headed by the sheriff of Bureau county, a posse is in pursuit, and every farmer in that section of the state is on the lookout.

One of the most daring robberies in the history of train hold-ups, the affair is especially striking in that the highwaymen robbed occupants of only one car, though there were several other Pullman sleepers on the train.

The Golden State Limited is scheduled to go through to Bureau unless flagged at Joliet for passengers.

Moline is the next scheduled stop, and then the train goes to Rock Island. When the train left Chicago it went straight through to Bureau without any stops, and there halted for passengers, coal and water.

Just as the porter on the "Nottingham" was about to close the door of the car as the train started two men dressed in black, with black hats drawn over their faces and handkerchiefs covering all except their eyes, suddenly thrust revolvers at him.

"Get aboard and be quick about it," said one, and the frightened porter obeyed. Once inside the car they made the porter walk ahead of them through the car, with hands upraised over his head, and one by one the passengers were hustled out of their berths.

While one robber kept his revolver trained on the porter and the passengers, the other went through their belongings. Each was forced to stand in the aisle of the car, hands upraised.

One robber reached into every berth, snapped on the electric light and personally examined the effects of the passengers lest the latter, in handing out his or her valuables, might suddenly produce a gun.

When they had nearly stopped the train by shooting a hole in the air hose, thus setting the emergency brakes, the robbers leaped off the train and disappeared in the darkness.

The fact that they knew the location of the air brake hose and what would happen if a hole were shot in it, led railroad officials to believe that the robbers are either railroad employes or have been.

LINER EL SUD RAMMED

Accident Occurs in Fog Outside Galveston Harbor.

Mallory Liner Denver Is Other Vessel in Collision Which Is Expensive, but Causes No Deaths.

Galveston, Tex., April 22.—The Morgan liner El Paso, outbound for New York, was rammed by the Mallory liner Denver, incoming, and the former vessel is badly damaged with a large hole more than half way through her just forward of the first hatch.

The collision occurred fifteen miles out from the Galveston bar. A dense fog prevailed and the Denver slowed down to half speed when she heard the El Sud's whistle. When Captain Staples of the Denver sighted the lights of the El Sud he saw they could pass in safety, and veered from his course to allow more passage room to the El Sud, but the latter suddenly turned straight across to the left and, though the Denver signalled full speed astern, the collision could not be prevented.

The El Sud after the collision raced to the bar, where she went aground, and was pulled off later and brought into her berth. About 250 bales of cotton and much other of her cargo is strewn over the water. The damage to the El Sud is estimated at between $20,000 and $30,000 and that to the Denver at about $8,000.

Two Men from Titanic's Crowsnest to Testify.

MORE SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE

Hungarian Member of Crew, Arrested in Cleveland, May Have Important Things to Tell Senate's Investigating Sub-Committee.

Washington, April 22.—The sub-committee of the senate committee resumed its investigation of the Titanic disaster here this morning in the large caucus room of the senate office building. Senator William Alden Smith, the chairman, has arranged to call many of the passengers to come before the committee. Among these will be many women who have agreed to appear and tell what they know of the wreck. Mrs. Ryerson of New York, Mrs. Lucian Smith, the daughter of Representative Hughes of West Virginia, Mrs. Douglas of Minneapolis, have all indicated a willingness to testify. Senator Smith has also received assurances from Major Arthur Puchlon of Toronto that he will appear.

Interest in the investigation revolves around the testimony of Thomas Whitely, a first cabin steward on the Titanic. Whitely is represented as having overheard a conversation between the two sailors who were in the crowsnest aboard the Titanic and who claimed to have given the ship's officers repeated warnings of the presence of icebergs that wrecked the vessel. Whitely is now in St. Vincent's hospital in New York, but the committee expects to bring him to Washington as soon as he is able to travel.

Lewis Klein, a Hungarian member of the Titanic's crew, is another witness who is expected to give interesting and sensational testimony. Klein has been located in Cleveland, O., where he has made statements regarded as highly important by Senator Smith. The senator declined to disclose the nature of these statements.

Quartermaster Hitchings of the Titanic, who was arrested on the Lapland as she sailed from New York, will be closely examined by the committee.

The French ambassador called on Senator Smith to commend the committee for its diligence in pushing the inquiry and to assure him of willingness on the part of the French government to co-operate with the United States to prevent a recurrence of such disaster.

Secretary of the Navy Meyer also conferred with Senator Smith and it is believed will order the wireless operators and officers of the cruiser Chester to appear before the committee. The operator on the Chester is regarded as the most efficient wireless man in the service.

Senator Smith thinks that the testimony before the committee will prove of much value in enabling the governments of the world to agree on proper laws for the regulation of shipping so as to better safeguard life and property at sea.

IN MEMORY OF TITANIC'S DEAD

Mass Meeting Held in Broadway Theater, New York.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN SPEAKS

Great Auditorium Is Filled with Sorrowing Friends of Those Who Lost Lives in Disaster Which Caused Woe on Two Continents.

New York, April 22.—Expression of [illegible] ate for the heroism which has thrilled the world, and then strong words urging the legislation and regulation to prevent a recurrence of the Titanic catastrophe marked the memorial meeting at the Broadway theater.

Solemn as the occasion was the great audience which jammed the auditorium from orchestra to topmost balcony could not forbear testifying its approval of what was said at times and the appropriate resolutions which crystalized the sentiment.

Frederick Townsend Martin presided. The footlights were covered with banks of beautiful potted flowers contributed by the florists of the city. At the left end was a gigantic wreath contributed by James B. Nugent in memory of his friend, Henry B. Harris.

The headquarter's band from Governor's Island filled the orchestra box in front, while a stringed quartette led by Nathan Franke, was at the side.

When Mr. Martin appeared on the stage he was accompanied by William Jennings Bryan, Lewis Nixon, John D. Crimmins, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, the Rev. Dr. J. H. Wylie, Edmund Bailiss of the Seamen's Institute, Edward Breitung of Chicago, and a score of other gentlemen, with some ladies. As they were seated the band played Gounod's funeral march.

After the Rev. Dr. Wylie had read the service for the dead and made a prayer, Mr. Martin made a brief introductory address.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Bryan was introduced. The epigram about seeing farther through the tear than through the telescope had appealed to Mr. Bryan and he used it as a little text at the outset. "May we see through the tears now," he said, "Our coming here today is an evidence that sometimes all of us can meet together, and we do meet together here, drawn by a common purpose. There is a difference in education between us, much more than there should be, there is a difference in wealth, much more than there should be, there is a difference of church, much more than there should be, but we are at one when our hearts are touched, when we meet together upon the foundation of the heart.

FREDERICK TOWNSEND MARTIN.

"Many more people had died in a given period than the Titanic catastrophe had called for; it is not because more died in a shorter period that we came here, but because of the suddenness of the death, the awfulness of it.

"An occasion of this kind teaches its lesson," Mr. Bryan continued. "This catastrophe has given us a chance to see how many heroes there are who only need a call forward to vindicate their right to be admired.

"I am proud of what we have learned of these men and these women, proud to know of their self control that has given them the power to face death undismayed, aye—to stand back and say: 'Before me.'"

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GARY IS SIX YEARS OLD

Gary, Ind., April 22. — The city of Gary observed its sixth birthday, but there were no ceremonies connected with it.

In April, 1906, the present mayor, T. E. Knotts, and A. F. Knotts, at that time a steel trust official, arrived at the sand dune wilderness in Calumet township and supervised the unloading of a car of cinders. This was the beginning of the steel city, which now has a population of 30,000.

BLAST KILLS AN ENGINEER

Body Is Hurled Through Both Sides of a Box Car.

Bloomington, Ind., April 22.—By the explosion of one of the Monon's largest battleship type of engines here, William F. Hillman, the engineer, was instantly killed, and the fireman, Orville Clay, was scalded nearly to death. Hillman was hurled through both sides of a closed box car with a part of the cab. His skull was crushed and one leg was entirely severed.

The boiler cleared the telegraph wires and was pitched 250 yards into an open field. The state boiler inspector was notified to come and make an investigation.

STREAKING ACROSS SOUTH

Roosevelt Travels Rapidly from Arkansas to North Carolina.

Louisville, Ky., April 22. — Colonel Roosevelt came up out of Arkansas, sped out of St. Louis, snapped across the southern ends of Illinois and Indiana Sunday, and late in the afternoon got into Louisville and started south across Kentucky and Tennessee to chase right across that state into North Carolina, where his special pulled up at Greensboro today.

The colonel will spend all this afternoon and evening there. Until he arrived at Asheville, N. C., where he made a speech, the colonel did not make a stop.

Didn't Mean It.

Charles D. Hilles, secretary to the president, tells this on Gus J. Karger, the Washington newspaper man. Karger is a Hebrew, and a wit, so Hilles is safe in circulating this slander. It appears that when the presidential party visited the home town of Maj. Archie Butt, the president's aide, they attended church where Butt, as a youth, was a worshiper. The president and Karger sat in a pew near the front, and when the stirring hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers!" was given out, the president, as usual, lifted up his voice in song. The boys looked at Karger, and to their astonishment noted that he was caroling away cheerfully alongside the president. "But I looked over," says Hilles, "and saw that Karger had his hands on the top of the pew in front of him, with his fingers crossed."

SEARCHING WRECK SCENE

Cable Ship Mackay Bennett Now Where Titanic Foundered.

Halifax, N. S., April 22.—The cable ship Mackay Bennett must have been cruising at the scene of the Titanic foundering for many hours now in search of bodies, but no word has been received from her here except that it is learned that a steamer proceeding westward had seen bodies floating at sea and notified the Mackay Bennett, which immediately proceeded to the locality indicated.

There had been rumors that bodies were found, one of these being that Captain Smith's remains had been picked up. All these rumors were absolutely baseless. The Mackay Bennett's search is to be indefinite.

BUTT MEMORIAL SERVICE

President and Others Prominent in Washington in Attendance.

Washington, April 22. — President and Mrs. Taft attended services at St. Paul's Episcopal church in commemoration of Major Archbald W. Butt, the president's military aide, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster. Major Butt was a member of St. Paul's church.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, Secretary of War Stimson, Charles D. Hilles, secretary to the president, and many persons prominent in Washington society, including members of the diplomatic corps, were also present.

HIPPO ATE A MINCE PIE

But Bill Snyder, the Keeper, Said the Confection Was Wasted on Miss Murphy.

It is throwing money away, according to Bill Snyder, head keeper of the Central park menagerie, to feed a hippo on pies, especially on the mince variety. This observation by the keeper was elicited after he had tossed a beautiful mince pie into the yawning mouth of Miss Murphy, one of the hippos in the menagerie.

The hippo had been promised the pie by a man on the upper West side fully a week ago. He said he wanted "the kids" to have a laugh. When Miss Murphy gulped the pie down yesterday more than a score of persons, as well as "the kids," laughed.

It was a conventional 30 cent pie, but Miss Murphy looked more important than 30 cents when she began to crush the delicacy in her seesawing jaws. According to the man who carried the pie to the menagerie he had soaked it well in brandy. He was accompanied by two lads.

Snyder tickled the hippo's chin with the edge of the pie, and as she opened her mouth, he sent the whole thing in at once, as if it were a straw hat.

"Some bugs in this town!" said the keeper. "A woman came here yesterday and wanted to know if she could get a permit to give the lions catnip." —New York Tribune.

Spice of Life.

One way of ironing out domestic difficulties was originated by the late Vaughan Kester, author of "The Prodigal Judge." He was living at Gunston, an old colonial estate on the Potomac, not far from Mount Vernon, with his wife, an aunt of Paul Wilstach, who made the dramatic version of "Thais," when he drafted the constitution and by-laws of the Mutual Help association, retails the New York Sun, in mentioning the incident.

"Everybody's business but my own," was the motto of the association. Under the head, "Declaration of Purpose," appeared this paragraph:

"The members of this association, recognizing that there are realms of indecision and irresolution difficult for the single mind to grasp, penetrate and fully explore, have formed an association for the specific purpose that the individual members may have the advantage of every other member's opinion on all conceivable questions affecting his or her personal welfare, believing that by so doing they will add the variety which is the spice of life."

Obituary

MRS. E. L. BURDETTE

Florida N. Burgess was born in Chicago Ill., Dec 7, 1859 coming to Macon with her parents when a little child.

She was united in marriage to Eugene L. Burdette March 17, 1876 To this union was born one son Ernest L. Burdette, who with the husband and her only sister, Mrs. Caby Bryan is left to mourn her loss.

All the years of her married life were spent in Macon except the last two, the first being spent in Ann Arbor and the last at the home in Brownville where she fell asleep Wednesday night and wakened Friday morning, for just as day was breaking in the east, her spirit took its flight to the home above.

She ran the journey of her life in fifty-two years and a few months, and her pathway was marked with deeds of love and kindness. Truth was the inspiration of her life and she proved its worth. She was a member of the Reform Church in Macon for a number of years.

Through the gloom of sorrow there comes back a bright beam of Sunshine, which turns our tears to jewels of promise, and the morning is not far away, when the love of Christ shall call us also.

MICHIGAN FACTIONS RIOT IN CONVENTION

Speaker Thrown Bodily from Platform in Bay City.

Taft Men and Roosevelt Supporters Each Flock by Themselves and Big Row Will Be Passed Along to Chicago Convention.

Bay City, Mich., April 12.—When an attempt was made to call the Republican state convention to order W. D. Gordon of Midland was thrown bodily from the convention platform.

Gordon insisted that he was recognized by Chairman Knox and climbed over the press table, shouting:

"Gentlemen you will hear me. I have been recognized by your chairman."

Mr. Gordon had just reached the side of Chairman Knox when he received a tremendous push from behind. Down he went to the press table, demolishing several derby hats of the newspaper men and landing on the floor on his feet. He deliberately climbed back on the platform.

A riot broke out at the entrance of the convention hall when the Roosevelt men tried to force their way in after the Taft delegates had gone. Deputy State Factory Inspector John W. Smith had a hand to hand fight with a Taft man and a battle was precipitated, half dozen fist fights ensuing. Policemen charged the combatants with their clubs.

While the Taft forces were perfecting a temporary organization, the Roosevelt delegates, amid groans, cat calls, hisses and complete pandemonium, elected Herbert Baker, speaker of the house of representatives, temporary chairman, made his election permanent and appointed committees and tellers, recognized all contesting Roosevelt delegations and elected as delegates at large to Chicago Governor Chase S. Osborn, Charles Nichols, Detroit; Sybrant Wesselius, Grand Rapids; H. F. Boughey, Traverse City; Theodore Joslyn, Adrian; W. D. Gordon, Midland.

Shortly before the convention convened in the opening session Charles Nichols of Detroit, manager for the Roosevelt forces in Michigan, marched his delegation to the national guard armory door and announced if there was a rump convention the Taft people would hold it.

"We have the delegates," said Nichols. "The unprecedented action of the state central committee is a practical admission of the Taft forces that we are in the majority."

At 12:30 o'clock the full Taft delegation had gained seats. The Roosevelt delegation was still outside. State Central Committeeman Bird made a motion at 12 o'clock that no delegates be admitted to the floor of the convention unless provided with a ticket signed by the secretary of the state central committee. The motion carried and Sergeant-at-Arms Lyle was instructed accordingly. One door of the convention hall was opened at 12:20 and Lyle began to admit, one by one, delegates bearing credentials signed by Secretary King of the state central committee and refusing admittance to delegates bearing credentials signed by Chairman Knox.

Troops were on guard to prevent rioting.

It has been decided by the Roosevelt leaders to carry the question of disputed delegates to the national convention in Chicago.

Exposure Caused Death.

Cadillac, Mich., April 15. — Philip Stevens, who suffered greatly from exposure in a stump field, died from the effects.

CHURCH FLOOR CAVES

Two Persons Killed and a Number Injured in New Jersey.

The caving of the floor of a Roman Catholic church at Harrington Park, N. J., caused the death of two women and the severe or dangerous injury of about fifty persons.

The temporary wooden supports under the floor could not stand the weight of 300 eager men and women who had rushed into the edifice, snapped and the planking bowed down to the cellar ten feet below in the form of a hopper.

RUNAWAY

FRIDAY AFTERNOON

On Chicago Street. Narrow Escape of Two Ladies

What might have been a very serious accident occurred Friday afternoon Mrs. Chas. Evans and Mrs. Floyd Billington were driving on our street, when the horse became frightened and started on a run, turning the corner at the bank, where the buggy overturned throwing the two ladies to the ground. They were taken into Spayde's Shoe Store where everything was done to make them comfortable, and later they went to a doctor. Mrs. Billington was cut about her eyes and nose by the breaking of her glasses and was otherwise hurt, the buggy passing over her. Mrs. Evans also was quite badly bruised one side and arm seeming to be injured most. It was a miracle that no bones were broken and it is to be hoped that the injuries received will not prove serious.

The horse freed from the buggy, ran to Temple's corner, where he took to the railroad track and went north for quite a distance.

The ladies returned to their home in Tipton on the train later in the afternoon.

Daniel Pitcher Saw Service in China

SERVED WITH FOURTH AMERICAN CAVALRY

Met A Brother While in the Service Abroad Who Happened to be a Lieutenant in the German Navy, Then Stationed at Hong Kong.

DURING BOXER UPRISING

Just at this time when so much is happening in China when so many new developments are appearing, the experience, of Daniel Pitcher, now a resident of Tecumseh in the employ of Mr. Johnson in the meat market will be of considerable interest as he was in China during the Boxer uprising several years ago. He also has a record for service in China, that no other citizen of Tecumseh can boast.

Mr. Pitcher served with the 4th U. S. cavalry in China during the Boxer uprising. On account of illness he he did not go to Peking but was left at Canton, where he remained until peace was declared, serving as messenger for the American consul at the American consulate. He remained at Canton for five weeks and then was sent to Hong Kong in which city he was again connected with the American consulate until his regiment came to Hong Kong, where he joined them on the trip to the Philippines for five and one-half years and in consideration of his faithful services for the United States he was presented with a certificate of merit from United States government and a medal of honor was presented him by the adjutant general in the name of the people of Michigan, honors which have been bestowed on but few Michigan residents.

During his service in China Mr Pitcher had the opportunity of traveling considerably throughout that country, visiting some of the principal cities, among them Fu Chow, Hankow, Siokan, Amoy, Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Canton. The latter city, he says, is a decidedly European colony, one coming in contact there with Americans, Russians, French, Germans, and other nationalities.

Before leaving Hong Kong for the Philippines, Mr Pitcher says, he was aboard the German gunboat Iltis, which was almost totally disabled during some fray, and there he had the rare and pleasant fortune of meeting his brother, Hans Pitcher, who was at that time a lieutenant in the German navy.

Mr. Pitcher has seen service with the United States army for fifteen and one-half years, about a third of the time being spent in the Philippines. He has especially pleasant recollections of his stay at Hong Kong, which has a British colony and where he and his regiment had the opportunity of becoming quite familiar with the British soldiers, and where also he had the opportunity of meeting soldiers of all the nations of the world.

Glen Sowle of Holloway, was a Tecumseh visitor Monday.

Myrtle Barrett of Ridgeway was in town for the show Monday night.

Mrs. John Scarlett of Toledo, came this morning for a visit with Edith Shull and other friends.

Telegram That Saved India.

In connection with the Durbar, a museum of Mogul relics has been arranged, which contains, among other objects, the telegram which illustrates Montgomery's great saying, "The electric telegraph saved India." This is the famous telegram dispatched by Brendish on May 11th, 1857, which gave the news of the rebellion to the north of India, and enabled Lawrence and Edwardes and Nicholson to take steps for the disarmament of regiments on the verge of revolt, and to make those brilliant arrangements for the relief of Delhi by which—and probably by which alone—the mutiny was crushed out, and Delhi once more returned to her British allegiance.

Disgusted Old Columbus.

Columbus deftly stood the egg on end, then waited for the applause.

"That's all right enough," said the audience, "but show us how to buy a really fresh egg."

Strawberries Every Month.

A strawberry plant, imported from Siberia last spring by Edward Dixon of Forest Grove, Ore., bears fruit every month in the year, the berries being white in color when fully ripe. The berries are not so large as the Oregon berry. The flavor resembles that of a pineapple.

Blossoms and fruit are found on the plant every week in the year; however the best season for bearing is from August 1 until about the end of the year.

The berries hang in clusters on a long, slender stem. Each plant has several stems on which the fruit grow. The stems with leaves bear no fruit.

Instead of propagating new plants from runners, as is the case of native strawberries, in this species the parent plant is broken up, the several fruit-bearing stems are separated and planted individually.—New York World.

HARD ON MRS. PACKER, TOO

Blueberry was a small and unimportant rural railroad station, and the post of ticket agent was held by Mrs. Nancy Dipple, an energetic woman who lived near the tracks. Travel to and from the town was light, and having little use for a separate office, Mrs. Dipple sold railroad tickets, when they were called for, at her own house, where she kept her stock for safety in a bureau drawer.

Besides selling tickets, Mrs. Dipple "did for" a houseful of boarders and a shiftless husband. A ticket for town being required one day when the agent's hands were occupied with the mixing of biscuit dough, Mrs. Dipple requested her husband to act as her representative, and he obligingly complied. A little later he appeared in the kitchen with a troubled brow. "Nancy," he asked, anxiously, "was any of the town tickets blue?"

"No—all red," said Nancy.

"Well,"—Mr. Dipple rubbed his head with a disturbed look,—"I sold Mrs. Packer a blue ticket, an' then afterwards I noticed some red tickets in the drawer, an'—"

"Forevermore!" Mrs. Dipple broke out in great vexation. "Did I ever see the like! You've gone and sold her one o' my milk tickets,—the last one I had,—you careless critter, and now the train's gone and we can't get it back! And milk's so dear, too!"—Youth's Companion.

AMUSEMENTS.

"BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK"

"Beverly of Graustark" is being billed for presentation at the Bradley Opera House, Wednesday May 1st. We understand this is the last attraction booked for the present season at the Bradley and we are certain that after the two big houses which greeted "Graustark" here that "Beverly" will be given a capacity house. It is a companion play to "Graustark" and by the same author.

When George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly was presented in Pittsburg the attendance was so great that after Tuesday night every seat in the house was sold for all of the remaining performance was given on Saturday morning to a crowded house. While it has not been necessary to play a morning performance in the other cities, the fact remains that "Beverly" has been greeted by crowded houses in every city where the company has appeared, and the result will probably be the same here as there is an unsual amount of interest manifested in the engagement among all classes of theatre patrons.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

Those who did not attend the entertainment at the Opera House Monday evening, missed the greatest event of the season. The theme was so grand and the characters so well chosen that one followed each line in almost breathless suspense.

The noble presence of Marco Valerius the Christian, who in spite of honors, high position and the love of the princess was able to stand firm even unto death for the love of the Nazarene, inspired the audience with the faith that sustained him, and they followed him in their hearts to the gates of death.

The princess Artemia, daughter of the Emperor of Rome, a pagan, thoroughly imbued with the idolatry of the times, through her love for Marco was led to believe as he believed and bravely declared her conversion before Diocletian, even though it doomed her to death with Marco,

Every character was so well sustained, the scenery so complete, the best ever shown upon our stage, we feel assured that every one carried away something good to remember. Such entertainments are uplifting to a community.

MOTHERS DEPARTMENT OF THE FRIENDS SABBATH SCHOOL

The Friends Sabbath School has decided to have a Mothers Department of its own. The employment of this Mothers Department will not in any way interfere with legitimate work of the medical profession of the place, although it is hoped that it will lessen the need of the services of the doctors.

This department is intended to help mothers in solving the many problems of the home, which concern the present happiness and future welfare of their children, young and old. Mothers troubles as they relate to the home are many, and her unanswered questions innumerable. She spends sleepless nights and anxious days because she does not know what is best or how to do it.

It is hoped that this organization will help to answer their questions and solve many problems for the mothers. The next meeting will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. George Cummins. All mothers are cordially invited to attend.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich.. says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Delilia Miles, of Tower, Mich, had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

As They See Us in England.

Political riots in America are carried out in a thoroughgoing fashion. Lord Rosebery tells a story of a friend of his who visited Baltimore when an election for congress was in progress. Turning in for a shave he complained to the negro barber that his razor was very blunt. "Very likely, sir," was the reply; "I was out last night at an election meeting."—London Chronicle.

HORSES LEAP INTO AUTO

Frightened Animals Push Rear Seat on Driver's Head, Injuring Him.

Upper Sandusky, O., April 22. — A singular accident happened here. William Leverich was about to hitch a team on Main street when an automobile driven by David Rall grazed the animals' flank. Rall slowed down to see if the horses had been injured and the animals started after the machine. Rall quickened the speed of the car and to avoid the horses turned into an alley.

The horses leaped on the back of the machine, pushing the back seat over Rall's head. Rall ran the car into a building, damaging the machine. He was only slightly injured by the horses.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by man on the place who wouldn't give his ears to be seen on the same side of the street with Lestrange, let alone to work under him. They do read the racing news. That part of it will be all right, if I can have him."

"If it is necessary—"

"I think it is, sir."

"What is your opinion?" he questioned. "If Dick had been listening I should have asked his, and I fancy yours is fully as valuable. Come, shall we have this racing manager?"

Astonished, she looked from her uncle to the other man. And perhaps it was the real anxiety and suspense of Bailey's expression that drew her quick reply.

"Let us, uncle. Since we need him, let us have him."

"Very well," said Mr. Ffrench. "You hear, Bailey."

There was a long silence after the junior partner's withdrawal.

"Come where I can see you, Emily," her uncle finally demanded. "I liked your decided answer a few moments ago; you can reason. How long have you been a daughter in my house?"

"Six years," she responded, obediently moving to a low chair opposite. "I was fifteen when you took me from the convent—to make me very, very happy, dear."

"I sent for you when I sent for Dick, and for the same reason. I have tried three times to rear one of my name to fitness to bear it, and each one has failed except you. I wish you were a man, Emily; there is work for a Ffrench to do."

"When you say that, I wish I were. But—I'm not, I'm not." She flung out her slender, round arms in a gesture of helpless resignation. "I'm not even a strong-minded woman who might do instead. Uncle Ethan, may I ask—it was Mr. Bailey who made me think—my cousin whom I never saw, will he never come home?"

He voice faltered on the last words, frightened at her own daring. But her uncle answered evenly, if coldly:

"Never."

"He offended you so?"

"His whole life was an offense. School, college, at home, in each he went wrong. At twenty-one he left me and married a woman from the vaudeville stage. It is not of him you are to think, Emily, but of a substitute for him. For that I designed Dick; once I hoped you would marry him and sober his idleness."

"Please, no," she refused gently. "I am fond of Dick, but—please, no."

"I am not asking it of you. He is well enough, a good boy, not otherwise, but not what is needed here. Failed, again; I am not fortunate. There is left only you."

"Me?"

Her startled dark eyes and his determined gray ones met, and so remained.

"You, and your husband. Are you going to marry a man who can take my place in this business, in the factory and the model village my brother and I built around it; a man whose name will be fit to join with ours and so in a fashion preserve it here? Will you wait until such a one is found and will you aid me to find him? Or will you too follow selfish, idle fancies of your own?"

"No!" she answered, quite pale. "I would not do that! I will try to help."

"You will take up the work the men of your name refuse, you will provide a substitute for them?"

Her earnestness sprang to meet his strength of will, she leaned nearer in her enthusiasm of self-abnegation, scarcely understood.

"I will find a substitute or accept yours. I, indeed I will try not to fail."

It was characteristic that he offered neither praise nor caress.

"You have relieved my mind," said Ethan Ffrench, and turned his face once more to the fire.

CHAPTER III.

It was October when the consultation was held in the library of the old Ffrench house on the Hudson; December was very near on the sunny morning that Emily drove out to the factory and sought Bailey in his office.

"I wanted to talk with you," she explained, as that gentleman rose to receive her. "We have known each other for a long time, Mr. Bailey; ever since I came from the Sacred Heart to live with Uncle Ethan. That is a very long time."

"It's a matter of five or six years," agreed the charmed Bailey, contemplating her with affectionate pride in her prettiness and grace. "You used to drive out here with your pony and spend many an hour looking on and asking questions. You'll excuse me, Miss Emily, but there was many a man passed the whisper that you'd have made a fine master of the works."

She shook her head, folding her small gloved hands upon the edge of the desk at the opposite sides of which they were seated.

"At least I would have tried. I am quite sure I would have tried. But I am only a girl. I came to ask you something regarding that," she lifted her candid eyes to his, her soft color rising. "Do you know—have you ever met any men who cared and understood about such factories as this? Men who could take charge of a business, the manufacturing and racing and selling, like my uncles? I have a reason for asking."

"Sure thing," said Bailey, unexpectedly prompt. "I've met one man who knows how to handle this factory better than I do, and I've been at it twelve years. And there he is—" he turned in his revolving chair and rolled up the shade covering the glass-set door into the next room, "my manager, Lestrange."

The scene thus suddenly opened to the startled Emily was sufficiently matter-of-fact, yet not lacking in a certain sober animation of its own. Around a drafting table central in the bare, systematic disorder of the apartment beyond, three or four blue-shirted men were grouped, bending over a set of drawings, which Lestrange was explaining. Explaining with a vivid interest in his task that sparkled over his clear face in a changing play of expression almost mesmeric in its command of attention. The men watched and listened intently; they themselves no common laborers, but the intelligent workmen who were to carry out the ideas here set forth. Wherever Lestrange had been, he was coatless and the sleeves of his outing shirt were rolled back, leaving bare the arms whose smooth symmetry revealed little of the racing driver's strength; his thick brown hair was rumpled into boyish waves and across his forehead a fine black streak wrote of recent personal encounter with things practical.

None of the group in the next room had noticed the movement of the shade, absorbed in one another; any sound being muffled by the throb of adjacent machinery. Bailey obeyed the request, and leaned back in his chair.

"That's Darling Lestrange," he stated with satisfaction. "That's his own design for an oiling system he's busy with, and it's a beauty. He's entered for every big race coming this season, starting next week in Georgia, and meantime he oversees every department in every building as it never was done before. The man for me, he is."

Emily made an unenthusiastic sign of agreement.

"I meant a very different man from Mr. Lestrange," she replied, her dignity altogether Ffrench. "I have no doubt that he is all you say, but I was thinking of another class. I meant—well, I meant a gentleman."

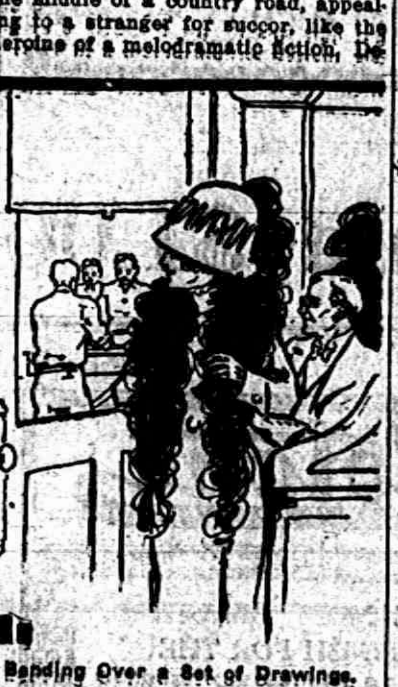
"Oh, you meant a gentleman," replied Bailey, surveying her oddly. "I didn't know, you see. No; I don't know any one like that."

"Thank you. Then I will go. I—it does not matter."

She did not go, however, but remained leaning on the arm of her chair in troubled reverie, her long lashes lowered. Bailey sat as quietly, watching her and waiting.

The murmur of voices came dully through the closed door, one, lighter and clearer in tone, most frequently rising above the roar pervading the whole building. It was not possible that Emily's glimpse of Lestrange across the glass should identify him absolutely with the man she had seen once in the flickering lights and shadows on the Long Island road; but he was not of a type easily forgotten, and she had been awakened to a doubting recognition.

Now, many little circumstances recurred to her; a strangeness in Dick's manner when the new manager was alluded to, the fact that her rescuer on that October night had been driving a racing car and had worn a racing costume; and lastly, when Bailey spoke of "Darling" Lestrange there had flashed across her mind the mechanician's ridiculous answer to the request to aid her chauffeur in changing a tire: "I'll do it for you, Darling." And listening to that dominant voice in the next room, she slowly grew crimson before a vision of herself in the middle of a country road, appealing to a stranger for succor, like the heroine of a melodramatic fiction. Decidedly she would never see Lestrange, never let him discover Miss Ffrench.



Bending Over a Set of Drawings.

"I will go," she reiterated, rising impetuously.

The glass-set door opened with unwarning abruptness.

Helpless, Emily stood still, and straightway found herself looking directly into Lestrange's gray eyes as he halted on the threshold.

It was Bailey who upheld the moment, all unconsciously.

"Come in," he invited heartily. "Miss Ffrench, this is our manager, Mr. Lestrange; the man who's going to double our sales this year."

Emily moved, then straightened herself proudly, lifting her small head. Lestrange had recognized her, she felt; the call was to courage, not flight.

"I think I have already met Mr. Lestrange," she said composedly. "I am pleased to meet him again."

"Met him!" cried Bailey. "Met him? Why—"

Neither heeded him. A gleaming surprise and warmth lit Lestrange's always brilliant face.

"Thank you," he answered her. "You are more than good to recall me, Miss Ffrench. I owe an apology for breaking in this way, but I fancied Mr. Bailey alone—and he spoils me."

"It is nothing; I was about to go." She turned to give Bailey her hand, smiling involuntarily in her relief. With a glance, an inflection, Lestrange had stripped their former meeting of its embarrassment and unconventionality, how, she neither analyzed nor cared.

"Good morning," said Bailey. "Shall I take you through, or—"

But Lestrange was already holding open the door, with a bright unconcern as to his workmanlike costume which impressed Emily pleasantly. She wondered if Dick would have borne the situation as well, in the impossible event of his being found at work.

The two walked together down an aisle of the huge, machinery-crowded room, the grimy men lifting their heads to gaze after Emily as she passed. Once Lestrange paused to speak to a man who sat, notebook and pencil in hand, beside another who manipulated under a grinding wheel a delicate aluminum casting.

CONVALESCENTS

Those Recovering from Any Severe Illness

After a long wasting illness, convalescents require nourishing food that will not overtax the digestive functions—and in the way of a strength-restoring and vitality-making tonic, we know of nothing that equals Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil).

Vinol creates an appetite, re-establishes good digestion and helps the daily food to make rich blood, form flesh, strong muscles and impart new life and vitality to every organ in the body. We ask those who need a strength and flesh-building tonic restorative to call at our store and get a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that if it does not help them we will refund their money without question.

CELL FOR MICHIGAN BANKER

His Son Palmer Must Also Serve Five Years at Leavenworth.

Detroit, Mich., April 19.—Henry M. Dearing, seventy-three years old, the cashier of the defunct Albion National bank, and his son, Palmer M. Dearing, were each sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., for misappropriation of the funds of the bank.

The son was secretary of the Cook Manufacturing company and it was admitted that thousands of dollars were illegally taken from the bank in a vain effort to save the Cook company from failure.

The bank's discrepancies totaled more than $100,000.

Petoskey Dock Opens.

Petoskey, Mich., April 22.—At the local office of the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. it is announced the dock is open for business. As Little Traverse bay is practically clear of ice, the first boat will arrive in a short time.

LOCATE FATHER AFTER DEATH

Five Children Learn They Are Heirs to Estate of $90,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 20.—Charles Youngren, of this city, has returned from Cadillac where, by the death of his father, Axel Youngren, a mystery of thirty-four years has been cleared and an estate at Jonkoping, Sweden, aggregating $90,000 placed at the disposal of the dead man's five children.

Youngren, upon the birth of his youngest son and the death of his wife, left Sweden, grief-stricken. He came direct to Grand Rapids, placing his three youngest children in the home of a sister, Mrs. Charles Carlson, of Sparta. He then disappeared and nothing was heard of him until his death in Cadillac, Mich., last week.

Fifteen years ago Axel's mother died in Sweden, leaving her estate to him. The children in this country, who had long searched for their father, could not locate him. In the meantime he was leading the life of a lumberjack in the woods of Wexford county. On his deathbed he told of the fortune across the seas, confiding the secret to a woodsman. At his funeral the children were reunited and the fact of the fortune broken to them, the father having kept it from them.

COLLEGE HEAD TO RETIRE

President A. Gaylord Slocum Will Leave Kalamazoo School.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 22. — The trustees of Kalamazoo college have formally accepted the resignation of President A. Gaylord Slocum, LL. D., who has served at the head of the institution for nineteen years.

Having completed the task of adding $100,000 to the college endowment fund last June Mr. Slocum was granted a leave of absence for recuperation and planned to spend the time in Europe. He has been ill, however, since November, and for some time has been confined to his bed in a Philadelphia hospital. Dr. H. L. Stetson will continue as acting president till June, 1913.

LIGHTING PLANT IS WRECKED BY BLASTS

Exslosion of Nineteen Barrels of Gasoline.

Village of Lawrence, Near Paw Paw, Is Without Light—Water Works Also Put Out of Business by the Accident.

Paw Paw, Mich., April 22.—The light and power plant at Lawrence, nine miles west of here, blew up. The plant, which was run by a gasoline motor, supplied the power for lighting the villages and for the municipal water works.

There were nineteen separate explosions, there being nineteen barrels of gasoline in the works. Windows were blown out of buildings some distance away and the ensuing fire was a fierce one. Paw Paw was telephoned for help and the fire company with its apparatus was taken to the depot and a train made ready to transport the apparatus to the scene of the conflagration, when a message was received that the fire was under control and help would not be needed.

Fortunately no one was hurt, as there was nobody in the building when the explosion occurred, although a couple of lads had left the plant but a few minutes before. The plant is entirely ruined and until it can be reconstructed the inhabitants of the town will have to go back to kerosene lamps for light and to wells for water for domestic use.

COURTENAY TRIAL ON

Judge Law Grants Change of Venue In Case.

Port Huron, Mich., April 22.—The trial of James Courtenay, charged with breaking and entering the New Baltimore postoffice, will be held in St. Clair county. Judge Law granted the motion for a change of venue, made by the defense, but did not set a date for the trial. Macomb county will be obliged to stand the entire expense of the case, although it is held in this county.

Courtenay was once tried in Mt. Clemens on the charge and the jury disagreed. Subsequently he broke jail and escaped. He was captured in California and brought back for trial last winter. The trial will probably be held after the cases on the local criminal calendar are disposed of.

LENNON—This pretty little village, partly in Genesee and partly in Shiawassee county, will endeavor to exist without a saloon this year. The township board of Clayton has declined to accept the bond of Perkins brothers, who are proprietors of the Lennon hotel. Considerable comment has been roused by the action of the board, since the bond of a Swartz Creek saloon keeper, also doing business in Clayton township, was accepted.

MILFORD—A destructive fire of unknown origin nearly wiped out the village of New Hudson, situated on the Grand River road, five miles south of here. In some way the fire started in the big brick store operated by C. M. Pierce and one of the side walls fell out before the fire was discovered. The flames were finally checked after burning several wooden buildings near the store.

THIRTY-FIVE PEOPLE KILLED BY TORNADO

Portions of Illinois and Indiana Are Swept.

Several Villages in the Path of the Storm Suffer Heavy Loss—Destruction at Grant Park, Ill.—Farmers Suffer.

According to the latest advices just received at least thirty five persons lost their lives in the tornado which swept over central and southern Illinois and northwestern Indiana.

Following is a list o fsome of the vitims: Mrs. Nelson Hulse, Campus, Ill. Her two children are fataly injured; Cassie Smart, Morocco, Ind; Baby Smart, Morocco, Ind; Mrs. Charles Rice and four children, Morocco, Ind.; Frank Rice, Morocco; Mrs. Frank Rice, Morocco; Nelson Hulse, Campus, Ill., crushed under a house when it was blown down; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hulse; four, names not given, reported by Illinois Central railroad, killed at Murphyscboro, Ill.; five, names not given, killed at Willisville, Ill.; twelve, names not given, killed instantly at Bush, Ill.; three Bush survivors died a few hours later at a hospital in Murphysboro.

Miles of telegraph and telegraph wires were blown down, farmhouses were demolished in the path of the storm and it is probable the death list will be increased when communication is restored with all points over which the tornado passed.

While there is no means of estimating the damage by the storm, it is certain to run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

At Bush, a village in Williamson county, Ill., the greatest loss of life occurred, fifteen persons having been killed and more than forty injured. Nearly every dwelling in the village was destroyed or damaged.

Forty-one injured persons were taken from Bush to Murphysboro in a special train, the crew of which said only a small portion of the village had been searched and that more dead probably would be found.

Most of the dead were foreigners, who worked in the coal mines near Bush.

At Morocco, Ind., nine persons lost their lives by being crushed in the collapse of their homes.

At Grant Park, Ill., half a dozen persons were injured and damage amounting to more than $100,000 was caused by the tornado.

INVESTIGATION STARTED

J. Bruce Ismay Appears Before the Senate Committee.

J. Bruce Ismay, of the International Mercantile Marine, and the four surviving officers of the Titanic appeared before the United States senate investigating committee at the Waldorf-Astoria to give their version of the marine disaster that has shocked the entire civilized world.

When asked the circumstances under which he left the boat, Mr. Ismay replied almost in a whisper:

"One of the boats was being filled. Officers called out to know if there were any more women to go. There were none. No passengers were on deck. As the boat was being lowered I got into it."

Charges of criminal negligence on the part of Ismay have been freely made following the admission on the stand that it was he who ordered Captain Smith to speed up, even though it was known the ship was in the vicinity of icebergs. Here are some of the facts which have been established:

That the Titanic, under orders from Ismay, principal owner of the White Star line, who, as a passenger aboard his own vessel, fled among the lifeboats that were the first to go, and left many of his passengers and his captain to die, was steaming at a rate of 21 knots (26 miles) an hour.

That Ismay and officers of the vessel knew that the ship was nearing a gigantic ice field.

That the forward watch was not increased.

That 210 of the crew were saved when 86 would have been ample to man all the lifeboats that were aboard.

That fifteen women of the first cabin perished.

INSTRUCTED FOR ROOSEVELT

Illinois Republican Delegates Receive Their Directions.

At Springfield, Ill., the delegates to the Republican national convention were instructed to vote for Theodore Roosevelt by the state convention, when the platform was adopted.

Illinois Democrats Divided.

Two delegations representing a hopelessly divided party will go to the national Democratic convention from Illinois. National Committeeman Roger C. Sullivan of Chicago will head the delegation bearing the regular stamp, while Mayor Harrison will lead the bolting set. This was the result of the convention at Peoria, Ill.

FATALLY KICKED BY HORSE

Galesburg Boy, Terribly Injured, Is Taken to Hospital.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 23.—Stern Van Surkangast, a sixteen-year-old Galesburg boy, was brought to Borgess hospital here suffering from a fearful gash that had been cut in his side when kicked by a horse. The boy was in an unconscious condition and there is little hope expressed for his recovery.

The boy was walking behind the horse when it was being taken from a barn. The animal suddenly turned and kicked the lad in the left side. Besides cutting a big hole in his side the kick is believed to have caused internal injuries.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Almost A Miracle

One of the most startling changes seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all are family thought he was going into consumption, but be began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Nnow he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1 00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MISERY loves company, but the sentiment is not reciprocated.

Michigan

John Lane, St. Joseph, Mich., a member of A. W. Chapman, Post No, 21, G. A. R. was cured through the use of Foley Kidney Pills. He says, "I tried various kidney remedies but all failed to help me until I took Foley Kidney Pills and I can honestly say that cured me completely."

RAILROAD ACCIDENT

Wednesday Evening April 24

The southbound passenger train on Wednesday evening met with what might have been a very serious accident 2½ miles this side of Manchester The breaking of some ties caused the rails to spread causing the engine and tender to leave the track, the smoking car was quite badly shaken but escaped injury.

Aid was received at once and the train reached Tecumseh at 11:30 instead of the usual hour 9:03. Fortunately no one was hurt. Being so near an embankment, and escaping, seemed almost marvelous.

IRVIN A. SNYDER

Candidate for Republican Nomination for Register of Deeds

Irvin A. Snyder, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Register of Deeds at the coming primary, was born in 1860, in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, of American-German parentage.

His people were farmers, and came to Ohio in 1870, settling on a farm close to the Michigan line, in the vicinity of Fayette, Ohio, and two miles South from the present residence of the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Snyder received his education in the district school, high school at Wauseon, Ohio, and finally entered the Fayette Normal at Fayette, Ohio, graduating in the business and commercial department of that institution in June, 1883. After graduation Mr. Snyder work in the mercantile business for one year, and finally in 1884 went to farming, which occupation he has ever since and is now following. On December 9, 1885 he married Mary A. Blandhard, a daughter of Levi Blandhard, who was one of the early pioneers of Medina Township, this County.

Immediately upon the marriage, he settled upon a farm in Medina Township, about six miles west of Morenci, and being the same farm on which he now lives.

Mr. Snyder was Clerk of Medina Township for four years, and for the last eight years has represented his township as Supervisor.

In politics he has always been a Republican, and is one of the staunch and substantial citizens of Medina, If nominated as a candidate for the office he seeks, he will make an earnest campaign and if elected will discharge the duties of his office in a careful, painstaking way and in such a manner as will meet the approval of the public.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65% of bald headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if the will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statments no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate to put our word, or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Tecumseh who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly —say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever

We are established right here in Tecumseh, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. B. J. Pulver.

"BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK"

When George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly" is presented at the Bradley Opera House on next Wednesday night May 1 local play goers will have an opportunity of enjoying one of the most delightful romantic plays of a decade, which has been favorably received in Buffalo, Toronto, Cincinnati Pittsburg and Chicago. "Beverly is a dramatization of Mr. McCutcheon's story "Beverly of Graustark," by Robert M. Baker, who has adhered very closely to the story contained in the book with the result that he has succeeded admirably in retaining the atmosphere of the delightful little principality.

Scenically and artistically perfect, replete with beautiful women, gorgeous costumes, dashing men in vivid living action and clean wholesome humor in abundance are some of the delights of Geo. Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly" which will be seen for the first time in this city.

"Beverly" is a companion play to "Graustark" and by the same author.

VAPOR TREATMENT

For Catarrh, Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat and Bronchitis

Everybody knows that breathing HYOMEI a few times a day through the little hard rubber pocket inhaler will in short time drive out catarrh.

Many people regularly use the vapor treatment at night in conjunction with the inhaler, claiming that it hastens results.

This is the vapor treatment: Into a bowl three quarters full of boiling water pour a scant teaspoonful of HYOMEI, cover head and bowl with towel and breathe for five minutes the soothing, healing, antiseptic HYOMEI vapor. Try it when using HYOMEI for any nose or throat ailment.

HYOMEI is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to put an end to catarrh, or money back. A bottle of HYOMEI costs 50 cents; a complete outfit, which includes inhaler, $1.00.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich. says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists.

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St, Houghton, Mich,, says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal,

Mrs. Delila Miles, of Tower, Mich, had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She ssys, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs. Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich, says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

As They See Us In England.

Political riots in America are carried out in a thoroughgoing fashion. Lord Rosebery tells a story of a friend of his who visited Baltimore when an election for congress was in progress. Turning in for a shave he complained to the negro barber that his razor was very blunt. "Very likely, sir," was the reply; "I was out last night at an election meeting."—London Chronicle.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ANN ARBOR—The second death to caused from the D. U. R. wreck at Lima Center occurred in the homeopathic hospital, when Moses Slonin, after lingering twenty-four hours, breathed his last. It was reported from the hospital that he had died shortly after being removed from the operating table, but he rallied and all day his life had hung on a thread and at sundown he died. The brother, Hyman Slonin, is very low, though there is some hope of his recovery. The two brothers were from Jerusalem, and they were in this country in the interests of an educational movement for their people. Both are said to be rabibs.

EATON RAPIDS—Kenneth C. Edinger, a resident of Bradner, O., was arrested here on a charge of uttering a forged note for $100 at the First National bank here. He admitted everything charged against him, waived examination, gave up a portion of the money he had obtained on the note, and said he would plead guilty in the circuit court. Edinger has been working on a farm a short distance from town for the last three months. He told the officers he had a confederate at Bradner, O., and that the two of them were working forging propositions on a partnership basis.

MONROE—The city of Monroe common council has granted twenty-four applications for liquor licenses, instead of twenty-seven, as heretofore. The reduction of three was by voluntary surrender under the provisions of the Warner-Crampton liquor law. Monroe in 1908 had thirty-one saloons.

JACKSON—Milton A. Daly, of Chicago, who was charged with bribery in connection with the sale of binder twine machinery to the Michigan state prison here, was convicted by a jury in the circuit court. The jury was out a little more than an hour. Sentence will be announced later.

other moment. He," his smile glanced out, "he is not a Rupert at changing his tires, so to speak, but just a good chauffeur."

The gay and natural allusion delighted her. For the first time in her life Emily Ffrench laughed out in a genuine, mischievous sense of adventure.

"Yes? I wonder you could separate yourself from that Rupert to come here; he was a most bewildering person," she retorted.

"Separate from Rupert? Why, I would not think of racing a taxicab, as he would say, without Rupert beside me. He is here taking a post-graduate course in this type of car, in order to be up to his work when we go down to Georgia next week."

"Next week? You expect to win that race?"

"No. We are running a stock car against some heavy foreign racing machines; the chance of winning is slight. But I hope to outrun any other American car on the course, if nothing goes wrong."

She looked up.

"And if something does?" she wondered.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Pray be careful of those moving belts behind you, Miss Ffrench. If something does—there is a chance in every game worth playing."

"A chance!" her feminine nerves recoiled from the implied consequences. "But only a chance, surely. You were never in an accident, never were hurt?"

Lestrange regarded her in surprise mingled with a dawning raillery infinitely indulgent.

"I had no accidents last season," he guardedly responded. "I've been quite lucky. At least Rupert and I play our game unhampered; there will be no broken hearts if we are picked up from under our car some day."

They had reached the door while he spoke; as he put his hand on the knob to open it, Emily saw a long zigzag scar running up the extended arm from wrist to elbow, a mute commentary on the conversation. In silence she passed out across the courtyard to where her red-wheeled cart waited. But when Lestrange had put her in and given her the reins, she held out her hand to him with more gravity.

"I shall wish you good luck for next week," she said.

Lestrange threw back his head, drawing a quick breath; here in the strong sunlight he showed even younger than she had thought him, young with a primitive intensity of just being alive.

"Thank you. I would like—if it were possible—to win this race."

"This one, especially?"

"Yes, because it is the next step toward a purpose I have set myself, and which I shall accomplish if I live. Not that I will halt if this step fails, no, nor for a score of such failures, but I am anxious to go on and finish."

Up to Emily's face rushed the answering color and fire to his; drawn by the bond of mutual earnestness, she leaned nearer.

"You live to do something? So do I, so do I! And every one else plays."

However Lestrange would have replied, he was checked by the crash of the courtyard gate. Abruptly recalled to herself, Emily turned, to see Dick Ffrench coming toward them.

Remembering how the three had last met, the situation suggested strain. But to Emily's astonishment the young men exchanged friendly nods, although Dick flushed pink.

"Good morning, Lestrange," he greeted. "I've just come up from the city, Emily, and there wasn't any carriage at the station, so when one of the testers told me you were here I came over to get a ride."

"I've been to see Mr. Bailey," she responded. "Get in."

As Dick climbed in beside her, she bent her head to Lestrange; if she had regretted her impulsive confidence, again the clear sanity and calm of the gray eyes she encountered established self-content.

When they were trotting down the road toward home, in the crisp air, Emily glanced at her cousin.

"I did not know you and Mr. Lestrange were so well acquainted," she remarked.

"I see him now and then," Dick answered uneasily. "He's too busy to want me bothering around him much. You—remembered him?"

"Yes."

He absently took the whip from its socket, flecking the horse with it as he spoke.

"It was awfully square of you, Emily, not to mention that night to Uncle Ethan. It wasn't like a girl, at all. I made an idiot of myself, and you've never said anything to me about it since. I never told you where Lestrange took me, because I didn't like to talk of the thing. I'm really awfully fond of you, cousin."

"Yes, Dickie," she said patiently.

"Well, Lestrange [illegible] he didn't say much. But he carried me down to where they were practicing for a road race. Such a jolly lot of fellows, like a bunch of kids; teasing and calling jokes back and forth at one another [illegible] daybreak, everything raw and chilly. Busy, and their mechanics busy, and one after another swinging into his car and going off like a rocket. By the time Lestrange went off, I was as much stirred up as anybody. When he made a record circuit at seventy-seven miles an hour average, I was shouting over the rail like a good one. And then, while he was off again, a big blue car rolled in and its driver yelled that Lestrange had gone over on the Eastbury turn, and to send around the ambulance. It was like a nightmare; I sat down on a stone and felt sick."

"He—"

"He shook me up half an hour later, and stood laughing at me. 'Upset?' he said. 'No; we shed a tire and went off into a field, but it didn't hurt the machine, so we righted her and came in.' He was limping and bruised and scratched, but he was laughing, while a crowd of people were trying to shake hands with him and say things. I felt—funny; as if I wasn't much good. I never felt like that before. 'This is only practice,' he said, when I was about to go. 'The race tomorrow will do better. We find it more exciting than cocktails.' That was all, but I knew what he meant, all right. I've been careful ever since. He won the race next day, too."

"Dick, didn't it ever occur to you that you as well as Mr. Lestrange might do real things?" she asked, after a moment.

He turned his round, good-humored face to her in boundless amazement.

"I? I race cars and break my neck and call it fun, like Lestrange? You're laughing at me, Emily."

"No, no," in spite of herself the picture evoked brought her smile. "Not like that. But you might be interested in the factory. You might learn from Mr. Bailey and take charge of the business with Uncle Ethan. It would please uncle, how it would please him, if you did!"

Dick stirred unhappily.

"It would take a lot of grind," he objected. "I haven't the head for it, really. I'm not such an awfully bad lot, but I hate work. Let's not be serious, cousin. How pretty the frosty wind makes you look!"

Emily tightened the reins with a brief sigh of resignation.

"Never mind, Dickie. I—uncle will find a substitute. Things must go on somehow, I suppose, even if we do not like the way."

But the way loomed distasteful that morning as never before.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Ffrench and his niece were at breakfast, on the Sunday when the first account of the Georgia race reached Ffrenchwood.

"You will take fresh coffee," Emily was saying, the little silver pot poised in her hand, when the door burst open and Dick hurried, actually hurried, into the room.

"He's won! He's got it!" he cried, brandishing the morning newspaper. "The first time for an American car with an American driver. And how he won it! He distanced every car on the track except the two big Italian and French machines. Those he couldn't get, of course; but the Frenchman went out in the fourth hour with a broken valve. Then he was set down for second place—second place, Emily, with every other big car in the country entered. They say he drove like, like—I don't know what. A hundred and some miles an hour on the straight stretches."

"Oh," Emily faltered, setting down the coffee-pot in her plate.

He stopped her eagerly, half turning toward Mr. Ffrench, who had put on his pince-nez to contemplate his nephew in stupefaction, not at his statement, but at his condition.

"Wait. In the last hour, the Italian car lost its chain and went over into a ditch on a back stretch, three miles from a doctor. People around picked the men out of the wreck, and Lestrange came up to find that the driver was likely to die from a severed artery before help got there. Emily, he stopped, stopped, with victory in his hands, had the Italian lifted into the mechanician's seat, and Rupert held him in while they dashed around the course to the hospital. He got him there fifteen minutes before an ambulance could have reached him, and the man will get well. But Lestrange had lost six minutes. He had rushed straight to the doctor's, given them the man, and gone right on, but he had lost six minutes. When people realized what he'd done, they went wild. Every one thought he'd lost the race, but they cheered him until they couldn't shout. And he kept on driving. It's all here," he waved the gaudy sheet. "The paper's full of it. He had half an hour to make up six minutes, and he did it. He came in nineteen seconds ahead of the nearest car. The crowd swarmed out on the course and fell all over him. Old Bailey's nearly crazy."

To see Dick excited would have been marvel enough to hold his auditors mute, if the story itself had not possessed a quality to stir even non-sporting blood. Emily could only sit and gaze at the headlines of the extended newspaper, her dark eyes wide and shining, her soft lips apart.

"He telegraphed to Bailey," Dick added in the pause. "Ten words: 'First across line in Georgia race. Car in fine shape. Lestrange.' That was all."

Mr. Ffrench deliberately passed his coffee-pot to Emily.

"You had better take your breakfast," he advised. "It is unusual to see you noticing business affairs, Dick; I might say unprecedented. I am glad if Bailey's new man is capable of his work, at least. I suppose for the rest, that he could scarcely do less than take an injured person to the hospital. Why are you putting sugar in my cup, Emily?"

"I don't know," she acknowledged helplessly.

"I didn't mean to disturb any one," said Dick, sulky and resentful. "It'll be a big thing though for our cars, Bailey says. I didn't know you disliked Lestrange."

Mr. Ffrench stiffened in his chair.

"I have not sufficient interest in the man to dislike him," was the cold rebuke. "We will change the subject."

Emily bent her head, remedying her mistake with the coffee. She comprehended that her uncle had conceived one of his strong, silent antipathies for the young manager, and she was sorry. Sorry, although, remembering Bailey's unfortunate speech the night Lestrange's engagement was proposed, she was not surprised. But she

DELICATE CHILDREN

Made Strong by Vinol

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious cod liver iron tonic, Vinol.

"It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed. It tastes so good she loved to take it—not a bit of cod liver oil taste.—Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio."

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up puny, delicate, ailing children, is because it is a combination of the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal body-building elements of cod liver oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

STIFF FIGHT FOR MASSACHUSETTS

Taft and Roosevelt Both Speaking in Bay State.

PRIMARY VOTE ON TUESDAY

Efforts to Win State's Delegation to Chicago Convention Are Said to Be Equal to Those Expended in Most Presidential Campaigns.

Boston, April 29. — Colonel Roosevelt will not talk of the Massachusetts situation.

The colonel left Boston at 8 o'clock in the morning on a special train, made car-end speeches through a number of north shore towns, made a fairly long speech to the mill workers at Lawrence at noon, and is to speak at Pittsfield this evening, arriving in New York at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

President Taft is in the same region the colonel touched on Saturday. He spoke at Lowell, where the colonel also spoke, and at times was within a few miles of the colonel.

The colonel was told that his supporters in the Back Bay were more numerous than he knew and that there were even some Roosevelt clubs in the aristocratic Back Bay society clubs.

"Yes," replied the colonel, with a quizzical laugh, "there is a Roosevelt association in the Somerset club and I had both members at dinner with me."

The efforts that are going on in Massachusetts to win the primaries on Tuesday are said by old timers in the political game to equal those of any presidential tussle of recent years at election time itself. It is claimed that both sides are spending much money and the work of spreading literature and holding campaign meetings is everywhere apparent. In Fall River to reach the French mill vote each side held three rallies. The Roosevelt side says they have the Taft people on the hip and thoroughly frightened.

The Roosevelt people are claiming a majority of the delegates, but the Taft side claims thirty-four out of thirty-six.

Senator Crane's personal influence is counted on as one of the strongest factors in the Taft fight.

Acquit Solinger of Arson Charge.

A daughter who had been strapped to a bed by the robbers managed to escape through a window and alarm the neighbors

HARVESTER SUIT IS COMING SOON

Government to Begin Action under Sherman Law.

CALLED FALSE, UNFAIR, ILLEGAL

International Harvester Company Alleged to Control Bulk of Harvester, Mower, Binder Twine and Implement Business.

New York, April 29. — Negotiations for the voluntary dissolution of the International Harvester company have failed, and a suit in equity under the Sherman anti-trust law will be filed by the federal government within a few days.

It is understood that federal officials would have instituted suit several days ago were it not for the fear that such action might be misconstrued as an effort on the part of the Taft administration to play politics.

It is learned that the Taft administration in its suit will make charges far beyond technical legal violations of the Sherman anti-trust law. It will charge that the International Harvester company is a bad, not a "good," trust as the Roosevelt administration characterized it, and that it has resorted to unfair business methods, false representations and unlawful means to secure its monopolistic control.

It is understood that the federal government will ask the court not only to dissolve the trust into its component parts, but to restrain the company and its selling agency from engaging in interstate commerce.

The federal government will charge that the trust controls between 85 and 90 per cent of all the harvester machine business of the country, 75 per cent of the mower business, 50 per cent of the binder twine business and 30 per cent of the sales of all lines of farming implements.

The International Harvester company, the International Harvester Company of America, the International Twine company, the Wisconsin Steel company, the Wisconsin Lumber company, the Illinois and Northern Railway company and the Chicago, West Pullman and Southern Railway company will be made defendants in the suit.

Among the individual defendants will be Cyrus H. McCormick, Charles Deering, George W. Perkins, James Deering, William H. Jones, Harold F. McCormick, Edgar L. Bancroft, George F. Baker, E. H. Gary, Charles Steele and John A. Chapman.

It is understood further that the government will contend that when public opinion became aroused against the trust it turned this very agitation to its own profit. It is contended that the trust forced competitors to sell out and then, hiding the truth of the changed ownership from the public, would market the machines of the newly acquired company as "not made by a trust."

Agents in the small towns, it will be charged, were also kept in competition with each other, while all of them in reality were selling machines made by the International company.

The government, it is understood, will contend that the benefits of preferential freight rates have also been secured by the trust.

POLICE BATTLE FRENCH BANDITS

Leader of Bloodthirsty Coterie Killed in Garage.

COMPANION SWALLOWS POISON

Paris Gendarmes Besiege Little Building for Five Hours Before Desperate Bonnot Is Shot—Bad Gang Broken Up.

Paris, April 29.—Bonnot, the notorious bandit, and supposed leader of the gang that has been going around in automobiles killing and robbing in various places, and Dubois, one of the business accomplices, were caught in an automobile garage by the police and, after a five hours' seige, both were killed.

Bonnot was known as the "demon chauffeur" and Dubois was an anarchist. The band of which they were members has terrorized Paris and its environs for months.

During the battle, in which dynamite was employed, two policemen were wounded. Bonnot died fighting to the last, but Dubois poisoned himself after the police and soldiers had made a breach in the wall. The affair in some respects resembled the battle of Sidney street on Jan. 3, 1911, when police, soldiers and the fire brigade surrounded two notorious Russian bandits who were finally burned to death in a house where they had taken refuge. This latest affair gratified the wish of Chief Detective Guichard that Bonnot should be captured before his last victim, Sub-Chief of Police Jouin was buried.

Chief Guichard has been on the trail of the bandits for several days and finally he and several detectives arrived at the village of Choissy-Le-Roi, five miles from the fortifications, in the same direction as Ivry. This was the scene of the fight with the police last Wednesday when Sub-Chief Jouin was killed.

The detectives went to Choissy-Le-Roi for the purpose of making a search of a garage which a Russian anarchist named Dubois had rented from a man of the name of Fromentin, who is known as "the millionaire anarchist." The garage was a lightly built affair of wood with a stone foundation, having a garret with sleeping accommodations. There the police found their men and after a long battle Bonnot was killed, his companion having poisoned himself when he saw escape was impossible.

FIGHT TO FREE HARRY THAW

Hearing of Habeas Corpus Is Held Before Justice Keogh.

New Rochelle, N. Y., April 29.—A fourth attempt to liberate Harry K. Thaw from the Matteawan state hospital, where he has been imprisoned for the slaying of Stanford White six years ago because of insanity, was made before Judge Keogh of the supreme court. Thaw was brought down from Matteawan. The hearing was on a writ of habeas corpus. It was preliminary in character and no witnesses were examined or exhibits produced.

After a brief discussion, Justice Keogh adjourned the hearing until May 6, and Thaw started back for Matteawan.

MACKAY BENNETT DUE AT HALIFAX

Will Probably Reach There Today with Titanic Victims.

SAD PREPARATIONS ALL MADE

Corpses of Hays and Astor Met by Private Cars—Pier Is Screened in by Canvas and Piles of Coffins Provided.

Halifax, N. S., April 29.—It is pretty well established now that the Mackay Bennett will moor at the dock yard today with her load of victims from the Titanic.

A message to this effect was received from Captain Gardner, who commands the cableship. It appears that the body of C. M. Hays is not on the Mackay Bennett, but on the Minia. Captain De Carteret of that ship confirms the previous report that he has Hays' body.

The bodies of only a little more than 10 per cent of those who perished have been recovered and Captain De Carteret says that he does not think many more will be found.

Vincent Astor came from New York with three private cars to claim the body of his father and accompanying him was Mr. Biddle. Young Astor kept close to his car all day. A Grand Trunk special train is here for Mr. Hay's body.

Photographers will not be allowed to take pictures in the dock yard. The press representatives will, however, be admitted. The pier at which the Mackay Bennett will dock is surrounded by canvas and the companion way from the ship on which the bodies will be brought ashore will be similarly obscured.

Piles of coffins are on the pier. The bodies will be immediately taken from the dock yard to the Mayflower curling rink.

It was announced that while friends may take charge of bodies, valuables or papers that may be found with them will be retained by the White Star officials unless the person claiming the body can show that he is acting as executor or administrator of the deceased.

WOMAN PLANNED MURDER

Mrs. Ping's Letters Show She Intended to Kill Husband and Self.

Bedford, Ind., April 29. — That the murder of James Ping by his wife last Thursday night was premeditated was proved when letters she had written were found. She told of the trouble between herself and husband over another woman and said she had determined to end it all by killing her husband and herself. She left instructions regarding her funeral and asked that her body be laid beside that of her child which died a few weeks ago. Letters were also found from "the woman in the case" to Ping, which indicated that the wife's jealously was well founded.

Mrs. Ping, who shot herself immediately after shooting her husband, is in a critical condition with the chances about even for her recovery.

FLOODS MENACE WHEAT

Patoka and White Rivers Rising Rapidly Near Petersburg.

Petersburg, Ind., April 19.—With all the smaller streams in Pike county receding the flood situation is somewhat improved. Both the Patoka and White rivers are rising rapidly and the Patoka river is menacing thousands of acres of growing wheat. White river is again out in the bottoms, and with both the east and west forks rising the situation looks gloomy for the bottom farmers.

Many teams are moving corn out of the bottoms, for the only visible corn supply in Pike county is cribbed in the bottoms. River men predict that the river will go higher than any time this year.

CHARGES TEACHER BEAT BOY

Woman Admits She Struck Youth About 20 Times for "Dullness."

Terre Haute, Ind., April 29. — The father of Otis Reed, aged fourteen, took the boy before Prosecuting Attorney Owens and showed the boy's back and legs to prove that his teacher, Miss Mabel McKee, had cruelly whipped him. The superintendent of schools is making an investigation.

Miss McKee denies that she struck young Reed more than twenty times. She says the boy had been inattentive and doing poor work in his lessons. She also says she whipped him in the presence of another teacher.

Find Clever Counterfeits.

Washington, April 29. — Extremely deceptive counterfeit $10 and $20 gold certificates have been discovered by the secret service. They are being circulated in the southern states.

Nine Months for Bribery.

Columbus, O., April 29.—State Senator L. R. Andrews of Ironton, convicted of accepting a bribe for his senatorial vote, was sentenced to nine months in the penitentiary.

PLANS FOR DARROW TRIAL

Prosecutor to Call Mrs. McManigal and Detective Biddinger.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 29.—District Attorney Fredericks announced that he would probably call Mrs. Ortie E. McManigal and Detective Guy Biddinger, both of Chicago, as witnesses for the state in the trial of Attorney Clarence S. Darrow, which is to begin May 15.

Fredericks said Mrs. McManigal had changed her opinions since the McNamara trial and, instead of working for the defense, she would now appear for the prosecution. Mr. Fredericks said he thought the trial would last thirty days

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CINCINNATI MAYOR

Henry T. Hunt Will Play Novel Role for Information.

Cincinnati, April 27.—Mayor Henry T. Hunt has attracted attention by a novel program. He purposes to become acquainted with the work in all the public service departments of the city by actually taking part in the operations, and he intends to toil with the laborer, walk beat as a policeman, play fireman and ride on the watering wagons and street sweepers at night. It is even said the mayor will drive one of the ash carts.

CLAIMS 305 DELEGATES

Roosevelt Committee Says Taft Has Only 103.

Campaign Body Also Alleges that Eighteen New York Delegates Will Vote for Colonel.

New York, April 29.—The following was issued from the headquarters of the Roosevelt campaign committee:

"Despite the absurd statements of Mr. Barnes and the continuous placing of the great majority of the New York delegates in the Taft column, the fact is that Colonel Roosevelt has practically pledged to him four delegates from Brooklyn, four from Westchester, two from Nassau and Suffolk counties and eight from other parts of the state, making a total of eighteen, barring the delegates from New York county, whose right to sit in the Chicago convention will be contested.

"On Saturday we carried the state of Washington, which makes ten delegates more, and completed the victory in West Virginia, which means that the solid delegation from that state will add sixteen more votes.

"The actual standing of the delegates is as follows: Roosevelt, 305; Taft, 103."

MRS. TAFT STARTS FUND

Memorial to Titanic Dead by Women and Children.

Washington, April 29.—Mrs. William H. Taft has contributed the first dollar to the woman's memorial fund, which is being raised through a committee of 100 women in each state and territory, for the purpose of erecting a memorial in Washington to the men who went down on the Titanic in deference to the chivalrous principle, "women and children first."

Only women and children will be permitted to contribute to the fund, the contributions being fixed at one dollar each.

ILLINOIS PEACHES BLIGHTED

Head of Horticultural Society Says Winter Spoiled Trees.

Bloomington, Ill., April 29.—A. M. Augustine, president of the Central Illinois Horticultural Society, doubts the coming of a peach crop in Illinois this year. All through central Illinois he finds peach trees dead or so badly injured by the severe winter weather that they will be unable to produce any peaches.

Plums appear to be in the same condition. Cherry and pear trees give promise of an average crop. Apples appear to have been uninjured.

WILL TAKE EXAMS

Tuition Paid for Successful Rural School Eighth Grade Graduates

Hundred of eighth grade students in the rural schools of Michigan are preparing for the annual state examination which will be conducted in the various counties of the state, May 16-17 Much depends upon the results of this examination as those who are successful in securing diplomas may have their tuition paid to one of the three nearest high schools if their parents or guardians make written application on or before the fourth Monday in June to the school board in their home district. Should a contestant fail to pass, and the parents are willing to pay the necessary tuition for the freshman year in high school and the child is admitted to the high school and successfully passes the ninth grade, and secures a written statement to that effect from the superintendent, then application may be made to the primary district board for tuition for the succeeding years but not, of course the ninth grade. The rural board cannot pay more than $20 a year for each pupil unless the people at the annual meeting vote to pay more.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Notes And Comments From Headquarters

The Advisory Committee of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association has perfected plans for a thorough and systematic campaign of education, and organizers and speakers are now in the field, who will be re-inforced by others as soon as possible. Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton State president, reports that the work is progressing rapidly and the headquarters are deluged with requests for speakers to address meetings in all parts of the State.

Michigan women, who are in the midst of an earnest campaign for equal suffrage are finding a strong ally in the Grange, the most powerful organization in the State. At its annual meeting in December last and also at a conferance of the Executive Committee in February, it is unanimously decided that the State Grange should not only give moral support but financial aid to the movement in Michigan. The State Federation of of Labor is also giving valuable assistance.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our most sincere and heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly assisted us during our dear wife, mother and sister's long and painful illness and in our late and very sad bereavemnt; also, to those who furnished the beautiful floral offerings. NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation, In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to subsantiate them at our risk

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhœa, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons, We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Tecumseh only at our store,—The Rexall Store. B. J. Pulver.

The business sessions of the Grand Commandery will be held in the Masonic Temple June 4 at 2 p. m. and June 6 at 9 a. m. The headquarters of the Grand Commandery will be in the Hotel Cadillac.

The Grand Commander is Right Eminent Sir William H. Kessler of Detroit. The executive committee for this conclave is made up of Right Eminent Sir Joseph H. Crawford, P. G. C.; Flint; Sir Thomas V. Dutton, P. C., and Sir John H. Hanna, P. C.

The two commanderies located in Detroit are making special preparations for the entertainment of the Knights Templar stationed elsewhere in the state.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS VISIT ADRIAN THURSDAY APRIL, 25

The Royal Neighbors had a most enjoyable meeting in Adrian last Thursday, and were most royally entertained Twenty-one went over on the 10:45 train in the morning. They were met by a committe of the Adrian lodge, and were served with a lunch before the work began. The camp was then opened and a class of fifteen were initiated by the Tecumseh Chapter At six o'clock a banquet was served with covers laid for 75.

Favors were laid at each plate bearing the emblem of the order, the date of the fraternal visit, and the colors of the order of purple and white. Myrtle was used in decorating the table honoring Maple camp. A social dance followed until train time called our ladies away. They report one of the most delightful visits.

LOVE AND GRAMMER

Some time ago a New York business man, who is blessed with an extremely pretty daughter, took his family to England for an indefinite period, during which he was to established British branches of his mercantile enterprises in this country.

The charms of this young woman wrought much havoc in the rank and file of the men who met her abroad. She was sweet and gracious to all, but her heart, as well as her wit, belonged to her native land. One day her father found her at her desk, knitting her brows over a letter,

"What's the trouble, my dear?" he asked solicitously

"Father," she responded dolefully, "I must write another declension, but nothing will induce me to conjugate until I get back to the United States." —May Lippincott's.

EMERSON PLOWS

You have believed that you have seen or used the best riding plow. You have been mistaken unless you have seen or used an EMERSON HIGH LIFT. It is made strong, particularly so where other plows break and wear out. It lifts so easy that any ten-year-old boy can lift it, and is so handy as all the levers are on the right side. It is "FOOL PROOF" as far as getting out of adjustments is concerned.

We will guarantee it to do satisfactory work in hard ground. It makes no difference what plow you have seen or used; you will like an EMERSON better. Do not buy until you have seen it.

Among the want advertisements in an Adrian paper appeared recently one that we feel like giving publicity to as it appeals to the lone woman's heart and especially to Tecumseh as it is from a Tecumseh man. He states that he is a man of means, does not have to work and is more than willing to help do housework but he is lonesome and wishes for a companion. Here's certainly a fine opportunity for some lone female to lead a life of ease and luxury. Don't all respond at once and overpower the man,

AMUSEMENTS

"BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK"

Next Wednesday, May 1, the attraction at the Bradley Opera House will be the dramatization of Geo. Barr McCutcheon's thrilling romance of war, love and laughter, "Beverly." The production comes direct from its long engagement at the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, and the company which appears in this city is the same one that has made "Beverly" so popular and so well patronized.

In every city in which they have appeared they have been greeted with large enthusiastic audience and after the first performance "Standing Room Only" has been the sign that has greeted late comers to the Theatre. The play has a wonderful appealing power and is enthusiastically received by all classes of theatre patrons.

It is a story of war, a story of love and a story of laughter. Plot follows counterplot, amusing situations follows one after the other, and through the whole is running one of the most delightful love stories one ever had the pleasure of witnessing on the stage. The production has been sumptuously staged and every advantage taken of the wealth of descriptive detail furnished by the author. The Graustarkian landscape lends itself particularly to the painter's art, for there are great massive mountains, sharp rugged valleys, cool limpid lakes, bubbling brooks and a wealth of trees and foliage. With such a background the gorgeous bright colored costumes of the far east show up with added brilliancy and the whole forms a picture that is well worth seeing.

Are considered the best money can buy. Our stock is all fresh—no old seeds mixed in—at the right kind of prices. Let us have your seed order.

Hen-et-a Poultry Food.

Something new in an egg producer. Start your little chicks on our fine food and notice the difference in results. Your chicks will grow faster and be much stronger. Come and let us show it to you. This is a pure bone ash, manufactured from phosphorous, mined in Tennessee, combined with silica and soda ash. These three ingredients are mixed with water and put through a mixer and then baked in ovens at 3000 degrees Farenheit for 30 minutes. It takes 12 hours for this to cool, after which it is ground and passed over 4 screens, to get different sizes.

This food will take the place of oyster shell, stone grits, charcoal, beef scraps, and will cut down your grain feeding one-third. Hen-et-a contains a large amount of phosphate which is necessary to sustain the life of the small chick.

Singers and Public Speakers Need it

The demulcent properties of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound make it especially effective for hoarseness, tickling in throat, and inflamed vocal chords. It is a valuable aid to singers and public speakers. Chas. Boyle, the famous Irish tenor of Saginaw, Mich., says he has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years and would not think of filling an engagement without it. He always carries a bottle in his grip or suit case. For sale by all druggists

Peter Ettinger, 155 Sheldon St., Houghton, Mich., says, "For some time I suffered with kidney trouble. I had intense pains in my back and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in very short time my pains left and my kidneys became normal.

Mrs. Della Miles, of Tower, Mich., had a severe cough which hung on for weeks, doctored for it, but was not benefited. She says, "A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and after using two bottles my cough was cured and I have never been bothered since. I gladly recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for all coughs and cold."

Mrs Louise Williams, 1108 Lyons St., Flint, Mich., says, "My daughter had suffered with rheumatism for a long time, when she took Foley Kidney Pills and in a very short time the rheumatic pains left her and she has been well ever since. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills as a cure for rheumatism and kidney trouble." For sale by all druggists.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become opertive:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and state of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the premises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

looked across to Dick sympathetically. So sympathetically, that after breakfast he followed her into the library, the colored journals in his hand.

"What's the matter with the old gentleman this morning?" he complained. "He wants the business to succeed, doesn't he? If he does, he ought to like what Lestrange is doing for it. What's the matter with him?"

Emily shook back her yellow curls, turning her gaze on him.

"You might guess, Dickie. He is lonely."

"Lonely! He!"

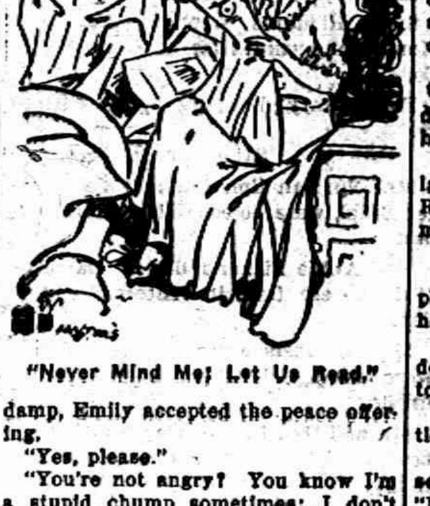
All the feminine impulse to defend flared up.

"Why not?" she exclaimed with passion. "Who has he got? Who stands with him in his house? No wonder he can not bear the man who is hired to do what a Ffrench should be doing. It is not the racing driver he dislikes, but the manager. And do not you blame him, Dick Ffrench."

Quite aghast, he stared after her as she turned away to the nearest window. But presently he followed her over, still holding the papers.

"Don't you want to read about the race?" he ventured.

Smiling, though her lashes were damp, Emily accepted the peace offering.



"Never Mind Me; Let Us Read."

"Yes, please."

"You're not angry? You know I'm a stupid chump sometimes; I don't mean it."

This time she laughed outright.

"No; I am sorry I was cross. It is I who would like to shirk my work. Never mind me; let us read."

They did read, seated opposite each other in the broad window-seat and passing the sheets across as they finished them. Dick had not exaggerated, on the contrary he had not said enough. Lestrange and his car were the focus of the hour's attention. The daring, the reckless courage that risked life for victory, the generosity which could throw that victory away to aid a comrade, and lastly the determination and skill which had won the conquest after all—the whole formed a feat too spectacular to escape public hysteria. It was very doubtful indeed whether Lestrange liked his idolizing, but there was no escape.

The two who read were young.

"It was a splendid fight," sighed Dick, when they dropped the last page.

"Yes," Emily assented. "When he comes back, when you see him, give him my congratulations."

"When I see him? Why don't you tell him yourself?"

Something like a white shadow wiped the scarlet of excitement from her cheeks, as she averted her face.

"I shall not see him; I shall not go to the factory any more. It will be better, I am sure."

Vaguely puzzled and dismayed, Dick sat looking at her, not daring to question.

Emily kept her word during the weeks that followed. Through Dick and Bailey she heard of factory affairs; of the sudden increase of orders for the Mercury automobiles, the added prestige gained, and the public favor bestowed on the car. But she saw nothing of the man who was responsible for all this. Instead she went out more than ever before. Their social circle was too painfully exclusive to be large or gay.

Three times a week it was Mr. Ffrench's stately custom to visit the factory and inspect it with Bailey. At other times Bailey came up to the house, where affairs were conducted. But in neither place did Mr. Ffrench ever come in contact with his manager, during all the months while winter waxed and waned again to spring.

"That's Bailey's doing," chuckled Dick, when Emily finally wondered aloud at the circumstance. "He isn't going to risk losing Lestrange because our high and mighty uncle falls out with him. And it would be pretty likely to happen if they met. Lestrange has a temper, you know, even if it doesn't stick out all over him like a hedgehog; and a dozen other companies would give money to get him."

Emily nodded gravely. It was a sunny morning in the first of March, and the cousins were at the end of the old park surrounding Ffrenchwood, where they had strolled before breakfast.

"Mr. Bailey likes Mr. Lestrange," she commented.

"Likes him! He loves him. You know Lestrange lives with him; a bachelor household, cozy as grigs."

Just past here ran the road, beyond a high cedar hedge. While he was speaking, the irregular explosive reports of a motor had sounded down the valley, unmistakable to those familiar with the testing of the stripped cars, and rapidly approaching. Now, as Emily would have answered, the roar suddenly changed in character, an appalling series of explosions mingled with the grind of outraged machinery suddenly braked, and some one shouted above the din. The next instant a huge mass shot past the other side of the hedge and there followed a dull crash.

Dazed momentarily, Emily stood, then caught up her skirts and ran after him. She knew well enough what the testers of the cars risked.

"Dick!" she appealed. "Dick!"

But it was not the wreck she anticipated that met her eyes as she came through the hedge. On the opposite side of the road a long low skeleton car was standing, one side lurched drunkenly down with two wheels in the gutter. Still in his seat, the driver was leaning over the steering-wheel, out of breath, but laughing a greeting to the astonished Dick.

"A break in the steering-gear," he declared, by way of explanation. "I told Bailey it was a weak point; now perhaps he'll believe me and strengthen it."

"You're not hurt," Dick inferred.

"I think she's not—a tire gone. Find anything wrong, Rupert?"

"Two tires off," said the laconic mechanician. "Two funerals postponed. That was a pretty stop, Darling."

"Very," coolly agreed Lestrange, rising and removing his goggles. "What's the matter, Ffrench?"

"You frightened us out of our five sense, that's all. Do you usually practise for races out here?"

"Us?" repeated Lestrange, and turning, saw the girl at the edge of the park. "Miss Ffrench, I beg your pardon!"

The swift change in his tone, the ease of deference with which he bared his head and, motor caps not being readily donned or doffed, so remained bareheaded in the bright sunlight, savored of the Continent.

"It is too commonplace to say good morning," Emily replied, her color rising with her smile. "I am very glad you escaped. But that is commonplace, too, I'm afraid."

"Every one is commonplace before breakfast," reassured her cousin. "Honestly, Lestrange, do you practice racing here?"

"Hardly. I'm trying out the car; every car has to go through that before it is used. Don't you know that we've recently secured from the local authorities a permit to run at any speed over this road between four o'clock and eight in the morning? I thought all the countryside knew that."

"But we have a regiment of men to test cars."

Lestrange passed a caressing glance over the dingy-gray machine in its state of bareness that suggested indecorum.

"This is my car, the one I'll race this spring and summer. No one drives it but me. Besides, I have to have some diversion."

He stepped to the ground with the last word, and went around to where Rupert was on his knees beside the machine.

"Can you fix it here?" he demanded.

"Not precisely," was the drawled reply. "Back to camp for it with a horse in front."

"All right. You'll have to walk down and get a car from Mr. Bailey to tow it home."

Rupert got up, his dark, malign little face twisted.

"If I'd broken a leg they'd have sent a cart for me," he mourned. "Now I'll have to walk, and I ain't used to it. Hard luck!"

"If you go around to the stables they will give you my pony cart," Emily offered impulsively. "You," her dimpling smile gleamed out, "you once put a tire on for me, you know. Please let me return the service."

Rupert's black eyes opened, a slow grin of appreciation crinkled streaks of dust and oil as he surveyed the young girl.

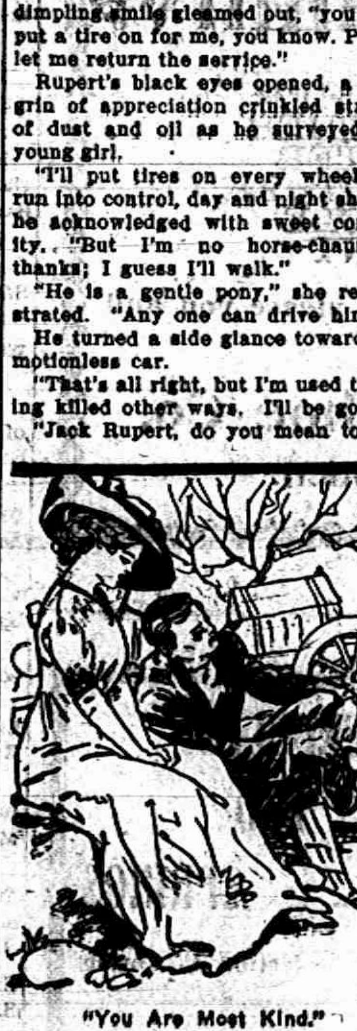
"I'll put tires on every wheel you run into control, day and night shifts," he acknowledged with sweet cordiality. "But I'm no horse-chauffeur, thanks; I guess I'll walk."

"He is a gentle pony," she remonstrated. "Any one can drive him."

He turned a side glance toward the motionless car.

"That's all right, but I'm used to being killed other ways. I'll be going."

"Jack Rupert, do you mean to tell me that you will race with Lestrange every season, and yet you're afraid to drive a fat cob?" cried the delighted Dick.



"You Are Most Kind."

"I'm not telling anything. I had a chum who was pitched out by a horse he lost control of, and broke his neck. I'm taking no chances."

"How many men have you seen break their necks out of autos?"

"That's in business," pronounced Rupert succinctly. "I'm going on, Darling; it's only a two-mile run."

"Here, wait," Dick urged. "Emily, I'll stroll around to the stables with him and make one of the men drive him down. You don't mind my leaving you?"

"No," Emily answered. "I will wait for you."

She might have walked back alone, if she had chosen. But instead she sat down on a boulder near the hedge, folding her hands in her lap like a demure child. The house was so dull, so hopelessly monotonous contrasted with this fresh, wind-tossed outdoors and Lestrange in his vigor of life and glamour of ultra-modern adventure.

"You and Mr. Ffrench are very good," Lestrange said presently. "I am afraid I appreciate it more than Rupert, though."

"Is he really afraid of horses?"

"I should not wonder; I never tried him. But he is amazingly truthful."

Their eyes met across the strip of sunny road as they smiled; again Emily felt the sudden confidence, the falling away of all constraint before the direct clarity of his regard.

"You won your race," she said irrelevantly. "I was glad, since you wanted it."

"Thank you," he returned with equal simplicity. "But I did not want it that way, so far as I was concerned."

DELICATE CHILDREN

Made Strong by Vinol

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious cod liver iron tonic, Vinol.

"It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed. It tastes so good she loved to take it—not a bit of cod liver oil taste.—Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio."

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up puny, delicate, ailing children, is because it is a combination of the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal body-building elements of cod liver oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol, as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

LAST HONORS PAID TO GENERAL GRANT

Funeral Services Are Held on Governor's Island.

President Taft, Vice President Sherman, Major General Wood and Other Distinguished Persons at Services.

Men prominent in public and prilife life gathered for the funeral of Major General Frederick Dent Grant, which had been deferred to await the arrival of the general's daughter, the Princess Cantacuzene, from her home in Russia.

The services were held in the chapel of Cornelius the Centurion, on Governor's island. The little chapel was too small to allow the admittance of the general public, but an opportunity was given to all New York to pay tribute as the long military procession made its way to the tap of muffled drums over a five-mile line of march from the Battery to the west shore ferry at Forty-second street.

Among those who attended were President Taft, Vice President Sherman, General Leonard Wood, General Grant's sister, Miss Nellie Grant Sartoris, Mrs. Grant's brother and sister, Judge Honore of Chicago, and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

The pallbearers included Senator Root, Andrew Carnegie, Henry W. Taft, General Tasker Bliss, General Horace Porter, General William Croizer, General T. H. Barry, General H. G. Sharpe, Hamilton Fish, Dr. Robert Abbe, and others.

The Rev. Edmund B. Smith, chaplain at Governor's Island, conducted the service, following the simple Episcopal ritual. The Rev. Samuel Fallows of Chicago, bishop of Illinois in the Reformed Episcopal church, preached the sermon. He was a soldier under General U. S. Grant in the Vicksburg campaign, and knew Frederick Dent Grant when he followed the army as a lad of thirteen, and for many years afterward.

The remains were taken to West Point for interment.

The honor of serving as guard to the caisson bearing the coffin on the march through New York city to Forty-second street, where the body was entrained for West Point, went to an escort composed of General Bliss temporarily in command of the department of the east, and his staff; General C. E. Roe of the New York national guard and his staff, and the U. S. Grant post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Places immediately following this guard of honor were assigned to the Third battalion of the Twenty-ninth infantry, two troops of militia cavalry, and other military organizations.

KILLS SELF WITH SHOTGUN

John Rittershofer Commits Suicide Before Family Is Awake.

Bay City, Mich., April 29. — John Rittershofer, a farmer of Kawkawlin township, shot and killed himself in the yard of his home. The charge entered the pit of his stomach and mangled his abdomen. The body was found an hour after by Herman K. Sats, a hired man.

Rittershofer had left the house early, before the family was awake, and had wrapped the shotgun in a pair of trousers so no one would see that he had it.

DEATH OF WOMAN IS PROVING MYSTERY

Detroit Coroner Has a Puzzling Case on Hand.

Former Wife of Charles S. Hannan, a Wealthy Jeweler, Is Found Dead in the Pontchartrain Hotel.

Detroit, Mich., April 29.—Mrs. Mary Goodwin of Chicago arrived here to claim the body of her daughter, Mrs. Helen Hannan, former wife of Charles S. Hannan, a wealthy jeweler, member of the Grainger-Hannan company. Mrs. Hannan was found dead in her room in the Pontchartrain hotel. Physicians said she had expired at least twenty-four hours previously. It was thought she had committed suicide.

A deputy coroner took charge of the case and sent the stomach to the city chemist for analysis. No report has been made. In the woman's belongings were found $4,000 worth of jewels, a deposit certificate for $1,000 and $100 in cash.

GET CORNS ON EARS

Mount Clemens Telephone Operators Threaten Strike Against Headband.

Mount Clemens, Mich., April 30.—There is a merry war on in the local telephone exchange. On one side are thirty sweet-voiced operators with a medium-sized district manager as their opponent.

The operators are compelled to wear a headband contrivance while on duty, and the claim of the girls is that the contrivance causes corns to form upon their ears. They declare that if the manager does not provide another sort of appliance for holding the receivers they will leave the office in a body.

Manager William A. James is using every effort to quiet his employes, and has even promised them relief by dispensing with the headgear entirely. He has not yet devised other appliances, however.

Another complaint the telephone girls have to make is that the continued use of the headbands causes an intolerable headache.

BAY CITY SALOONLESS

All Licenses Held Up Pending Investigation of Applicants.

Bay City, Mich., May 1. — Beginning May 1, Bay City will be without saloons until the common council eliminates from the list of licenses it proposed to grant, several that were to have been given to men that Mayor Woodruff claims are undesirable.

"This is not a wet and dry issue at all," said the mayor, "but until the council decides on a better list of applicants the whole list will have my veto. I have informed the chief of police that he must see that every saloon, and this includes the hotel bars, must be closed after the first of May, when their licenses expire."

Copper Miners Get Increases.

Marquette, Mich., April 30. — Practically all the other companies operating in the Michigan copper fields have followed the example of the Calumet and Hecla, and have granted increases of 10 per cent in pay. Some 18,000 men are affected. In addition all the iron mines have been put on a straight eight-hour shift, instead of ten hours.

FINDS THE BODIES OF ASTOR, STRAUS, HAYS

Cable Ship Mackay-Bennett Reports Recovery.

Unknown Vessel Reports Seeing the Bodies of More Than a Dozen Titanic Victims Huddled on an Iceberg.

The bodies of Colonel John Jacob Astor, Isador Straus, millionaire, and C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railroad, who lost their lives in the Titanic disaster, have been recovered and are now on board the cable ship Mackay-Bennett. News of the recovery of the bodies was contained in a dispatch to the White Star line company in New York.

The wireless message, which came from the Mackay-Bennett, gives the additional identification of forty-nine of the recovered dead on the cable ship. The bodies of Colonel Astor and Isador Straus have been embalmed.

The captain of the Mackay-Bennett confirms the identification of George D. Widener, son of P. A. Widener of Philadelphia, in a wireless dispatch to the White Star line.

He gives the further information that the majority of the bodies will never come to the surface of the sea.

The officers of the big liner Prinzess Irene, which arrived just before midnight, told of a wireless message they intercepted Wednesday, in which a ship—the name not learned—reported that in passing fifty miles from the scene of the Titanic disaster she had sighted an iceberg on which were the bodies of more than a dozen men.

All wore life belts and the bodies were huddled in groups at the base of the berg. It was the opinion of the captain that the men had climbed on the mass of ice and had frozen to death as they were swept southward. No attempt was made to take off the bodies.

During the progress of the Titanic hearing in Washington Fifth Officer Lowe told the senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster that he ordered J. Bruce Ismay, head of the line, to get away from No. 5 lifeboat. He said Mr. Imsay was excited and was interfering with the lowering of the boat by urging haste. Imsay did not try to get into the boat, witness said.

CHARLES M. HAYS.
[President of Grand Trunk Railway, Whose Body Was Recovered.]

MACKAY BENNETT

Funeral Ship Carrying Bodies from Scene of Titanic Wreck.

Major A. G. Peuchem, a wealthy manufacturer, who was a passenger on the Titanic, also was a witness. He was the first of the surviving passengers to be examined by the senate committee. He declared that there were not enough seamen in attendance upon the Titanic lifeboats, and charged that the quartermaster in charge of the lifeboat in which he had been saved was brutal and had refused to turn back when he heard cries of distress and a signal calling all lifeboats back to the Titanic. This is the first evidence that has been presented that any effort was made by those in charge of the Titanic to summon the lifeboats back after they had once put off. The signal as explained by Major Peuchem, was a tooting of the Titanic's whistle.

Major Peuchem testified further that on the morning following the disaster he saw pieces of cork floating near the scene of the wreck. He declined to draw any surmise, but it was apparent that he meant to convey the suggestion that the pieces of cork might have come from the life preservers.

Major Peuchem declared that so far as he knew no general alarm was sounded on the Titanic after the collision and the testimony of at least one other witness seemed to bear out this statement.

Captain Stanley Lord and Wireless Operator Cyril Evans, both of the steamship Californian, testified to the curt reply to their attempt to warn the big liner of the danger that lay ahead.

It was further established by the testimony of Captain Lord that his ship lay surrounded by ice not more than nineteen and one-half miles from the Titanic from the time she struck the iceberg and sent out her "C. Q. D." call until she sank beneath the surface. The testimony of both men demonstrated that but for the accident of a weary wireless operator going to bed, the Californian would have heard the call for help from the Titanic and proceeded to the assistance of the liner at once.

Testimony by twelve members of the Titanic's crew before expert members of the committee corroborated statements already made in regard to the presence of an unidentified vessel within a few miles of the Titanic and brought out interesting details of what happened on the Titanic before and after she went down.

Captain Moore of the Canadian Pacific railroad's steamship Mount Temple, arrived in Washington to testify before the senate committee of inquiry into the Titanic disaster.

Passengers on the Mount Temple, which was in the vicinity of the Titanic on the fateful night of Sunday, April 14, have declared they saw the Titanic's lights and signals. Wireless Operator Cottam of the Carpathia testified he did not believe the Mount Temple got the Titanic's wireless signals of distress because the operator of the Mount Temple had given him "good night" shortly after 10 o'clock that night.

Captain Moore's testimony apparently refuted the charges made that although he was near the Titanic he refused to go to her aid. He said that icebergs had hemmed him in so that he was forced to abandon his efforts to reach the Titanic.

Captain Stanley Lord of the steamer Californian denied before the committee that he saw distress signals from the Titanic and contradicted the story of Engineman Gill.

The committee has yet to examine a number of British sailors who survived the Titanic wreck. A. Crawford, one of the stewards, who was examined in New York, also is awaiting recall.

J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line, who has been waiting in Washington five days, attending the hearing from beginning to end each day, still is waiting to testify. He said that he was not so impatient since the testimony of twenty-five of the survivors of the crew had been taken in one day by the arrangement whereby each senator devoted nearly a whole night to examining them.

The committee does not wish to recall him until it has cleared up all the points it can clear up through surviving members of the crew and those on ship known to have been in the Titanic's vicinity the night of the catastrophe.

Chairman Smith reiterated the statement that no more passengers would be heard until the officials, members of the crew and crews of other boats have testified. The four surviving officers of the Titanaic, who are anxious to return, are still held.

Fifth Officer Lowe contemplates demanding of Senator Smith upon what information he based his interrogation of him as to his sobriety. Senator Smith asked Officer Lowe if he was a drinking man, saying that he had been informed he had been drinking the night the Titanic sank. This Lowe indignantly denied, asserting he was a total abstainer.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

PORT HURON—Much of the testimony introduced at the trial of George Esson, the Petrola, Ontario, young man who is charged with the murder of Thomas Major, plainly indicated that the jury will have to determine whether Major died from exposure to the cold, having been placed in that predicament by Esson, or whether death resulted from natural causes over which Esson had no control. Major's body was found frozen under the steps of a local church one night last winter. A watch and other valuables were missing. Three physicians have testified that death was due to exposure.

PETOSKEY—After he was sentenced to ninety days in the Detroit house of correction when he pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery in justice court, William Brown of Brutus appealed the case and in the Emmet county circuit court was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail and to pay a fine of $25. Brown is alleged to have taken the law into his own hands and whipped John Brill, a school teacher, because the latter inflicted punishment on the former's son, a student in the school.

CADILLAC—Mike Grant, a resident of this city has received news from Bonners Ferry, Idaho, concerning the tragic death of his brother, Jerry Grant, who had been missing since last December. The body was found about seven miles from Bonners Ferry in a log cabin formerly used by a railroad contractor. Grant was last seen Dec. 18. The body was found lying in a bunk, with a bullet through the heart. It appears to be a case of murder. Before going west Jerry lived at Lake City.

BATTLE CREEK—Numerous Seventh Day Adventists from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, which constitute the Lake Union Conference, gathered for the first sessions of a meeting that will last until May 5. Elder Allen Moon, of South Bend, Ind., is presiding. Battle Creek, the birthplace of Adventism, has been described by "Mother" Ellen White, who quarreled with Dr. J. H. Kellogg and ordered an exodus, as a "modern Sodom."

LANSING—Dr. Robert L. Dixon, one of the members of the state board of health, has received word from Dr. A. S. Wartham of the pathological department of the University of Michigan that Herman Hirshfield of Bay City, who is being detained by the authorities at Centerville, Ia., is a leper. Tissue from the patient was analyzed by Dr. Dixon, who was convinced the man was suffering from leprosy.

JACKSON—After he had pleaded guilty to the charge of attempting to purchase cocaine, Garnet Cline was sentenced to Jackson prison for six months to one year. Cline attempted to purchase some cocaine some time ago on a forged prescription but the drug clerk refused to sell him the "dope," but instead reported the incident to the police with the result that Cline was arrested.

Tailor's Cutting Retort.

A newly elected Australian labor M. P. returns his occupation as "tailor's cutter"—an avocation rarely represented in parliament. Some time ago, says the London Chronicle, Australia had a remarkably eloquent and witty tailor, who became not only an M. P., but a minister of the crown. To him a new governar made this maladroit remark: "I hear, Mr. Jones, you were once a tailor?" "Yes, my lord, I was." "And how are you engaged now?" "Taking your excellency's measure."

All Guided by the Will.

The will of each man or woman is like the compass of a ship—where it points, the ship goes. If the needle directs it to the rocks, there is wreck and disaster—if to the open sea, there is clear sailing.—Marie Corelli.

GARLAND B. GILLESPIE

Garland B. Gillespie passed away Wednesday evening at 9.05 at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Gillespie, after a long and painful illness, age 39 years, 8 months and 2 days.

He leaves a wife, three daughters, a father, mother, and three sisters besides a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his early death. No one could face death with more courage, or fight the grim destroyer step by step as he advanced, but the effort was futile, and the tired body and brave spirit are now at rest.

Garland was a pupil in our high school graduating in 1892, he then went to Detroit College for one year, going from there to the U. of M., where he graduated in 1895.

He opened up a law office in Clinton where he practiced for three years, coming later to Tecumseh where he has been in business ever since.

Politically he has been a prominent man in the County, believing in the democracy of the United States, and at the time of his death was chairman of the township democratic committee, having previously served as chairman of the County committee.

He was a prominent Eagle and Mason, and will be given a Masonic funeral from his father's home on Pearl street, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with burial at Brookside. The sympathy of every one goes out to his wife, to whom he was married in 1901.

Especially do we of the Herald office extend our sympathy to one, who was connected with us for so many years May the peace that passes all understanding come to her, from One who cares for each little sparrow that falls.

NORTHWESTERN UNITED DOCTORS

—OF—

MINNEAPOSIS, MINN.

An Association of Prominent Physicians Giving FREE Medical Services to the Sick and Medicines at Cost. At the Barrett Hotel Tuesday, May 14 One Da Only.

The Northwestern United Doctors largest doctor specialists in the United States, practicing in Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin North and South Dakota, organized and licensed by the states for the purpose of treating diseases, deformities and all cureable ailments without surgical operation. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the result to their friends, and thus prove to the sick and afflicted that at last treatments have been discovered that are absolutely sure and certain in their effect

By their developed system no more operations for appendicitis, gall stones kidney stones, tumors, goiter, piles or cancer. They were among the first in America to do away with the knife, blood and pain in the successful treatment and cure of these dangerous diseases.

Diseases of the stomach, intestines, liver, skin, nerves, heart, spleen, kidneys and bladder, rheumatism, sciatica, diabetes, bedwetting, leg ulcers, epilepsy, or fits, etc., all treated with gratifying success.

Selected cases of consumption, asthma, bronchitis and catarrhal disease; absolutely cured with combination of medicine, hygiene, diet; exercise and the important uses and advantages of clothes, occupation, etc.

Many cases of deafness are frequently cured in sixty days. Loss of sight, cataract, granulated lids and old weak watery, sore eyes treated successfully, In long standing, deep-seated, chronic diseases of men and women. and slow growths and undeveloped children's diseases, a treatment that is absolutely certain in its effects can be had and depended on.

Eczema, salt rheum, eruptions, liver spots and chronic diseases of the skin quickly cured. An absolute guarantee in every case accepted for treatment.

Patients with cancer, tumor and tubercular glands not larger than one to two inches anually cured with their hypodermic injection method, with one treatment, and this without pain.

Patients with growths larger than two inches are not invited to call.

No matter what your ailment may be, no matter what experience you have had with other physicians, it will be to your advantage to treat with the Northwestern United Doctors Specialists. Even if your case is incurable they will give you such advice that will relieve you and stay the disease,

Do not put off this duty you owe yourself. your friends, and your relatives, it may save your life.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble, bring a two ounce bottle of your urine for analysis.

This free offer is for this trip only. Hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Married ladies must come with their husbands and minors with their parents.

Seek the Best.

Nobleness springs to our eyes wherever we look, rich stores of poetic inspiration, if one has receptivity large enough to take it in and reveal it touched with emotion, the magic light of the imagination. Bravery, goodness and truth lie on every side. We need not seek the exceptional for themes, the usual affords more than enough. Look closely with understanding into the common; you will find everwhere the uncommon, the wonderful.—The Christian Register.

ANTI-SALOON DAY

Next Sunday is Anti-Saloon day in Tecumseh. There will be speakers in the Friends, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches in the morning, and a Union Service in the evening at the Presbyterian church. Herbert H. Rood Editor of the Michigan American Issue will be the speaker.

WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION

May, 1912

At last Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" has been put on the stage. Some of the heirs fought it for years, but John Alcott, the author's favorite nephew, who now controls the estate, has consented finally and the thing is done. The story as told in this months COMPANION is interesting.

Now Put Your Books in Macey Cases.

Summer dust is a great destroyer of books. It slips in through the windows and crannies and settles in a fine grinding powder on the delicate white leaves of your favorite volumes,

This dust is laden with all the filth and germs of the street. It soils the edges and spoils the appearance of the books you want to keep.

Soiled books at best look badly and loose much of their charm.

Protect yours with Macey Cases, always closed tightly and always ready for use—always room for more.

EMERSON PLOWS

You have believed that you have seen or used the best riding plow. You have been mistaken unless you have seen or used an EMERSON HIGH LIFT. It is made strong, particularly so where other plows break and wear out. It lifts so easy that any ten-year-old boy can lift it, and is so handy as all the levers are on the right side. It is "FOOL PROOF" as far as getting out of adjustments is concerned.

We will guarantee it to do satisfactory work in hard ground. It makes no difference what plow you have seen or used, you will like an EMERSON better. Do not buy until you have seen it.

The Ladies' World for May is unusually rich in fiction of a most entertaining kind, besides having some special articles that are timely, well-written and interesting. This magazine advances steadily in excellence, the quality of its contents, both text and illustrations, being fully equal to that of its higher-priced contemporaries. There is also a novel contest on the subject of choosing a husband that is sure to tempt thousands of its readers to enter. The chief stories are: A Golden Wedding, by Maude Sutton, with illustrations by Pfeifer; A Reflected Halo, by Bess Hafer, illustrated by Ashe; Before the Journey, by Lillian Nicholson, illustrated by Emrich. Louise D. Mitchell concludes the series of Studies in Married Life, by urging that consideration take the place of love, should love ever die. The Household and Fashion departments stand out as exceptionally good, but the others are practical and furnish the housewife with much that she wants to know about her house, her family and herself.—[New York; Fifty Cents a Year.]

COUNTY FEDERATION

Adrian, Apr. 30

Everiss Hall in Adrian was most tastefully decorated with flowers and potted plants for the 7th annual meeting of the County Federation of Woman's Clubs.

The weather was all that could be wished and the ladies in the best of spirits for the occasion.

Meeting called to order at 10 a m. with a few words of pleasant greeting by Mrs. J. D Shull President of the County Federation, a prayer by Rev. Edwin Simpson followed. Mrs. John E. Carr of the Monday Evening Literary Club gave a most cordial address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. C. A. Wright, of the Tecumseh Monday Club, in a very charming manner.

Reports followed from the various committes. After the reports of officers and standing committes had been given, Vice President, Miss Pease was called to the chair, and Mrs. J. D. Shull as reporting delegate to the State Federation gave a very fine report of their last meeting.

An interesting feature was the reports of Presidents or their substitutes on the work of their several clubs during the past yea., Mrs. E. F Harris for the Monday Club, Mrs M. Keysor for the Research Circle, and Mrs. Andrew Wilson for the Town and Civic Improvement Society, represented Tecumseh in these reports.

Election of officers came next, Mrs. J. D. Shull being elected to succeed herself as President.

The musical entertainment was given in a charming manner by Miss Brittian of Adrian College, and Miss Sturtevant of Adrian.

Dinner came next at Dorcas Chapel.

The afternoon session was given up most entirely to addresses. Mrs. Jenny Law-Hardy gave a very forcible talk on Woman's Suffrage, giving a historic review of the part woman has taken in the leading reforms of nations and her concluding remarks were to the effect, that woman who has most to do with the home, should be given the ballot to protect that home.

Each address was well given, and listened to with both pleasure and profit by all present.

After the singing of the Federation hymn, miscellaneous business was taken up. Mrs. J. D. Shull was again named as reporting delegate to the State Federation. Meeting then adjourned and an informal social hour was spent by those who did not have to hurry away to catch their trains

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCEMENT

Married at All Saints Rectory, Windsor, Ontario. Sept. 4, 1911, by Arthur Carlisle Rector, Roy J. VanWinkle and Vita J. Rude both of Tecumseh.

Something new in an egg producer. Start your little chicks on our fine food and notice the difference in results. Your chicks will grow faster and be much stronger. Come and let us show it to you. This is a pure bone ash, manufactured from phosphorous, mined in Tennessee, combined with silica and soda ash. These three ingredients are mixed with water and put through a mixer and then baked in ovens at 3000 degrees Farenheit for 30 minutes. It takes 12 hours for this to cool, after which it is ground and passed over 4 screens, to get different sizes.

This food will take the place of oyster shell, stone grits, charcoal, beef scraps, and will cut down your grain feeding one-third. Hen-et-a contains a large amount of phosphate which is necessary to sustain the life of the small chick.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25 00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e pre i ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

FOUR PERISH IN FIRE

Children are Victims of Blaze at Rochester, Mich.

Mother is Seriously Burned and the Chief of the Fire Department is Badly Injured.

Rochester, Mich., April 27. — Four children of Mrs. Charles Slack are dead, the mother is seriously burned and Fire Chief Porten is painfully injured as the result of a fire which destroyed the Slack home here.

The flames were caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove. The dead are: Charles Slack, aged twelve years; Baby Slack, two months; Bert, seven years, and Leo, five years.

The first two named were burned to death in the house; the others died in a Detroit hospital, where they were taken after the fire

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A. Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

TAFT MEN IN BOLT

Elect Four Delegates at Large from Missouri to Chicago.

Dissatisfied with the final result of the Republican state convention at St Louis, Mo., which adjourned Friday at 8:30 a. m., a small number of Taft supporters met in a hotel at 10 o'clock and named four delegates-at-large to the national convention.

The Taft delegation was announced as follows: Joseph E. Black of Richmond, Mo.; John A. Duncan, of St. Joseph; John J. Lehiv of St. Louis, and Harry D. Train of Kansas City. Resolutions condemning Governor Hadley for "betraying" the Taft men in the preconvention agreement, and praising the administration of President Taft, were adopted. Some Taft men, it is said, counseled against naming a rival delegation and advised sending lawyers to the national convention to plead their cause.

The regular convention had elected eight delegates at large to Chicago, each having one-half vote.

140 SINK WITH SHIP

Steamer Texas Strikes Mine in the Gulf of Smyra.

The steamer Texas, belonging to the Archipelago American Steamship company, struck a mine at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna and sank.

One hundred and forty persons on board were drowned.

The mine was there to blow up Italian warships and the Texas became the innocent victim of that conflict.

The Texas was flying the Turkish flag and was engaged in carrying the mails from Constantinople to the Levant.

It was at first said that the Texas was an American vessel, the error arising from the fact that she is part of the fleet of a local concern trading under the name of the Archipelago American Steamship company.

"Yet, it was the next step?"

"Yes, it was the next step. I meant that one does not care to be victor because the leading cars were wrecked. There is no elation in defeating a driver who lies out on the course. But, as you say, it helped my purpose. You," he hesitated for the right phrase, "you are most kind to recall that I have a purpose."

It was the convent-bred Emily who looked back at him, earnest-eyed, exaltedly serious.

"I have thought of it often. Every one else that I know just lives the way things happen—there are only a few people who grasp things and make them happen. That is real work; so many of us are just given work we do not want—" she broke off.

"If we do not want the work, it is probably not our own," said Lestrange. "Unless we have brought it on ourselves by a fault we must undo—I need not speak of that to you. One must not make the mistake of assuming some one else's work."

He spoke gently, almost as if with a clairvoyant reading of her tendency to self-immolation.

"But may not some one else's fault be given us to undo?" she asked eagerly. "May not their work be forced on us?"

"No," he answered.

"No?" bewildered.

"I don't think so. Each one of us has enough with his own, at least so it seems to me. Most of us die before we finish it."

Emily paused, contending with the loneliness and doubts which impelled her to speech, the feminine yearning to let another decide her problems. This other's nonchalant strength of decision allured her uncertainty.

"I am discouraged," she confessed. "And tired. I—there is no reason why I should not speak of it. You know Dick, how he can do nothing in the factory or business, or in the places where a Ffrench should stand. All this must fall into the hands of strangers, to be broken and forgotten, when my uncle dies, for lack of some one who would care. And Uncle Ethan seems severe and hard, but it grieves him all the time. His only son was not a good man; he lives abroad with his wife, who was an actress before he married her. You knew that?" as he moved.

"I heard something of it in the village," Lestrange admitted gravely. "Please do not think me fond of gossip; I could not avoid it. But I should not have imagined this a family likely to make low marriages."

"It never happened before. I never saw that cousin, nor did Dick; but he was always a disappointment, always, Uncle Ethan has told me. And since he failed, and Dick fails, there is only me."

"You!"

She nodded, her lip quivering.

"Only me. Not as a substitute—I am not fit for that—but to find a substitute. I have promised my uncle to marry the first one who is able to be that."

The silence was absolute. Lestrange neither moved nor spoke, gazing down at her bent head with an expression blending many shades.

"It is a duty; there is no one except me," she added. "Only sometimes I grow—to dislike it too much. I am so selfish that sometimes I hope a substitute will never come."

Her voice died away. It was done; she, Emily Ffrench, had deliberately confided to this stranger that which an hour before she would have believed no one could force from her lips in articulate speech. And she neither regretted nor was ashamed, although there was time for full realization before Lestrange answered.

"I did not believe," he said, "that such things could be done. It is nonsense! It is the kind of situation, Miss Ffrench, where any man is justified in interfering. I beg you will leave the affair in my hands and think no more of such morbid self-sacrifice."

Stupefied, Emily flung back her head, staring at him.

"In your hands?"

"Since there are none better, it appears. Why," his vivid face questioned her full and straightly, "you didn't imagine that any man living could hear what you are doing, and pass on?"

"My uncle knows—"

"Your uncle—is not for me to criticize. But do not ask any other man to let you go on."

Her ideas reeling, she struggled for comprehension.

"You, what could you do?" she marveled. "The substitute—"

"There won't be any substitute," replied Lestrange with perfect coolness. "I shall train Dick Ffrench to do his work."

"You—"

"I can, and I will."

"He can not—"

"Oh, yes, he can; he is just idle and spoiled," the firm lips set more firmly. "He shall take his place, I can handle him."

Emily sat quite helplessly, her eyes black with excitement. Slowly recollection flowed back to her of a change in Dick since his light contact with Lestrange; his avoidance of even occasional highballs, his awakening interest in the clean sport of the races, and his half-wistful admiration for the virile driver-manager.

"I almost believe you could," she conceded.

"I can," repeated Lestrange. "Only," he openly smiled, "it will be hard on Dickie."

It was the touch needed, the antidote to sentiment. Emily laughed with him, laughed in sheer mischief and relief and leap of youth.

"You will be gentle—poor Dickie!"

"I'll be gentle. He is coming now, I think." He took a step nearer her. "You will leave this in my care, wholly? You will not trouble about—a substitute?"

"I will leave it with you. But you are forgetting your own doctrine; you are taking some one else's work to do."

"Pardon, I am merely making Ffrench do his work. I have seen a little more of him than you perhaps know; I understand what I am undertaking. Moreover, I would forget a great many doctrines to set you free."

"Free?" she echoed; she had the sensation of being suddenly confronted with an open door into the unexpected.

"Free," he quietly reasserted. "Free to live your own life and draw unhampered breath, and to decide the great question when it comes, with thought only of yourself."

She drew back; a prescient dismay fell sharply across her late relief, a panic crossed with strange delight.

"He's off," called Dick, emerging from the park. "I made Anderson take him down with the limousine. At least, Rupert is driving while Anderson sits alongside and holds on; when they came to the turn in the avenue, your previous mechanician took it full speed and then apologized for going so slowly because, as he said, he was an amateur and likely to upset. Is he really a good driver, Lestrange."

"Pretty fair," returned Lestrange serenely, from his seat on the edge of the ditched machine. "When I'm not using him, he's employed as one of the factory car testers; and when we're racing I give him the wheel if I want to fix anything. However, I'm obliged to that steering-knuckle for breaking here, instead of leaving me to a long wait in the wilds. Come down to the shop tomorrow at six, and Rupert and I will even up by taking you for a run."

"Who; me? You're asking me?"

"Why not? It's exhilarating."

Dick removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair, gratification and alarm mingling in his expression with somewhat the effect of the small boy who is first invited into a game with his older brother's clique.

"You—er, wouldn't smash me up?" he hesitated.

"I haven't smashed up Rupert or myself, so far. If you feel timid, never mind, of course; I'll take my usual companion."

Dick flushed all over his plump face, the Ffrench blood up at last.

"I was only joking," he hastily explained. "I'll come. It's only that you're so confoundedly reckless sometimes, Lestrange, and— But I'll come."

Lestrange gave his fine, glinting smile as he rose to salute Emily.

"All right. If you don't get down to the factory in time, I'll call for you," he promised.

CHAPTER V.

There was a change in the Ffrench affairs, a lightening of the atmosphere, a vague quickening and stir of healthful cheer in the days that followed. The somber master of the house met it in Bailey's undisguised elation and pride when they discussed the successful business now taxing the factory's resources, met it yet again in Emily's pretty gaiety and content. But most strikingly was he confronted with an alteration in Dick.

It was only a week after his first morning ride with Lestrange, that Dick electrified the company at dinner by turning down the glass at his plate.

"I've cut out claret, and that sort of thing," he announced. "It's bad for the nerves."

His three companions looked up in complete astonishment. It was Saturday night and by ancient custom Bailey was dining at the house.

"What has happened to you? Have you been attending a revival meeting?" the young man's uncle inquired with sarcasm.

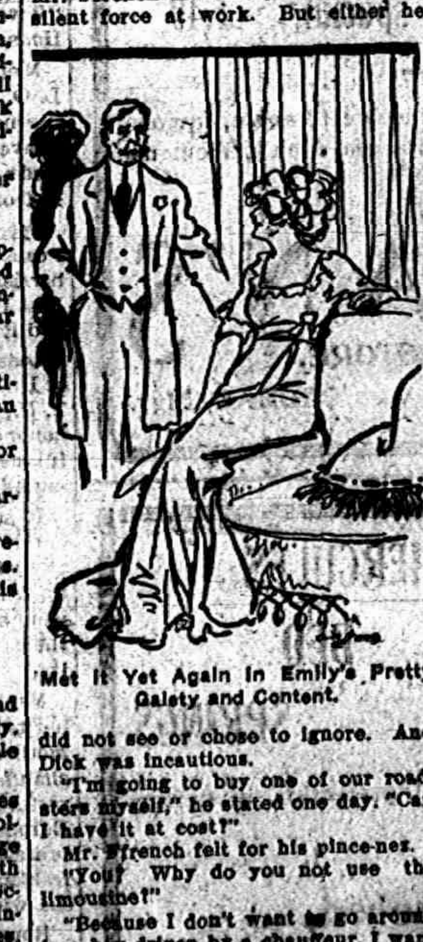
"It's bad for the nerves," repeated Dick. "There isn't any reason why I shouldn't like to do anything other fellows do. Les—that is, none of the men who drive cars ever touch that stuff, and look at their nerve."

Mr. Ffrench contemplated him with the irritation usually produced by the display of ostentatious virtue, but found no comment. Emily gazed at the table, her red mouth curving in spite of all effort at seriousness.

"You're right, Mr. Dick," said Bailey dryly. "Stick to it."

And Dick stuck, without as much as a single lapse. Ffrenchwood saw comparatively little of him, as time went on, the village and factory much. He lost some weight, and acquired a coat of reddish tan.

Emily watched and admired in silence. She had not seen Lestrange again, but it seemed to her that his influence overlay all the life of both house and factory. Sometimes this showed so plainly that she believed Mr. Ffrench must see, must feel the silent force at work. But either he did not see or chose to ignore. And Dick was incautious.



"Met It Yet Again in Emily's Pretty Gaiety and Content.

"I'm going to buy one of our roadsters myself," he stated one day. "Can I have it at cost?"

Mr. Ffrench felt for his pince-nez.

"You? Why do you not use the limousine?"

"Because I don't want to go around in a box driven by a chauffeur. I want a classy car to run myself. I've been driving some of the stripped cars, lately, and I like it."

"I will give you a car, if you want one," answered his uncle, quite kindly. "Go select any you prefer."

"Thank you," Dick sat up, beaming. "But I'll have to wait my turn, we've orders ahead now. Lestrange says I've no right to come in and make some other fellow wait."

Mr. Ffrench slowly stiffened.

"We do not require lessons in ethics from this Lestrange," was the cold rebuke. "I shall telephone Bailey [illegible] pening, when she found the black-eyed young mechanician was detailed to accompany Dick's maiden trips,

BRONCHITIS

To Whom It May Concern

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910—"I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health, and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended, and from the second bottle I commenced, to improve. I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared, and I, am at work again.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles—not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try Vinol. If you don't think it helps you, we will return your money.

CONGRESS AWAY BEHIND

Senator Penrose Does Not See Adjournment Before July 1.

Washington, May 6.—After a series of conferences, Senator Penrose, the Republican leader of the senate, expressed the belief that it was a physical impossibility to consider the appropriation bills and other prospective legislation before probably July 1. This would be after the national party conventions.

"I am anxious for an early adjournment," he said, "but the tariff debate has hardly started and some of the largest and more important appropriation bills are yet to be completed."

Senator Simmons, in charge of the tariff bills for the Democrats, expressed similar views. The approximate time of adjournment, however, is yet uncertain. Some of the senators and many representatives still believe that the congress will be able to close its affairs before the conventions, despite the congestion in the senate.

MAY IMPEACH ARCHBOLD

Wickersham Recommends Further Probe of Charges Against Jurist.

Washington, May 6.—Attorney General Wickersham sent to the house judiciary committee the result of the investigation of charges that Judge Robert W. Archbold of the commerce court had used his office to secure favors from railroads.

President Taft submitted all the papers in the case to the house of representatives with a plea that they be suppressed until the committee on judiciary decides on the course it intends to pursue.

Army Revolver Kills Girl.

Springfield, Ill., May 6.—Miss Elsie Rickabay, fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Rickabay, prominent in Normal, Ill., while visiting in Springfield at the residence of W. M. C. Wilson, spied an old army revolver belonging to Mr. Wilson, looked into the muzzle of it, pulled the trigger and was instantly killed. A 32-caliber bullet tore a ghastly hole beneath her right eye.

DROWNS IN A CISTERN

Wealthy Farmer Fires House before Taking Plunge.

Aurora Man, Despondnet at Family's Desertion, Becomes Firebug and Suicide.

Aurora, Ill., May 6.—After placing his best suit of clothes on a clothes line, safe from harm, pouring oil over the floors of all of the rooms in his house and then applying a match to the building, Peter Graff, forty-five, a wealthy farmer, committed suicide by jumping into a cistern.

Because his wife and son and daughter, aged sixteen and fifteen, respectively, left him at Easter to reside with relatives in Chicago, Graff grew despondent. In a pocket of the clothes which he wished to save to be buried in was discovered a leaf from the family Bible on which was written "the end is near."

Before neighbors discovered that the buildings were ablaze, the home, corn crib, barn and other buildings had been nearly destroyed and it was impossible to save them.

Graff's body was found in the bottom of the cistern, barely covered by water, standing upright. He had jumped in feet foremost.

Graff has resided near here for many years. He has been married for twenty years and was reputed to be wealthy.

WISCONSIN PIONEER DEAD

Apoplexy Results Fatally to John Lane at the Age of Seventy.

Waukesha, Wis., May 6.—Word has been received here of the death of John Lane, aged seventy, a poineer resident of Eagle. He was stricken with apoplexy and died in a few hours. He had been in failing health for some time. He was born in Ireland in 1842, and came to Dedham, Mass., in 1860. At the age of twenty-one he enlisted in the navy and served during the civil war.

The Genessee, Palmyra and North Prairie veterans of the civil war attended the funeral in a body as well as the teachers and pupils of the Eagle public schools.

13 HURT IN CRASH

Trolley Car Jumps the Track and Hits a Telegraph Pole.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 6.—Eight women and five men were injured when a trolley car jumped the track and crashed into a telegraph pole near Germania street.

Passengers were pitched headlong through the car, while a shower of glass scattered in every direction. The seriously injured are: Mrs. Frederick Sorde of Lackawana and William Downey of Buffalo.

MRS. VANDERBILT BETTER

Is Resting Comfortably After an Operation for Appendicitis.

New York, May 6.—Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., who was operated on for appendicitis, is said to be resting comfortably.

It was said at her home on Fifth avenue, where the operation was performed, that Mrs. Vanderbilt had completely recovered from the relapse from which she suffered after the operation

CHICAGO FREIGHT HANDLERS STRIKE

Principal Demand Is for Increase in Wages.

FIVE THOUSAND MEN ARE OUT

Men Claim They Have Had No Raise in Pay for Several Years and Living Cost Has Gone Steadily Up.

Chicago, May 6. — Freight handlers numbering approximately 5,000 employed by the railroads entering Chicago went on strike for an increase in wages.

The railroad officials had offered them an advance of ½ cent an hour for truckers, making their wages $2.25 per day of ten hours, and $2.50 increase to those paid monthly.

The freight handlers refused this advance, saying it was too small to consider and that as they had not received any change in wages for several years they were entitled to greater concessions. In reply to the offer the freight handlers asked for 1 cent an hour advance or that a shorter work day be granted and that overtime be paid for, with extra compensation over the regular rate. This was a conservative demand, they said. The railroad officials refused to consider any further advance or changes in working conditions and the men quit.

No attempt was made by the railroad officials to fill the places of the freight handlers. It was said that none would be made until after today, as they expected the men would return to work. It was also said that arrangements were being made to place the handling of freight on a tonnage basis, as is now in force on the Alton and Pennsylvania lines. It was also arranged to transfer freight outside the city if necessary.

PANAMA IN TURMOIL

Political Strife Is Bitter and Violence Is Reported.

Panama, May 6.—Alarming reports continue to come from the interior as to political fights and rows of various kinds. Two men were killed at one place during the registration of voters. A number of others were wounded.

Dr. Porras, the anti-administration candidate for president, is in the interior on a political tour. The situation is strained. Both parties have decided to ask the United States to supervise the elections in order to secure an honest vote.

SUICIDE OF A MINISTER

The Rev. Charles Martz Drowns Himself in Rain Barrel.

Noblesville, Ind., May 6.—The Rev. Charles Martz committed suicide by drowning in a rain barrel, at his home in Arcadia. He had been mentally deranged for some time.

Preparations were under way to send him to an insane hospital for treatment, and he was to have been taken away the same afternoon. He was sixty years old and had been a minister in the Christian church for thirty-five years, having held charges in many Indiana cities.

PREPARE REPORT ON WRECK PROBE

Senate Sub-Committee Concludes Titanic Hearings.

CHAIRMAN BACK FROM GOTHAM

Report Is to Be Comprehensive and Fix Responsibility—Sweeping Recommendations Will Be Made.

Washington, May 6.—The senate committee which is investigating the Titanic disaster has concluded its hearings and is considering the formulation of its report.

Senator Smith, the chairman, returned from New York, where he has been pursuing the inquiry. He says the report will be comprehensive relating to this marine disaster and will fix responsibility. Sweeping recommendations for legislation for the preservation of life at sea will probably be made.

Senator Smith says that the committee's recommendations will include various phases of legislation that have already been discussed. The construction of ocean-going vessels with relation to watertight compartments, bulkheads, double bottoms, adequate lifeboats for passengers and crews, together with a sufficient complement of wireless operators will be among the things urged in this report. Senator Smith is confident that congress will give speedy consideration to the proposed legislation.

Senator Smith said: "The inquiry has been closed. I don't think there will be any further public hearings. The matters that I took up in New York were important and had to do directly with the mechanical sufficiency of some features of the ship. I think the record has also been cleared up with relation to the conflict in testimony concerning discipline on the Titanic."

FURTHER SEARCH FOR BODIES

Canadian Steamer Montmagny Goes to Scene of Titanic Disaster.

Halifax, N. S., May 6.—The search for Titanic bodies is to be continued and the government steamship Montmagny has sailed, relieving the Minia, which is expected to arrive today with less than twenty bodies. The White Star officials tried hard to get another steamship, but failed. The two cable ships are required for their regular work.

Supplies will be taken for a cruise of ten days or more and ample material required by undertakers will be put on board. The government steamer in prosecuting her search will cruise along the edge of the gulf stream, and it is expected bodies will be found in cold water as far north as 100 miles from the place where the Titanic went down. The Mackay Bennett reported them drifting northeast.

TEXAS FAVORS ROOSEVELT

Wilson Eats Up All Opposition in Democratic Primaries.

Austin, Tex., May 6. — It is now definitely known that Roosevelt practically swept the state in the precinct primary conventions held Saturday, although the early reports indicated that Taft was in the lead. Colonel Cecil Lynn, the Roosevelt manager, claims a solid Roosevelt delegation of forty voters will be sent to the national convention. Quite a number of primary conventions didn't instruct, but their delegatoins are said to be favorable to Roosevelt. Taft carried the Tenth congressional district.

In the Democratic precinct primary conventions Wilson led Harmon, Clark and Underwood by receiving more instructed voters than all three of his opponents combined.

LORIMER FIGHT THIS WEEK

Minority Senate Committee Anxious to Begin Hostilities.

Washington, May 6.—The minority members of the senate committee which investigated the election of Senator Lorimer are planning to begin the fight against him on the floor of the senate this week.

Senator Kern of Indiana, who is drawing the minority report which will declare against the Illinois senator's right to his seat, will call up the case and seek to force an immediate submission of the majority report.

President Taft in Ohio.

Chillicothe, O., May 6. — President Taft made five speeches in Ohio today: At Nelsonville, Athens, Hamglen, Chillicothe and Greenfield. He will arrive at Cincinnati late tonight and will stop at his brother's home. Mr. Taft will spend Tuesday quietly and in the evening will attend the May musical festival.

Third Son for John D., Jr.

New York, May 6. — Another son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at their home in Pocantico Hills. The latest grandchild of John D. Rockefeller is the third on and fourth child of his son.

Father Drowned in Canal.

Coal City, Ill., May 6.—Maurice Furno, an Italian miner residing in Elleen, was drowned in the canal. He was fishing with his son, a boy of thirteen years. The boat was overturned and in trying to save the boy the father lost his own life. He was thirty-five years of age and leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter.

Ill Health Causes Man to Kill Himself.

Greensburg, Ind., May 6.—Alexander Kelly, aged fifty-five, living near Alert, committed suicide by hanging himself to a rafter in his barn. He left a note giving ill health as the cause for his act. A widow survives.

Escapes an Awful Fate

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery, But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now,', Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung trouble Every bottle guaranteed, 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son.

Flattery is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

Mrs. Ida Decker, 74 Carlyle St., Battle Creek, had all the painful symptoms of severe kidney trouble. Her kidneys were congested, eyesight blurred, slept poorly, was nervous, tired out, and all run down. After taking Foley's Kidney Pills she say: "The sick headaches came no more, I slept soundly, was free from dizziness, and my kidneys and bladder stopped bothering me. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and freed me of much misery," All Druggists of Tecumseh.

There are people who are so busy having a good time that trouble can't touch them.

The Demons of the Swamp

are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails: also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the maleria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Alex Destinon. 90 Lake St., Muskegon. desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Helps A Judge in Bad Fix

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mill's, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote "at last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was completely cured." Cures burns, boil, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

GARLAND R. GILLESPIE

THE FUNERAL SERVICES OF GARLAND GILLESPIE WERE HELD AT THE HOME OF R. B. GILLESPIE, SUNDAY AFTERNOON AT 2 O'CLOCK

Buried With Masonic Honors

HIS CLASSMATES AT THE U. OF M. B. L. HART, EARL C. MICHFNER AND H. R. JEWETT, ACTING AS PALL BEARERS

In the peace and quiet of Sunday afternoon, Garland R Gillespie was laid to rest in beautiful Brookside the day being typical of the peace and rest that he is now enjoying after the long fight with sickness and pain of the last few years.

The sympathy and high esteem in which he was held was shown by the large gathering of his friends both in his social, Masonic and professional life

Peacefully he slept surrounded by the beautiful flowers and floral emblems, his covering being a blanket of calla lillies.

The Rev. B R. Weld spoke in a very feeling and impressive manner, his message being "My Peace I Give Unto You." Mrs. Weld rendered two vocal solo's, "There is never a day so dreary" and "Be still sad heart," The Masons then took charge of the ceremonies. The active pall bearers were H. R. Jewett, B. L Hart, J. N. Samson and Earl C. Michner of Adrian, F. B. Wood and Geo. A. Rathbun of Tecumseh. The honorary bearers being Grant T. Fellows and B H. Chandler of Hudson, L. F. Bean, W. B. Alexander, James Cornelius of Adrian J. W. Wightman of Tecumseh. All members of the Lenawee County Bar Association.

About eighty Masons acted as escort to the grave where the ritual service of the Masonic order was spoken and and he was given into the care of the Supreme Grand Master of the Celestial lodge.

The Men's Quartette composed of W. S. Dickenson, Fred Dickenson, Elmer Slayton, and Chas. Ruthruff, sang Pleyels Hymn.

It was a pathetic sight to see the widow surrounded by her three little girls and the sympathy of everyone was given to them, to the mother and father who were mourning the loss of their oldest child and only son and to the sisters who have lost their brother.

The Societies who sent emblematic floral pieces were the Masons, Eagles, Lenawee County Bar Association, Monday Club and Rebekahs with a wealth of cut flowers from friends.

The relatives and friends from out town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Macham, Mr. and Mrs. Giles, Mrs. Bartholemew Miss Edith Camburn, Mr. Frank Lovejoy of Adrian, May Farley of Jackson, Jas. Cox and wife of Holloway. Mr. Perry of Charlotte and daughter Mrs. Kost of Battle Creek, Geo. Gillespie and wife of Mason, Frank Gillespie, Benton Harbor, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and Mrs, Jas. Hogan of Clinton.

BAR ASSOCIATION ACTS ON G. R. GILLESPIE'S DEATH

Court Adjourned Out of Respect for His Memory and the Attorneys Will Attend the Funeral

The Lenawee County Bar association in a meeting Friday afternoon took suitable action on death of Garland Gillespie, of Tecumseh, deciding to attend the funeral in a body, appointing a committee on resolutions, and providing for floral offerings at the funeral. Court was asked to adjourn till after the funeral, which was done

The meeting was called at 1:30 by President Alexander. After some discussion, the bar association decided to make the trip to attend the funeral at Tecumseh Sunday in automobiles and Mr. Alexander was made a committee to provide conveyances

On motion of Mr Hart, Attorneys Wightman and Wood of Tecumseh were made a committee to provide a proper floral offering for the funeral. On motion of Mr. Baldwin, the chairman appointed a committee of three on resolutions, and B. L. Hart, F. B. Wood and James H Cornelius were appointed as this committee,

On motion of Mr. Baldwin, the president was authorized to request the court to adjourn till Monday, in respect for the deceased member of the association. The meeting then adjourned.

Judge O'Mealey then called court, and on request of Mr. Alexander, ordered court adjourned till Monday morning. The bar association will probably meet again Monday, at which time the report of the committee on resolutions will be heard.

"LIMIT" IN SHORT WEIGHTS

Indianapolis Man Finds Dumbbell That Is Four-Ounces Less Than It Is Branded.

Dr. W. F. King, assistant secretary of the state board of health, has found what he terms "the limit" in short weights. He wrote to a sporting goods house a few days ago to buy some dumbbells for his daughter, and in "hefting" a pair found that one was lighter than the other. He called the attention of the salesman to his discovery and the dumbbells were placed on a balance and weighed, and one found to be four ounces short of the branded weight.

"I don't believe the misbranding could be handled under the pure food law," said Dr. King, "but Isidor Wulfson might take the case."

Dr. King recalled that when Ben-Hur was a slave on the Roman galley he represented to the overseer that keeping a galley slave chained to one side of the ship all the time developed him on one side only and that the owner was not able to get full value received from his price for the slave, and that as a result the slaves were shifted regularly from one side of the ship to the other. In this way, Ben-Hur was enabled to maintain rugged health and strength until he escaped.

"Since dumbbells are used for physical development, a pair ought to be of equal weight, in order to balance the development," said Dr. King.—Indianapolis News.

Value of History.

Old wrongs are so hard to root up that every man sometimes becomes impatient and indignant and rebellious, except the man who knows and has long pondered in the very slow ascent of human society to every higher level that it has reached. Historical knowledge is got only by considerable labor. Any good man who loves his fellows, when he looks out over the world and sees it as it is, is pretty certain at times to accept some revolutionary plan unless he have a pretty good historical perspective.—World's Work.

Proverb Amplified.

"The pen," said the ready-made philosopher, "is mightier than the sword."

"So it is," replied the Chicago beef baron; "especially if you have reference to a cattle pen."

ON THE FARM

"Hurrah!" shouted the Stanley twins as they rushed into the their home one night after school, and threw down their books. "My! but its a comfort to think we won't have to go to school for twelve-whole-weeks," said Harold. "I guess it is," said Betty; "and just think— we're going out to Grandpa's tomorrow." From then on to bed time they talked and planned of nothing else then of what they would do on the farm. It was the biggest treat for this girl and boy who were only eight years old to go out on a farm, since they lived in a big city all the year around.

The next afternoon two tired little children climbed with difficulty on a big old fashioned sofa, nodded their heads drowsily and went to sleep. They had been from one end of the farm to the other, and nothing escaped their sharp little eyes. They had seen the pigs, cows, horses, sheeps, chickens and in fact everything that was to be seen.

One day about two weeks later they were racking their brains for something to do. "Oh!" said Betty suddenly, "I'll tell you what let's do. You remember that little door at the west end of the attic? Well Grandpa told me just this morning that it led to a room in which are old, old furniture and treasures that belonged to our ancestors. Let's ask him if he won't let us go in there," and with that they started off to find their Grandfather.

With a little urging he let them take the key. Then they ran in the house and up the squeaky stairs that led to the attic. The door was shut and they had to push very hard to open it. At last it gave way and they stumbled into a low musty old room. Suddenly Betty gave a gasp of horror and cried out, "Oh," I believe I saw a skeleton over in that corner." They drew back but soon summoned enough courage to go up to the supposed skeleton, only to find it an old white rocking chair. They thought it a great joke and ran to tell their Grandparents who quite agreed with them.

That evening at twilight, Betty went up in the attic to get her hankerchief she left there in the afternoon She picked it up and started for the stairs, when a skeleton clad in a white sheet glided before her. This made her tremble with fear and in her haste to get down stairs she tripped and fell head-first through the plaster into her room. It did not seem to hurt her and when she looked up to see the hole she thought she made, there was none. Finally she came too and found herself beside her bed. It was the next day and Harold was standing beside her laughing until his sides would split. It was past nine o'clock and all except Betty had eaten their breakfast. Harold could not stand waiting any longer so he got a wisp of hay and tickled her with it which made her jump and fall out of bed. "Hurry up so you can come down and see Jimmie's new chickens that hatched out just this morning," he said excitingly. "But Grandma said you could'nt have anything to eat until dinner time as you were so late in getting up."

THE RIVAL SCHOOLS

A great rivalry had occurred between the High School of Neston and the Boy's Academy of Crayton, both small towns bordering on the shores of a lake in northern Michigan. Crayton had this year more boys on that side of the water.

About the centre of the lake was an island of about an acre in area on which was erected a tall flag pole. This pole was owned by both the High School and the Academy. It was agreed that the morning after a certain date the one whose flag was flying then, could have their flag floating freely in the air each day for the coming year. This was understood by everyone.

It was a beautiful night the stars shone brightly, not even a leaf stirred when the boys from the Neston school started on their short trip on the water to the Island. The water was calm. In the distance they could see the island, for from shore to shore was not more than a mile and a half.

They arrived at the Island in safty, and expected to see their rivals but none was to be seen. The boys scrambled about and securely picked their way through the vines until they reached the pole. The tall flag pole stood out as plainly against the sky as the bean stalk that Jack climbed, There was no flag flying at that time.

The boys stood in a large group thinking as hard and as fast as they could, what they should do, until one boy thought of the can of grease that was in the boat. It was agreed that this boy was the fastest runner and could get the can of grease the speediest, so he started on a brisk run leaving the others watching with eager eyes for their rivals.

After securing a fine hiding place, near the flag pole they came back and waited for their "fastest runner." At last in a distant they could see something black coming.

"Do you suppose it can be some wild animal?" said one of the boys.

"It could be possible," was the answer.

"Did anyone bring his gun?" was the next question.

"No," was the prompt reply.

They could not climb any trees and be in safty because the trees were not very tall, mostly all stumps. By this time the black figure was near enough for the boys to see that it was a Neston boy.

"Boys, boys," he cried when he was in speaking distance, "our rivals are on their way."

"Be quick and give me the grease and the flag," said the smallest boy in the crowd. After tying the flag around his waist and the pail of grease tied on his arm he climbed the pole and fastened the flag to the rings, When he descended he gave the pole a liberal coat of grease. It seemed a long time to the anxious crowd below, before he reached the ground.

Meanwhile the Crayton boys were coming nearer and nearer but they had not seen the Neston boy ascend the pole. When they came within a few rods from it, one boy said, "Ah, they have their flag up," and they laughed at the attempt. As they were coming they did not know that the Neston boy's eyes were upon them One boy of the Crayton gang tried to ascend the pole but only a few feet from the ground when he slipped back Just then the Neston boys pounced upon them. The fight was short, as it was a total surprise to the Academy boys and they were soon overpowered and their flag torn to pieces. This was the first time the Neston boys had won, Both gave their "yells" and parted.

Garnets for Sandpaper.

Grandpa recollects when the garnet, a simple and lovely stone, was regarded as precious and worn generally in beautiful, old-fashioned jewelry. Grandma's attire was not complete without the big breastpin, ring or earrings which her daughters then were glad to borrow and finally to inherit. Now the garnet has become so common and non-precious there is none to do it honor, and it is ground into fine powder for the making of high-class sandpaper.

Critical Moment.

At the beginning of the Civil war men who knew little about military tactics were sometimes temporarily in command of small bodies of the troops which flocked into Washington, and it is said that Senator Henry Wilson of Massachusetts, afterward vice-president of the United States, was for a time assigned to the captaincy of a company of recruits from his native state. He assisted in drilling them to the best of his ability, but one afternoon, as he marched at their head up Pennsylvania avenue, he met his Waterloo. He had been getting along very well and was beginning to feel quite proud of the proficiency of his men, when he suddenly, realized that the coping and fence extending south from the treasury building was right in his forward patch. He could not think of the order which would swing his command into Fifteenth street, and thereby avoid the obstacle. Nearer and nearer the company approached; the men were almost upon his heels, when in desperation he shouted: "Come round like a gate!" and the situation was saved.

SOMETHING TO CONSIDER

The Mayor of Adrian in speaking before the prayer meeting of the Presbyterian church recently, made a strong plea for Christian workers in politics. Mr. Chase recommended that Christian people take more interest in the affairs of the nation, with the ultimate object of purifying and making good. "To many people hold up their hands at politics as the Jews did at those afflicated with leprsy, and cry unclean, unclean," making no effort toward doing their part to cleanse the unclean thing. By faith and works even politics can be made as pure as the churches, and help in the good work of Salvation.

Marines.

Marines—soldiers serving on shipboard—date back to the year 1664, when an order in council, dated October 16, authorized 1,200 English soldiers to be raised and formed into a regiment. More regiments were later formed, and by 1759 the marines numbered 18,000 men. In the latter years of the French wars they numbered 32,000. The marines are today a feature of every navy, and in most countries officers of the marines are equal in rank with those in the army and navy.

Annual Meeting

District Convention of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church

ADRIAN MAY 7-8-9

The twenty-first annual meeting of Detroit Conference Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will meet in Adrian this week beginning today and and last over Thursday. The meeting is being conducted along institute lines and this afternoon will be auxiliary session for the consideration of practical methods in business, study, and social life. The whole session gives promise of much interest to all.

All churches are cordially invited to be present at this meeting. Especially the missionary societies of the churches.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

Mothers' Day is becoming more and more observed in the churches throughout the United States, and this year it will be celebrated on May 12. A large portion of the people of Michigan are looking to the clergymen of the State to say some words of encouragement on this occasion in behalf of the women who are working for the ballot and use their influence to further the cause of justice and progress.

Miss Belle Kearney, a prominent Mississippi woman who is traveling in Oregon, writes: "The women of this State are working to carry the amendent for equal suffrage, which will be submitted to the voters of the commonwealth next next fall. In their efforts they have not only the sympathy of men who are advanced in thought but those men are organizing societies among themselves for the sole purpose of making sentiment for the enfranchisement of the women of Oregon. Victory seems certain for the cause here."

As the result of a petition signed by 478 students at Vassar College and sent to President Taylor, a mass meeting for open discussion of woman suffrage was held in the large assembly hall last week. The meeting was opened by a student from Wisconsin, where a suffrage campaign is being waged.

This is a pure bone ash, manufactured from phosphorous, mined in Tennessee, combined with silica and soda ash. These three ingredients are mixed with water and put through a mixer and then baked in ovens at 3000 degrees Farenheit for 30 minutes. It takes 12 hours for this to cool, after which it is ground and passed over 4 screens, to get different sizes.

This food will take the place of oyster shell, stone grits, charcoal, beef scraps, and will cut down your grain feeding one-third. Hen-et-a contains a large amount of phosphate which is necessary to sustain the life of the small chick.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of Mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street, said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e pre ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

FOUR PERISH IN FIRE

Children are Victims of Blaze at Rochester, Mich.

Mother Is Seriously Burned and the Chief of the Fire Department Is Badly Injured.

Rochester, Mich., April 27. — Four children of Mrs. Charles Slack are dead, the mother is seriously burned and Fire Chief Porten is painfully injured as the result of a fire which destroyed the Slack home here.

The flames were caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove. The dead are: Charles Slack, aged twelve years; Baby Slack, two months; Bert, seven years, and Leo, five years.

The first two named were burned to death in the house; the others died in a Detroit hospital, where they were taken after the fire

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E, A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

AWARD PLANTS TO CHILDREN

Richmond Citizens Pay for Making the City Beautiful.

Richmond, Ind., May 6.—Flowering plants were awarded more than two thousand school children for their energies in connection with the annual "cleaning up" day. The awards went to school children who devoted at least three and one-half hours to work at their homes, cleaning yards or working at flower beds.

Each child also was made a member of the local league, which is leading in the work of cleaning the city. Hundreds of loads of debris were taken from alleys by street cleaning forces.

Car Turns Over; 21 Hurt.

Guilford, Conn., May 6.—A trolley car went off the rails on what is known as Long Hill on the Shore Line Electric railway while running at high speed and careened almost completely. Nearly all the twenty-one passengers on board were injured, many of them seriously.

which duty was fulfilled, incidentally, with the fine tact of a Richelieu.

In May there was a still greater accession of work at the factory. In addition, the first of June was to open with a twenty-four hour race at Beach track, and Lestrange was entered for it. Excitement was in the air; Dick came in the house only to eat and sleep.

The day before the race, Mr. Ffrench walked into the room where his niece was reading.

"I want to see Bailey," he said briefly. "Do you wish to drive me down to the factory, or shall I have Anderson bring around the limousine?"

"Please let us drive," she exclaimed, rising with alacrity. "I have not been to the factory for months."

"Very good. You are looking well, Emily, of late."

Surprised, a soft color swept the face she turned to him.

"I am well. Dear, I think we are all better this spring."

"Perhaps," said Ethan Ffrench. His bitter gray eyes passed deliberately over the large room with all its traces of a family life extending back to pre-Colonial times, but he said no more.

It was an exquisite morning, too virginal for June, too richly warm for May. When the two exchanged the sunny road for the factory office, a north room none too light, it was a moment before their dazzled eyes perceived no one was present. This was Bailey's private office, and its owner had passed into the room beyond.

"I will wait," conceded Mr. Ffrench, dismissing the boy who had ushered them in. "Sit down, Emily; Bailey will return directly, no doubt."

But Emily had already sat down, for she knew the voice speaking beyond the half-open door, and that the long-prevented meeting was now imminent.

"It will not do," Lestrange was stating definitely. "It should be reinforced."

"It's always been strong enough," Bailey's slower tones objected. "For years. It's not a thing likely to break."

"Not likely to break? Look at last year's record, Mr. Bailey, and tell me that. A broken steering-knuckle killed Brook in Indiana; another sent Little to the hospital in Massachusetts, the same thing wrecked the leader at the last Beach race and dashed him through the fence. Do you know what it means to the driver of a machine hurling itself along the narrow verge of destruction, when the steering-wheel suddenly turns useless in his grasp? Can you feel the sick helplessness, the confronting of death, the compressed second before the crash? Is it worth while to risk it for a bit of costless steel?"

The clear realism of the picture forced a pause, filled by the dull roar and throb through the machinery-crowded building.

"They were not our cars that broke, any of them," Bailey insisted.

"Not our cars, no. But the steering-knuckle of my own machine broke under my hands last March, on the road, and if I had been on a curve instead of a straight stretch there would have been a wreck. As it was, I brought her to a stop in the ditch. There is no other thing that may not leave a fighting chance after it breaks but this leaves absolutely none. I know, you both know, that the steering-wheel is the only weapon in the driver's grasp. If it fails him, he goes out and his mechanician with him."

Emily paled, shrinking. She remembered the road under the maples and Lestrange's laughing face as he leaned breathless across his useless wheel. That was what it had meant, then, the lightly treated episode!

"You'd better fix it like he wants it," advised Dick's disturbed tones. "Remember, he's got to drive the car Friday and Saturday, Bailey, not us."

"It's not alone for my racer I'm speaking, but for every car that leaves the shop," Lestrange caught him up. "I'm not flinching; I've driven the car before and I will again. It may hold for ever, that part, but I've tested it and it's a weak point—take the warning for what it's worth."

There was a movement as if he rose with the last word. Emily laid her hand on the arm of the chair, turning her excited dark eyes on her uncle. Surely if ever Mr. Ffrench was to meet his manager, this was the moment; when Lestrange's ringing argument was still in their ears, his splendid force of earnestness still vibrant in the atmosphere. And suddenly she wanted them to meet, passionately wanted Ethan Ffrench's liking for this man.

"Uncle," she began. "Uncle——"

But it was not Lestrange's light step that halted on the threshold.

"Why, I didn't know—" exclaimed Bailey. "Excuse me, Mr. Ffrench, they didn't tell me you were down."

He glanced over his shoulder; as he pulled shut the door Emily fancied she heard an echo, as if the two young men left the next room. Bitterly disappointed, she sank back.

"That was your manager with you?" Mr. Ffrench frigidly inquired.

"Yes; he went up-stairs to see how the new drill is acting." Bailey pulled out a handkerchief and rubbed his brow. "Excuse me, it's warm. Yes, he wants me to strengthen a knuckle —he's spoken considerable about it. I guess he's right; better too much than too little."

"I do not see that follows. I should imagine that you understood building chassis better than this racing driver. You had best consult outside experts in construction before making a change."

"Uncle!" Emily cried.

"There's a twenty-four hour race starts tomorrow night," Bailey suggested uneasily. "It's easy fixed, and we might be wrong."

"We have always made them this way?"

"Yes, but—"

"Consult experts, then. I do not like your manager's tone; he is too assuming. Now let me see those papers."

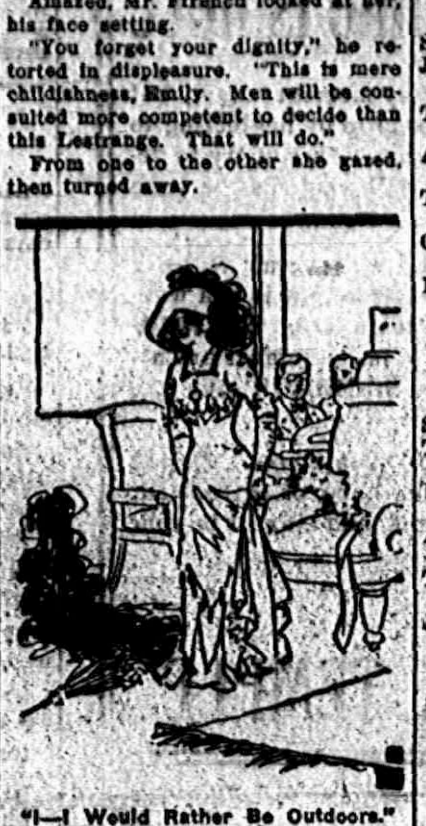
Emily's parasol slipped to the floor with a sharp crash as she stood up, quite pale and shaken.

"Uncle, Mr. Lestrange knows," she appealed. "You heard him say what would happen—please, please let it be fixed."

Amazed, Mr. Ffrench looked at her, his face setting.

"You forget your dignity," he retorted in displeasure. "This is mere childishness, Emily. Men will be consulted more competent to decide than this Lestrange. That will do."

From one to the other she gazed, then turned away.



"I—I Would Rather Be Outdoors."

"I will wait out in the cart," she said. "I—I would rather be outdoors."

Dick Ffrench was up-stairs, standing with Lestrange in one of the narrow aisles between lines of grimly efficient machines that bit or cut their way through the steel and aluminum fed to them, when Rupert came to him with a folded visiting card.

"Miss Ffrench sent it," was the explanation. "She's sitting out in her horse-motor car, and she called me off the track to ask me to demean myself by acting like a messenger boy. All right?"

"All right," said Dick, running an astonished eye over the card.

"No answer?"

"No answer."

"Then I'll hurry back to my embroidery. I'm several laps behind in my work already."

"See here, Lestrange," Dick began, as the mechanician departed, sitting down on a railing beside a machine steadily engaged in notching steel disks into gear-wheels.

"Don't do that!" Lestrange exclaimed sharply. "Get up, Ffrench."

"It's safe enough."

"It's nothing of the kind. The least slip—"

"Oh, well," he reluctantly rose, "if you're going to get fussy. Read what Emily sent up."

Lestrange accepted the card with a faint flicker of expression.

"Dick, uncle is making the steering-knuckle wait for expert opinion," the legend ran, in pencil. "Have Mr. Bailey strengthen Mr. Lestrange's car, anyhow. Do not let him race so."

Near them two men were engaged in babbitting bearings, passing ladlefuls of molten metal carelessly back and forth, and splashing hissing drops over the floor; at them Lestrange gazed in silence, after reading, the card still in his hand.

"Well?" Dick at last queried.

"Have Mr. Bailey do nothing at all," was the deliberate reply. "There is an etiquette of subordination, I believe—this is Mr. Ffrench's factory. I've done my part and we'll think no more of the matter. I may be wrong. But I am more than grateful to Miss Ffrench."

"That's all you're going to do?"

"Yes. I wish you would not sit there."

"I'm tired; I won't fall in, and I want to think. We've been a lot together this spring, Lestrange; I don't like this business about the steering-gear. Do you go down to the Beach tomorrow?"

"Tonight. Tomorrow I must put in practicing on the track. I would have been down today if there had not been so much to do here. Are you coming with me, or not until the evening of the start?"

Dick stirred uncomfortably.

"I don't want to come at all, thank you. I saw you race once."

"You had better get used to it," Lestrange quietly advised. "The day may come when there is no one to take your place. This factory will be yours and you will have to look after your own interests. I wish you would come down and represent the company at this race."

"I haven't the head for it."

"I do not agree with you."

Their eyes met in a long regard. Here, in the crowded room of workers, the ceaseless uproar shut in their conversation with a walled completeness of privacy.

"I'm not sure whether you know it, Lestrange, but you've got me all stirred up since I met you," the younger man confessed plaintively. "You're different from other fellows and you've made me different. I'd rather be around the factory than anywhere else I know, now. But honestly I like you too well to watch you race."

"I want you to come."

"I—"

One of the men with a vessel of white, heaving molten metal was trying to pass through the narrow aisle. Dick broke his sentence to rise in hasty avoidance, and his foot slipped in a puddle of oil on the floor.

It was so brief in happening that only the workman concerned saw the accident. As Dick fell backward, Lestrange sprang forward and caught him, fairly snatching him from the greedy teeth. There was the rending of fabric, a gasping sob from Dick, and reeling from the recoil Lestrange was sent staggering against a flying wheel next in line.

The workman set down his burden with a recklessness endangering further trouble, active too late.

"Mr. Lestrange!" he cried.

But Lestrange had already recovered himself, his right arm crossed with a scorched and bleeding bar where it had touched the glittering wheel, and the two young men were standing opposite each other in safety.

"You are not hurt?" was the first question.

"I? I ought to be, but I'm not. Come to a surgeon, Lestrange— Oh, you told me not to sit there!"

Lestrange glanced down at the surface-wound, then quickly back at the two pallid faces.

"Go on to your work, Peters," he directed. "I'm all right." And as the man slowly obeyed, "Now will you take my advice and come to the race with me, Ffrench?"

BRONCHITIS

To Whom It May Concern

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910—"I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health, and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended, and from the second bottle I commenced to improve. I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making, and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles—not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try Vinol. If you don't think it helps you, we will return your money.

Amended Rivers and Harbors Bill Carries $32,000,000.

Washington, May 6.—Four hundred thousand dollars for the fourth lock at the Soo, is called for by the rivers and harbors bill as agreed to by the senate committee on commerce. The bill has not been reported to the senate, and may not be for some days, but the committee has finished its task of tacking on amendments to the $24,000,000 bill passed by the house, and as reported to the senate, the amended bill will carry $32,000,000.

The biggest item secured by Congressman Young was $200,000 for starting work on the fourth Soo lock. Engineers have recommended $400,000 for this work and Mr. Young fought for the full amount, but was forced to rest content with half. In the senate committee Senator Smith was aided by a number of senators appreciative of the importance of the merchant marine and had the item raised to the full amount. Whether it will be cut down to the original $200,000 when the bill goes to conference, or will be compromised at $300,000 is a problem.

STEEL TRIAL IS ON

Taking of Evidence in the Case Opens in New York.

In New York city the taking of testimony in the federal suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation was begun and probably will continue for a month.

Hearings also will be held in other cities and probably it will be as much as a year before the United States circuit court at Trenton, N. J., where the siut was filed, will take up the evidence for judicial consideration.

BROODING WOMAN CREMATES HERSELF

Pour Two Gallons of Gasoline on Flour and Ignites It.

Goes to a Neighbor's Barn to Commit the Deed—Structure and Contents, Including live Stock, Is Destroyed.

Hastings, Mich., May 6.—Brooding over imaginary troubles, Mrs. Lena Mast, aged forty-five years, stole quietly from her home in West Woodland, took a two-gallon gasoline can across the road to a barn owned by John Geiger, emptied the contents on the floor, touched a match to it and burned herself to death, together with the building, three cows, a calf and the contents of the barn. Seeing the barn ablaze at about 3 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Mast's sons went to her room to inform her, but she was not there.

They assisted in getting the horses from the burning barn, but did not couple the fire with their mother's disappearance until they found the cover of the gasoline can in the road later in the day. They found also a note indicating she was deranged mentally. A search of the ruins was then instituted and portions of her body were found. Mrs. Mast spent a short time as an inmate of the Kalamazoo asylum for the insane about a year ago. Her husband died some time ago, but three children survive her.

OFFERS LIBRARY DONATION

Clarence M. Burton, Native of Hastings, Mich., Stirs Interest.

Hastings, Mich., May 8. — Hastings will have a public library if the citizens support a project started by Clarence M. Burton of Detroit, who has offered to donate a considerable sum for a site. The offer has been placed in the hands of a committee of citizens for consideration.

Mr. Burton, who is a prominent citizen of Detroit, and who has a national reputation as an authority on Michigan history, was born in Hastings. He is the son of the late Dr. Charles H. Burton, capitalist, California "forty-niner" and founder of the Battle Creek Journal and Hastings Banner.

Dr. Burton, who was one of the most scholarly men who ever lived in Hastings, offered several years before his death about ten years ago, to denote a site for a library in Hastings, but no interest was shown in the project. Several years ago Andrew Carnegie offered a library, but the city council refused to conform to his terms.

Considerable interest has been aroused over Mr. Burton's offer, and the citizens will undoubtedly take advantage of it. It has been decided to call it the Burton public library.

REPORT ON TITANIC PROBE

It Will Be Compensive and Fix Responsibility for Disaster.

The U. S. senate committee in Washington which is investigating the Titanic disaster has concluded its hearing and is considering the formulation of its report.

Senator Smith, the chairman, returned from New York, where he has been pursuing the inquiry. He says the report will be comprehensive relating to this marine disaster and will fix responsibility. Sweeping recommendations for legislation for the preservation of life at sea will probably be made.

Senator Smith said: "The inquiry has been closed. I don't think there will be any further public hearings. The matters that I took up in New York were important and had to do directly with the mechanical sufficiency of some features of the ship. I think the record has also been cleared up with relation to the conflict in testimony concerning discipline on the Titanic."

TAFT GETS MAJORITY

Returns from Massachusetts Primaries Practically Complete.

The very latest returns from the primary are complete with the exception of the vote in three small towns. They show that Taft led Roosevelt by 3,973, while Clark led Wilson by 19,021 in the preferential vote of the people for their selections for the Republican and Democratic nominations for president.

The vote for Taft was 87,117; for Roosevelt, 83,144; for Clark, 33,491; for Wilson, 14,470.

Eight delegates-at-large pledged to Roosevelt were chosen by about 8,300 plurality over the Taft slate.

When Theodore Roosevelt learned of the result in Massachusetts he renounced his claim to the eight delegates at large, saying that as Taft had carried the state teh delegates should vote for him.

APPALLING LOSS OF LIFE IN THE SOUTH

Flood Said to Have Killed Thousands in Louisiana.

Rains Soak Mud Banks and Weaken Them to Advance of River—Motor Fleet Engaged in Work of Rescue.

A loss of life unparalleled in the history of the big state of Louisiana has resulted from the floods now sweeping several parts of the state, and the worst is believed yet to come.

How numerous the dead are still is a matter of guess work, but there seems small chance to believe it will be short of several thousands. Harrowing stories told by refugees picked up by rescue boats and brought to New Roads, Baton Rouge and other places of comparative safety show that thousands are marooned and with little chance of escape. What is more, the refugees say many of these necessarily will die of hunger and exposure.

In the sugar country the population is dense. Some plantations employ several thousand men each. A majority of these are negroes and live in crowded qdarters. They are ignorant and superstitious and in order to keep them at work when the rivers first began to rise, it was necessary to issue frequent reassuring statements. Now, however, so firmly have such ideas become implanted in the minds of the blacks that the latter refuse to budge and, even in the face of the approaching waters, many refuse to leave their homes.

It is a period of great strain on the weakened levees all over the state. Great downpours of rain soaked the mud banks and discouraged the workers. State and federal aid is being extended wherever possible, but it avails little to strengthen the failing hearts of the tired strugglers.

The only break of consequence during the daylight hours was on the west bank of the Atchafulaya, at Elba, menacing the town of Melville. Water has begun backing in behind the great Morgan sea levee, creating a new danger. This water is from the Torras crevasse. It is fast undermining the dikes.

The Torras crevasse has developed into a great disaster as a result of this break alone. Many lives probably have been lost, while the property damage will run high up into the millions.

What the exact loss of life has been known.

The motor boat fleet engaged in rescue operations is small and the boatmen were kept so busy that they did not have time to go to the places where the loss of life was reported to have occurred to investigate.

Information was received from Lettsworth that fifty persons were crowded into one house west of that place and were in imminest danger of being drowned. The house had been washed off its foundations and was floating around in the water. Boats were sent to the place, but they have not returned.

A courier brought another message that a score of persons were huddled together on top of a barn several miles west of Batchelor, but there were not enough boats to reach them before dark. They were ringing bells and shouting to attract the attention of rescue parties.

EIGHT DIE IN WRECK

Confederate Veterans' Special Derailed on Trestle.

Eight men were killed when the first section of the Confederate Veterans' special train, leaving New Orleans and loaded with veterans en route to the reunion at Macon, Ga., was wrecked near East Abuchie.

Of the eight killed three were veterans and twenty others were severely injured. The engine was derailed on a trestle and carried five coaches into the ditch with it.

The engineer, W. A. Wood, and Fireman Cicero Jones, are among the four members of the train crew killed. A man supposed to be George Reid, a railroad fireman, also lost his life.

Save 50 Cows in Big Fire.

At La Grange, Ill., a fire destroyed two buildings of the dairy farm of George H. Hess. The loss was $5,000. Two other farm buildings were threatened. Fifty cows were in the buildings destroyed, but employes rescued them.

Stitches May Save Sight.

At Sandusky, Ohio, the eyesight of Ralph Bock, an amateur baseball player, is expected to be saved by an operation in which a surgeon took two stitches in the eyeball. Bock was struck in the eye by a batted stone.

Thomas C. Dawson Dead.

Thomas Cleveland Dawson, resident diplomatic officer of the state department, died at Washington. He was forty-six years old and a native of Hudson, Wis. Mrs. Dawson and several children survive.

ANN ARBOR — Two passenger coaches of a south-bound Ann Arbor train, left the rails near this city and tore up the roadbed for several hundred feet. No persons were injured. The locomotive and baggage car did not leave the rails. Spreading rails caused the wreck. Passengers were transferred to a train sent up from Toledo.

YALE — Bart McNulty, who was a retired hotelkeeper, died at his home on North Main street after an illness of several months. He was seventy-four years old, coming to this city about twenty-five years ago, when he purchased the Hotel De Martin, which he ran successfully until five years ago, when he sold out to F. J. Swift.

The young man who moves in church circles will come around all right.

MICHIGAN

James Therlo, Iron River, finds Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a family medicine that helped all the family, so he always keeps it on hand. "Both my children and I were troubled with bad coughs and we used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It certainly cured us and I recommend it as a good cough and cold cure."

D. W. Hiller, 801 E. Court St., Flint had a severe attack of kidney trouble and says: "There was a constant feeling of distress with painful kidney action. Foley Kidney Pills cured me completely, dispelling all kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness disappeared and I slept soundly again. I heartily endorse Foley Kidney Pills. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Speak not of your enemies, but be sure to speak to your enemies when you meet them.

Escapes an Awful Fate

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery, But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now,', Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung trouble. Every bottle guaranteed, 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at C. A. Wright & Son.

Flattery is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

Mrs. Ida Decker, 74 Carlyle St., Battle Creek, had all the painful symptoms of severe kidney trouble. Her kidneys were congested, eyesight blurred, slept poorly, was nervous, tired out, and all run down. After taking Foley's Kidney Pills she say: "The sick headaches came no more, I slept soundly, was free from dizziness, and my kidneys and bladder stopped bothering me. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and freed me of much misery." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

There are people who are so busy having a good time that trouble can't touch them.

The Demons of the Swamp

are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails: also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Alex Destinon. 9C Lake St., Muskegon, desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Heaven never rates a man above nor below his true value.

Helps A Judge in Bad Fix

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was completely cured." Cures burns, boil, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

The man who has no illusions is about ready to take the count.

SUFFRAGISTS MARCH IN MONSTER PARADE

Fifteen Thousand Women In Line in New York.

Chinese Women Have Dragon Flags—Kindergarten Branch of Procession Arranged by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

One of the features of the great parade of the New York suffragists was a men's division, made up of about 1,500 marchers of the Men's League for Equal Suffrage, representing fifty different professions and trades.

There were 15,000 women in the parade, most of them wearing the same style of hat. Many carried white umbrellas lettered with "Votes for Women" and other slogans.

The men marched in military formation in companies of 100, eight men in a squad.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who marched at the head of a band of 500 or more women, was the only marcher who had made arrangements for mothers and babies—a kindergarden branch of the procession. She welcomed in her division a v mothers who were not able to leave their babies at home.

Besides the Chinese women who marched in the procession to represent the enfranchised women, carrying banners bearing the Chinese dragon, there was a little band of make believe Chinese women.

MRS. O.H.P. BELMONT
COPYRIGHT BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

One of the important banners carried in this division bore the words: "Light From China For Our New York Legislators."

Four young women who carried this banner wore Chinese mandarin coats and caps.

Mrs. Frederick Nathan instructed each marcher in her division to carry two sandwiches, as the marching hour was latte and she did not wish them to faint on the way.

There were some women on horseback at the head of the line. Toward the end was seen a score of women automobilists. Miss Inez Milholland and Miss Roberta Hill headed two of the divisions.

The parade was followed by a mass meeting at Carnegie hall at which all of the speakers were women.

NEWSPAPERS TIED UP

Trouble Between Chicago Publications and the Pressmen.

All of the large Chicago newspapers were completely tied up by failure to reach an agreement with the union pressmen. The publishers have practically declared a lock-out on the union.

Notices posted in the pressrooms of the American, Journal, News, Post, Tribune, Inter Ocean, Record Herald and Examiner state that the publishers have terminated their contract with the union. No issues of any of the papers were put our during the afternoon. The only paper which made its appearance was the Daily Socialist, which does not belong to the Newspaper Publishers' association.

The trouble arose over the expiration of the contract of the pressmen with the Hearst newspapers of the United States. It is understood that all of the pressmen on the Hearst papers in New York, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles are also affected by the trouble.

According to the binding agreement among the publishers the other papers suspended publication in sympathy with the Hearst papers.

RESCUE FLOOD VICTIMS

Fifteen Thousand Persons Are Being Cared for at Rescue Camps.

Abandoning hope of repairing the breaks in the Mississippi levees, about Torras, La., government and state officials centered their efforts toward rescuing the thousands rendered homeless by the flood and providing food and shelter for the refugees.

A dozen special trains have been rushed to the scene from Baton Rouge and other points, and blacks, whites and live stock are being loaded into cars and a dash made for high ground. Government rations are being given out at Baton Rouge and it is estimated that a total of 15,000 persons are being cared for there and at other rescue camps. Thousands will be added to this number.

AN UP-TO-DATE ROMANCE

Mt. Clemens Girl, 16, Disappears to Wed Railroad President.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., 8. — Announcement of the marriage on April 11 last, of Miss Margaret St. Aubin, a sixteen-year-old school girl of this city, to Lawrence E. Miller, president of a New Jersey railroad, just received here, explains the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the girl.

Some time ago Miss St. Aubin, a student in the Lincoln school, saw an advertisement in a matrimonial journal. Correspondence followed and the affair culminated by the girl deserting school and without saying a word to her friends went to Detroit, where she met Miller by arrangement and they were wedded in Windsor.

The disappearance was mysterious, but was carefully suppressed until the other day, when cards were received from Mrs. Miller announcing the marriage.

Miller is forty-eight, a widower, and president of the New York and Long Branch railroad. They will reside at Marlboro. N. J.

LAWRENCE A. BROWN

Lawrence A. Brown of Milwaukee, passed away Monday morning May 6, of heart trouble, in his 46th year.

The body was brought to Tecumseh Tuesday and the funeral was held from the home of Mrs. Mary Jolly Thursday at one o'clock under the auspices of the K. of P.

DEPUTY TEACHOUT AND THE DOGS

Deputy Fred Teachout was the victim of a peculiar accident Wednesday while out driving with his pet bulldog by his side. The dog belonging to F. S. Anderson was evidently jealous of the attention to his sworn enemy and attempted to take the seat himself.

It was all done so sudden that Mr. Teachout lost control of his horse which upset the buggy, dogs and all In the melee Mr. Teachout received slight bite on one hand as a reminder that the dogs were also there. The buggy had one broken wheel and the dogs went their way.

CROP REPORT

May 1. 1912

The condition of wheat is not very favorable, the average being 63 in the State, 53 in the Southern counties, 68 Central, 79 in the Northern and 92 in the Upper Peninsula.

The fruit report indicates the severe winter weather and the backward spring has badly damaged the peach trees and buds, the average prospect for peaches in the Michigan fruit belt being 21 per cent.

Boost Day In Adrian

May 1, 1912

SCORE 5-4 IN FAVOR OF ADRIAN

The Boost Day for the Adrian Baseball team was ushered in with bright sunshine, the Lions were at their best hoping for another victory over the Jackson team.

The parade was a fine one led by Imperial Band. Arrived at the park the band played, the rooters rooted, Sam Laroque then announced the batteries, Mayor Chase being one. Mayor Chase threw the ball with steady aim across the platter and Pitcher Hinkle relieved him taking the ball in his hand. Shortstop Mc Hale of the Jackson Club stepped to his place bat in hand, and the game begun. It was a close game resulting in a score of 5 and 4 in favor of Adrian. The Lions were elated over their second victory over the Jackson team.

The day was a great one, in opening up the season for the Lions and was all that could be desired, with pleasant weather and an enthusiastic crowd of fans, and people in general.

The opening day of Baseball in Jackson Wednesday, was celebrated with a game between the Lions of Adrian and the Jackson team, resulting in a score of 5 and 7, in favor of Adrian.

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind piles yield to Doan's Ointment Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. Druggists all sell it.

Doan's Regulets cure constipation without griping, nausea, nor any weakening effect. Ask your druggist for them. 25 cents per box.

For any pain from top to toe, from any cause, apply Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Pain can't stay where it is used.

LIBRARY NEWS

There are still some fiction catalogs for sale at ten cents each.

The record month of the winter was November, when 1807 books were issued for home use, March was a close second with 1799.

"Side Line Poultry Keeping" is now available to those interested in the subject.

Since March 1907, 1800 people have taken out cards for library use. Your co-operation in making this opportunity known to all, especially newcomers, will be appreciated.

Rev. E. A. Fisher of Clinton, has placed a few books on Catholicism in the Library.

The Lucuis Lilley collection of Michigan birds has been placed in the Library, where it is attracting considerable attention and giving a great deal of pleasure. The West Branch school children have been brought by their teachers to see the birds.

The Civic Improvement Society have taken up the matter of beautifying the interior of the Library. The first step was made last week when the picture called "The Children's Hour" was hung in the children's room. It is both pleasing and appropriate,

Apropos of the recent gifts to our Library, it might be said that public support does not make private benefactions out of the place The efficiency of the Library may still be greatly increased and it is an investment with the richest returns in the way of giving pleasure and making life in Tecumseh worth living.

HARLOW SMITH

In An Accident Saturday Night

Harlow Smith was the victim of an accident Saturday night while on his way home from Birdsall, where he had been to purchase a horse which he was leading behind his buggy. An automobile struck the rig throwing Harlow to the ground, and partly demolishing the buggy. The man in the auto did not stop but kept straight ahead at a rapid pace. Mr. Smith says the lights were dim and the machine had no body, being undoubtedly a tester. As yet there is no clue to the driver. Aside from being lame Mr. Smith was not seriously injured.

A LITTLE BLAZE

What might have been a serious disaster but proved to be only a slight blaze, was the cause of some excitement at Prof. Wallace Sanitarium in Adrian, Wednesday.

A workman was employed in putting some tar on certain portions of the roof, and was heating the same on a gasoline stove. The man carelessly left the fire burning while he went to his dinner, and a bucket of the tar standing near became ignited and the cloud of smoke caused the fire department to make a quick run to the scene. The fire was soon extinguished with but little damage.

Prof. Wallace from his vantage point on the roof, thanked the assembled crowd for their timely assistance and informed them that the Sanitarium was open for inspection he was soundly applauded at the close of his speech.

Obituary

HANNAH ASSENETH HAINES

Born in Livingston County State N. Y. July 9th, 1826. Passed from life May 2, 1912, being 85 years 9 months and 23 days old.

While she was but a child she with her parents moved overland to Huron county near Sandusky, Ohio, 1840, there she met and was married to James B. Frost in December 3, 1842. Two children were born, one dying in infancy, the other daughter, Adiline Frost, resides with Mrs. Mellon her half sister.

The plague cholera that swept this country in 1849, took her husband from her side.

In February 17th 1852 she married Henry Haines an Englishman and miller by trade.

In 1855 she came with her husband from Ohio to Lenawee County Michigan, her husband Henry Haines died April 4th 1887 at Tecumseh Mich.

Three sons and one daughter came to brighten the home of this union the oldest son dying in 1864 at the age of 9 years.

Generally of a cheerful nature she h s taken the vicissitudes of life in a quiet way, and in her declining years she looked to her daughter as her comfort and consolation It has always been the thought and life work of the daughter to add to the comfort and pleasures of life to the mother.

She leaves two sons, Henry H. Haines, Edwin J. Haines and one daughter Mary Isabelle Mellon, besides the fore said daughter Adline Frost, four grand children Elmer E. Mellon, Vivian V. Matthews and Winifred W. Mellon and Mildred C. Haines also three great grand children and numerous friends to mourn her death She being the last of a family of eight children to cross the river of death.

How we loved our darling mother,
Well she watched our infant years,
Guarded us when danger threatened,
Drove away our childish fear's.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our kind neighbors and friends for their aid and sympathy during our recent bereavment.

Wm. B. Mellon and family
E. J. Haines and family.

AMUSEMENTS FROM THE CHURCH STANDPOINT

At the general conference of the M. E. church held in Minneapolis, last week, the question was discussed relative to the keeping of the rules as in the time of John Wesley.

1858 out of 2057 district Superintendents and nearly all the bishops recommend the abolishment of the rules relative to amusements leaving it to the conscience of the church members to decide, whether it be good or evil, only keeping before them the injunction of John Wesley to avoid "such diversion as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus."

The bishops however stipulated that the church should not be indifferent on the subject, but return to a consistent treatment of this matter with their people, Americans are to far advanced to be restricted by the church rules as laid down year ago, when the country was new.

Church Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Ladies of St. Peter's church held at the home of Mrs. F. Wallinger Tuesday afternoon the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Nellie Adamson.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. Ella Hardenburg.
Treas.—Miss Edith Phelps.

"That May 20, 1912 at seven thirty o'clock P. M. this Council will meet to hear any objections which may be presented to the vacating of said streets and alleys, which objections may be filed with the clerk, in writing prior to said meeting.

"That notice of said meeting to hear any objections shall be given by the Village clerk, by publishing a copy of this resolution in each the Tecumseh Herald and Tecumseh News on the 17th day of May, 1912 and the 10th day of May 1912,"

B. S Temple,
Village Clerk.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAIR HEALTH

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat-band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for the scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that we think that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00 Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Tecumseh only at our store—The Rexall Store, B. J. Pulver.

The teaching of Agriculture in Tecumseh High Schools is attracting much attention throughout the country. Julius E. Warner, Supervisor of rural schools and agricultural education in Massachusetts visited our schools last week and decided this to be one of the most practical pieces of school work along the line of agriculture that he had found in any school he had visited in the United States.

What might have been a serious accident was narrowly averted by the presence of mind of the driver Jack Eccles, who with a party composed of Mr. and Mrs. Will Eccles, Mrs. C. F. Clark and Mrs. Alex Kennedy, while taking a trip to Ann Arbor and going at full speed, the steering gear broke. Mr. Eccles however stopped the car almost instantly. Mrs. Eccles was the only one at all hurt, in an attempt to open the door she fell from the car as it lurched to the roadside, but her injuries were very slight.

With the prize stories published in the last issue of the Tecumseh Herald the contest closes for the school year. It has not only been a pleasure but also quite interesting to publish these stories and to notice the interest taken by the children in this work. As an incentive to work the Herald feels that this contest has been a great success, as well as along educational lines. Should there be another contest in the fall, it is hoped there will be a lively scramble in the grades for first place. Thanking those who have so kindly helped in judging on the merits of these stories, and everyone for the interest shown,—The Editor.

Corn Planters

We stick to one make of Corn Planter, the old original Black Hawk. We have sold these planters for years and will guarantee them to be strong, accurate, simple and satisfactory in every respect. More Black Hawk planters in use around here than all the others together. 2-3-4 kernels in a hill by simply moving a foot lever, fertilizer or plain and many features that recommend them. See sample and let us take your order.

Corn Cultivators

When you cultivate you want to do a good clean job as easily as possible. An Oliver rides like a $30 leather rocker and gets the weeds. Balance frame, horse lift, dust caps and oilers, etc. Nearly 40 sold in last 3 years shows their popularity. Get one and see for yourself.

Hen-et-a Poultry Food.

Something new in an egg producer. Start your little chicks on our fine food and notice the difference in results. Your chicks will grow faster and be much stronger. Come and let us show it to you. This is a pure bone ash, manufactured from phosphorous, mined in Tennessee, combined with silica and soda ash. These three ingredients are mixed with water and put through a mixer and then baked in ovens at 8000 degrees Farenheit for 30 minutes. It takes 12 hours for this to cool, after which it is ground and passed over 4 screens, to get different sizes.

This food will take the place of oyster shell, stone grits, charcoal, beef scraps, and will cut down your grain feeding one-third. Hen-et-a contains a large amount of phosphate which is necessary to sustain the life of the small chick.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

What Texans Admire

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles. 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of December, A. D. 1908, executed by Helen M. Gibson, of Adrian, Lenawee County Michigan, to Katherine A. Stockwell, of Jackson, Jackson County, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Lenawee, in Liber 145 of mortgages, on page 622, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1908, at 8:10 o'clock A. D.

And whereas, the amou claimed to be due on said mortgages at the date of this notice is the sum of Five Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars ($575.00) of Principal and Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) of interest, and the further sum of Twenty Five Dollars ($25.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative:

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee, on the 27th day of June, A. D, 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the City of Adrian, in the County of Lenawee, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of land conveyed by Charles Butler and wife to Lorenzo Tabor on April 10th, 1863, by deed recorded in Liber 63, folios 41 and 42 of Lenawee County records, to which deed reference is made for a more particular description; thence southerly on west line of said land to the south line of a highway running east and west for a further place of beginning; thence southerly upon and along the west line of said land (as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor) Five Hundred and Five (505) feet more or less, and to the northeast corner of the land herein conveyed; thence southerly on and continuing on said west line fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less; thence east at right angles with the east line to the east line of the land so as aforesaid conveyed by Butler to Tabor, thence north on the east line of of said land fifty seven and one half (57½) feet more or less, thence west to place of beginning. Excepting and reserving land off the west side of said description occupied as a street. said lot being now situated on the east side of Tabor Street, Adrian Michigan, and being the e pr e i ises as conveyed by Arthur J. Walters and wife to Charles H. Crane, January 19th, 1899 and recorded in Liber 185 at page 358.

PETOSKEY—Just about one hour after returning home from a hospital, where he was an inmate three weeks suffering from heart disease, Captain Will Hurkett, forty-seven years old and for fourteen years keeper of the Petoskey breakwater light, shot himself in the head with a revolver and died instantly

LANSING — Benjamin Franklin Hall, Sr., aged seventy years, the dean of Michigan lumber dealers and a pioneer business man of Lansing, was stricken with acute auraemic poisoning at his home, dying in a few hours, although medical aid was summoned from Detroit.

ALPENA—John Murray, who had been an employe of the Huron Cement company, while crossing a siding was struck by an empty stone car, sustaining injuries from which he died. He was fifty-five years old and leaves a widow and two sons.

GRAND RAPIDS—Peter Shrouder, aged seventy-six years, an inmate of the Soldiers' home, died from injuries received by being struck by a street car. He lived with a nephew, Bruno Shrouder, in Saginaw before coming here.

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United Sates.

BRITISH TITANIC PROBE

Seafarers' Union Demand To Be Represented at Inquiry Granted.

At London, Eng., the demand of the Seafarers' union that it be permitted to be represented at the governmental Titanic inquiry, which had been held in abeyance, was granted by Lord Mersey, president of the court.

When the proceedings began Attorney General Isaacs formally opened the case, presenting the known facts.

FREIGHT HANDLERS QUIT

About Eight Thousand Are on Strike at Chicago Depots.

At Chicago about eight thousand freight handlers and clerks, employes of twenty-four railroads running into and out of Chicago including practically all of the trunk lines are on strike.

The strike order was not issued by the union officials until a final appeal to the general managers' association had proved futile.

The freight handlers demand half day off on Saturdays, double time for working Sundays and holidays, time and a half for working overtime and a minimum wage of 25 cents the hour.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

"Race! You'd race with that arm?"

"Yes. Are you coming with me?"

Shaken and tremulous, Dick passed a damp hand across his forehead.

"I think you're mad to stand talking here. Come to the office, for heaven's sake. And, I'd be ground up there, if you hadn't caught me," he looked toward the jaws sullenly shredding and reshredding a strip of cloth from his sleeve. "I'll do anything you want,"

"Will you?" Lestrange flashed quickly. He flung back his head with the resolute setting of expression the other knew so well, his eyes brilliant with a resolve that took no heed of physical discomfort. "Then give me your word that you'll stick to your work here. That is my fear; that the change in you is just a mood you'll tire of some day. I want you to stand up to your work and not drop out disqualified."

"I will," said Dick, subdued and earnest. "I couldn't help doing it—your arm—"

Lestrange impatiently dragged out his handkerchief and wound it around the cut.

"Go on."

"I can't help keeping on; I couldn't go back now. You've got me awake. No one else ever tried, and I was having a good time. It began with liking you and thinking of all you did, and feeling funny alongside of you." He paused, struggling with Anglo-Saxon shyness. "I'm awfully fond of you, old fellow."

The other's gray eyes warmed and cleared. Smiling, he held out his left hand.

"It's mutual," he assured. "It isn't playing the game to trap you while you are upset like this. But I don't believe you'll be sorry. Come, find some one to tie this up for me; I can't have it stiff tomorrow."

But in spite of his professed haste, Lestrange stopped at the head of the stairs and went back to recover some small object lying on the floor beneath a pool of chilling metal. When he rejoined Dick, it was to linger yet a moment to look back across the teeming room.

"It's worth having, all this," he commented, with the first touch of sadness the other ever had seen in him. "Don't throw it away, Ffrench."

There is usually a surgeon within reach of a factory. When Mr. Ffrench passed out to the cart where Emily waited, he passed Dick and the village physician entering. The elder gentleman put on his glasses to survey his nephew's white face.

"An accident?" he inquired.

The casual curiosity was sufficiently exasperating, and Dick's nerves were badly gone.

"Nothing worth mentioning," he snapped. "Just that I nearly fell into the machinery and Lestrange has done up his arm pulling me out. That's all."

And he hurried the doctor on without further parley or excuse.

Lestrange was in the room behind the office, smoking one of Bailey's cigars and listening to that gentleman's vigorous remarks concerning managers who couldn't keep out of their own machinery, the patient not having considered it worth while to explain Dick's share in the mischance. An omission which Dick himself promptly remedied in his anxious contrition.

Later, when the arm was being swathed in white linen, its owner spoke to his companion of the morning:

"I hope you didn't annoy Miss Ffrench with this trifling matter, as you came in."

"I didn't speak to her at all, only to my uncle."

"Very good."

Something in the too-indolent tone roused Dick's usually dormant observation. Startled, he scrutinized Lestrange.

"Is that why you bothered yourself with me?" he stammered. "Is that why—"

"Shut up!" warned Lestrange forcibly and inelegantly. "That isn't tight enough, Doc. You know I'm experienced at this sort of thing, and I'm going to use this arm."

But Dick was not to be silenced in his new enlightenment. When the surgeon momentarily turned away, he leaned nearer, his plump face grim.

"If I brace up, it won't be for Emily, but for you, Darling Lestrange," he whispered viciously. "She don't want me and I don't want her, that way. I've got over that. And, and—oh, confound it, I'm sorry, old man!"

"Shut up!" said Lestrange again.

But though Dick's very sympathy unconsciously showed the hopeless chasm between the racing driver and Miss Ffrench, the hurt did not cloud the cordial smile Lestrange sent to mitigate his command.

CHAPTER VI.

Emily first heard the full story of the accident that evening, when Dick sat opposite her on the veranda and gave the account in frank anxiety and dejection.

"We're going down tonight on the nine o'clock train," he added in conclusion. "Tomorrow morning he'll spend practicing on the track, and tomorrow evening at 6 the race starts. And Lestrange starts crippled because I am a clumsy idiot. He laughs at me, but—he'd do that anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Emily. "He would do that anyhow." Her eyes were wide and terrified, the little hands she clasped in her lap were quite cold. "I wish, I wish he had never come to this place."

"Oh, you do?" Dick said oddly. "Maybe he will, too, before he gets through with us. We're a nasty lot, we Ffrenches; a lot of blue-blooded snobs without any red blood in us. Are you going to say good-by to me? I won't be home until it's over."

She looked at him, across the odorous dusk slowly silvering as the moon rose.

"You are going to be with him?"

Dick smoothed his leggings before standing up, surveying his strict motor costume with a gloomy pride not to be concealed.

"Yes; I'm representing our company. Lestrange might want some backing if any disputes turned up. Uncle Ethan nearly had a fit when Bailey told him what I was going to do; he called me Richard for the first time in my life. I guess I'll be some good yet, if every one except Lestrange did think I was a chump."

"I am very sure you will," she answered gently. "Good-by, Dick; you look very nice."

When he reached the foot of the steps her voice recalled him, as she stood leaning over the rail.

"Dick, you could not make him give it up, not race this time?"

He stared up at her white figure.

"No, I could not. Don't you suppose I tried?"

"I suppose you did," she admitted, and went back to her seat.

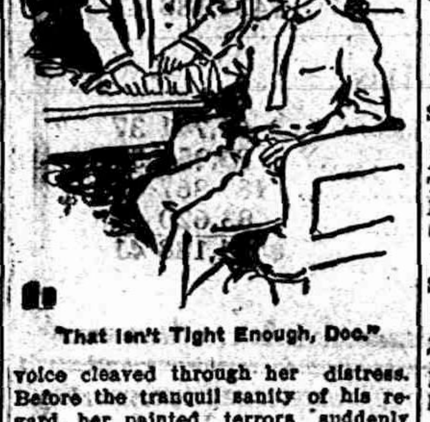
The June night was very quiet. Once a sleepy bird stirred in the honeysuckle vines and chirped through the dark. Far below the throb of a motor passed down the road, dying away again to leave silence. Suddenly Emily Ffrench hid her face on the arm of her chair and the tears overflowed.

There was no consciousness of time while that inarticulate passion of dread spent itself. But it was nearly half an hour later when she started up at the echo of a light step on the gravel path, dashing her handkerchief across her eyes.

It was incredible, but it was true: Lestrange himself was standing before her at the foot of the low stairs, the moonlight glinting across his uncovered bronze head and bright, clear face.

"I beg pardon for trespass, Miss Ffrench," he said, "but your cousin tells me he has been saying a great deal of nonsense to you about this race, and that you were so very good as to feel some concern regarding it. Really, I had to run up and set that right; I couldn't leave you to be annoyed by Mr. Ffrench's nerves. Will you forgive me?"

Like sun through a mist his blithe voice cleaved through her distress. Before the tranquil sanity of his regard, her painted terrors suddenly showed as the artificial canvas scenes of a stage, unreal, untrue.



"That Isn't Tight Enough, Doc."

"It was like you to come," she answered, with a shaking sigh that was half sob. "I was frightened, yes."

"There is no cause. A dozen other men take the same chance as Rupert and I; the driver who alternates with me, for instance. This is our life."

"Your arm—"

"Is well enough." He laughed a little. "You will see many a bandaged arm before the twenty-four hours are up; few of us finish without a scratch or strain or blister. This is a man's game, but it's not half so destructive as foot-ball. You wished me good luck for the Georgia race; will you repeat the honor before I go back to Ffrench?"

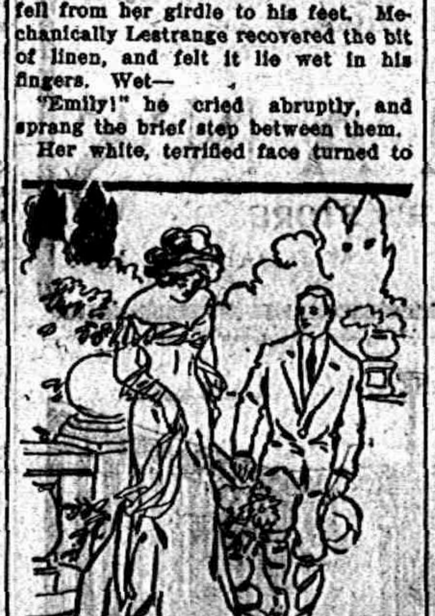
"I wish you," she said unsteadily, "every kind of success, now and always. You saved Dick today—of all else you have done for him and for me I have not words to speak. But it made it harder to bear the thought of your hurt and risk from the hurt, when I knew that I had sent Dick there, who caused it."

Lestrange hesitated, himself troubled. Her soft loveliness in the delicate light that left her eyes unreadable depths of shadow, her timidity and anxiety for his safety, were from their very unconsciousness most dangerous. And while he grasped at self-control, she came still nearer to the head of the steps and held out her small fair hand, mistaking his silence for leave-taking.

"Good night; and I thank you for coming. I am not used to so much consideration."

Her accents were unsure when she would have made them most certain, with her movement the handkerchief fell from her girdle to his feet. Mechanically Lestrange recovered the bit of linen, and felt it lie wet in his fingers. Wet—

"Emily!" he cried abruptly, and sprang the brief step between them. Her white, terrified face turned to him in the moonlight, but he saw her eyes. And seeing, he kissed her.



Her Accents Were Unsure When She Would Have Made Them Most Certain.

The moment left no time for speech. Some one was coming down the drawing-room toward the long windows. Dick's impatient whistle sounded shrilly from the park. Panting, quivering, Emily drew from the embrace and fled within.

She had no doubt of Lestrange, no question of his serious meaning—he had that force of sincerity which made his silence more convincing than the protestations of others. But alone in her room she laid her cheek against the hand his had touched.

"I wish I had died in the convent," she cried to her heart. "I wish I had died before I made him unhappy too."

BRONCHITIS

To Whom It May Concern

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.—"I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health, and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended, and from the second bottle I commenced to improve. I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles—not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try Vinol. If you don't think it helps you, we will return your money,

LEADING LIGHTS OCCUPY PULPITS

Minneapolis Methodists Listen to Famous Expounders.

REPORT BY EX-GOV. HANLY

Former Executive of Indiana Presents Document on Temperance and Prohibition—General Conference Opens Its Second Week.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 13. — The quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church opened its second week.

The pulpits of the various M. E. churches were occupied Sunday by leading lights of the denomination.

At the conference J. Frank Hanly, ex-governor of Indiana, presented the report of the general conference on temperance and prohibition, which was adopted. The report declared there were forty-six million people in the United States from whom the saloon has been excluded. The report calls on congress to pass the Kenyon-Sheppard-Webb bill.

W. H. Anderson of Baltimore, head of the church temperance society, said: "We must break the political power of the liquor traffic, and the moment we do that we will do more to purify corrupt political conditions than can be brought about by any other agency."

Dr. C. B. Wilcox of Denver, Colo., held up to the view of the conference a large document containing a memorial signed by 5,000 superannuated preachers and widows asking the conference to make no change in the legislation governing conference claimants. The conference recommended that $5,000,000 be raised during the next quadrennium for the old preachers' fund. The church spent $1,300,000 on its veterans in the past year.

Billy Sunday was to have an opportunity to advise on the amusement question at an evangelistic meeting under the direction of Bishop Berry this afternoon. The motion to give him ten minutes before the conference proper was refused.

SAYS MAN IS KIMMEL

Railway Conductor, Formerly of Niles, Mich., Is Positive.

Chicago, May 13.—Another former resident of Niles, Mich., recognized as the missing George A. Kimmel of that place the claimant now at the Robert Burns hospital. He was C. H. Johnson, a conductor for the Michigan Central, who worked out of Niles twenty years ago. Johnson is positive in his identification.

"It's Kimmel, all right," he said.

After leaving the room of the patient, who recently was operated on in an attempt to restore his memory, which was impaired by pressure on the brain, Johnson said there could be no doubt that Andrew J White, as the "man of mystery" was known when he left Auburn prison eight months ago, is the missing Kimmel. Johnson was skeptical when he arrived at the hospital. He went away convinced he had talked to Kimmel.

Discharges Boy; Is Slain.

Springfield, Ill., May 13. — Charles O'Brien, aged sixteen years, discharged by Warren Defrates, a foreman in the Sangamon Electric company's works, for refusal to do a piece of work went home, procured a revolver and returned and shot Defrates twice, the bullets taking effect in his stomach. Defrates will die. O'Brien is the son of John P. O'Brien, a contractor. He was arrested.

SEEKS HELP OF WOMEN VOTERS

President Taft Makes Direct Appeal in California.

PRIMARIES HELD TOMORROW

Balloting of Female Electors in Golden State Will Be Watched with Much Interest—Roosevelt Thought to Lead.

Washington, May 13.—A president of the United States has issued his first direct appeal for women's votes in a contest for renomination. Before leaving Washington on his campaign trip to Ohio President Taft made public an appeal that he has sent to the men and women Republicans of California for support in the primaries Tuesday. The president emphasized his claim to the women's vote by citing among the achievements of his administration the creation of the children's bureau and the appointment of Miss Julia C. Lathrop, "one of the able women of America," as it head.

The voting of the women in this contest will be watched with a good deal of interest. It is the first time they have taken part in a presidential contest in California and their participation introduces an uncertain element into the situation. About 26,000 women voters have been registered in San Francisco alone.

The presidential preference primaries in California on Tuesday will be the next important development in the Republican situation. The president's managers are hopeful of obtaining fourteen of the twenty-six delegates from that state, but political observers here are inclined to believe that Colonel Roosevelt will control the majority of the delegates.

BUFORD BRINGING 200

Americans Fleeing from West Coast of Mexico.

Refugees Alarmed by Rumors, but Have Not Suffered Personal Violence.

Washington, May 13.— William E. Alger, United States consul at Mazatlan, cabled the state department that the army transport Buford had left Mazatlan with 130 refugees on board. At San Blas, in the state of Tepic, seventy more will be taken on board the Buford. The exodus of Americans from the west coast district and from the states of San Luis Potosi and Vera Cruz is said to be due to the numerous alarming rumors prevalent, most of which are declared to be without foundation. None of the Americans leaving, it is reported to the state department, have been subjected to any violence whatever.

Renewed activity on the part of rebel bands in the states of Taumalipas and in northern Vera Cruz and San Luis Potosi was reported to the state department.

General conditions, according to official dispatches, show no improvement.

Calf Born Without Tail.

Rochester, Ind., May 13. — James Henderson, farmer, living near Rochester, reports the birth of a calf at his farm that has absolutely no tail. There seems to be an epidemic of calves without tails, and some with an extra supply of this caudal appendage in Fulton county. Stockmen are at a loss to account for it.

NEW PRINCETON HEAD INSTALLED

Taft Attends Inauguration of President Hibben.

OTHER NOTABLES ARE PRESENT

Chief Justice Pitney of the United States Supreme Court Administers the Oath of Office—Degrees Conferred.

Princeton, N. J. May 13.—Princeton awoke to find that beautiful spring weather had arrived for the inauguration of John Grier Hibbon as president of Princeton university. The ceremony of induction was held on the campus in front of "Old North." The unsettled weather of the present week had made those in charge of the arrangements apprehensive that the occasion would be spoiled by rain.

President Taft, who participated in in the inauguration, started the activities of the day, arriving here on a special car at 6 a. m. Later he was driven to "Prospect," the official residence of the president of Princeton, where he is the guest of President Hibben.

Others who came included Chief Justice White, Associate Justice Pitney of the supreme court of the United States, and the presidents of many universities. Chief Justice White is the guest of Mrs. Frances Cleveland. Trains from Philadelphia and New York brought hundreds of guests.

The ceremony began at 11 a. m. Proceeding it was a procession of all those who participated in the induction and the entire student body of the university. The oath of office was administered by Associate Justice Pitney. During the ceremony the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon President Taft and upon Chief Justice White.

A luncheon followed the inauguration. After that the annual baseball game between Cornell and Princeton, which President Taft attended was played.

WILL NOT WORRY WIFE NOW

Forger, Who Let Woman Work to Make Retribution, Is Sentenced.

Chicago, May 13.—William F. McMullen was sent to prison for one year and fined $2,000 by Judge A. J. Petit in the superior court when McMullen testified that his wife was working and would make restitution for a forgery he had committed.

"So you are one of these fellows who make their wives pay for their misdeeds, are you?" said Judge Petit with some heat. "Well, I'll put you where you won't worry your wife for some time to come," concluded the judge, as he pronounced sentence.

McMullen was charged with forging a $10 check.

CRASH ON THE RAIL

Passenger and Freight Collide in Indiana—Two Men Killed.

Evansville, Ind., May 13.—Passenger train No. 94 on the Evansville and Terre Haute railroad struck a south bound freight at a siding at Smith, Ind., five miles north of Vincennes, shortly after midnight.

Two men on the freight train were killed and two were injured. The engin of No. 94 was derailed, but none of the passengers or crew was hurt.

Kewanee, Ill., May 13.—While temporarily deranged Mrs. Caroline Miller, a widow, seventy-one years old, committed suicide by hanging herself in a corn crib on a farm northwest of here.

MAY NOT REJECT MINE AGREEMENT

Anthracite Workers Begin to Change Front.

MIGHT DISRUPT ORGANIZATION

Convention Which Meets in Wilkesbarre, Pa., Tuesday, May Decide to Stand by Committee and Officers.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 13. — Determined efforts were put forth at several meetings of the miners to secure backing for National President John P. White and his three district chiefs for the convention which opens here Tuesday.

The conservative element has buckled on its fighting armor and at the various meetings the danger of turning down the national and district officers was pointed out.

The movement won recruits to the cause which the national president and the district heads will espouse when it comes time for the miners to say whether they will or will not stand by the agreement which the sub-committee accepted in its deliberations with a sub-committee of the operators. Many of the miners' leaders now see that to turn down the proposition which their leaders accepted would be putting the organization in a bad light and perhaps bring about its disruption. Much talk hinged on the work of the Industrial Workers of America, which is a rival organization of the miners' union. The conservative leaders declared that to turn down the report of the sub-committee and reject the tentative offer would be to give the new organization a lease of life and foster a movement which is endeavoring to wipe out the present organization.

The work of the missionaries sent among the men set the miners in general thinking. The plain facts were put up to them and when the meetings broke up there were many frank admissions that the committee had perhaps done its best and that the best thing after all might be to accept the agreement for a term of four years.

This section of the anthracite field was particularly quiet. There was no sign of any demonstrations and peace hovered over the district from one end to the other.

SCRANTON SENTIMENT VEERS

Outbreaks Among Foreigners Assist in Change of Ideas.

Scranton, Pa., May 13. — Sentiment has completely veered about here on the question of the acceptance or rejection of the tentative agreement for settling the hard coal suspension. Most significant of many developments of the past few days is a statement from one of the prominent union officials, who has been fighting the acceptance of the agreement in its present form, that the delegates to the Wilkesbarre convention on Tuesday will vote for acceptance.

"The locals seem to be in favor now of taking what the district presidents tell them is the best they can possibly get," said the official, "rather than to have the dispute go before the anthracite strike commission. No more strike commission for them. Then again they are getting tired of a suspension and do not relish the prospect of going on strike with no funds available in either the national or district treasuries to pay strike benefits. The recent ominous outbreaks in the foreign mining settlements too have had the effect of changing the views of the rank and file of the miners."

There was no violence reported from any part of the upper end of the region. Lewis Brobobovich, the boy shot by Trooper George Dace in Dickinson City, is still alive and slightly improved.

PRINTERS REMAIN AT WORK

Chicago Typographical Union Votes to Abide by Contracts.

Chicago, May 13. — At one of the most largely attended meetings of a union ever held, Typographical Union No. 16 voted to abide by its contracts with the big daily papers, against which the pressmen, stereotypers, drivers and newsboys are on strike.

The majority for the resolution was 444, 1,769 votes being cast, of which 1,099 favored fulfilling contracts and 655 were against doing so. The meeting was held in the First Regiment armory.

International President James M. Lynch announced that he was well pleased with the result, as it showed that printers believed in keeping their contracts.

WOULD OUST WOMAN MAYOR

Suit Brought by Aldermen of Hunnewell, Kan., in High Court.

Topeka, Kan., May 13.—The Hunnewell ouster suit was argued in the supreme court. It is expected the court will decide the case early in June.

The troubles of the woman mayor of Hunnewell and her councilmen are well known. The council would not work. She tried to get the men to indorse her appointments.

Finally she appealed to the attorney general. The latter tried to get the councilmen to work with the mayor, but they refused. The ouster suit was the result.

MICHIGAN

James Therio, Iron River, finds Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a family medicine that helped all the family, so he always keeps it on hand. "Both my children and I were troubled with bad coughs and we used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It certainly cured us and I recommend it as a good cough and cold cure."

D. W. Hiller, 801 E. Court St., Flint had a severe attack of kidney trouble and says: "There was a constant feeling of distress with painful kidney action. Foley Kidney Pills cured me completely, dispelling all kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness disappeared and I slept soundly again. I heartily endorse Foley Kidney Pills. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Speak not of your enemies, but be sure to speak to your enemies when you meet them.

Escapes an Awful Fate

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery, . But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now,'; Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung trouble Every bottle guaranteed, 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at C, A. Wright & Son.

Flattery is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

Mrs. Ida Decker, 74 Carlyle St., Battle Creek, had all the painful symptoms of severe kidney trouble. Her kidneys were congested, eyesight blurred, slept poorly, was nervous, tired out, and all run down. After taking Foley's Kidney Pills she say: "The sick headaches came no more, I slept soundly, was free from dizziness, and my kidneys and bladder stopped bothering me. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and freed me of much misery." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

There are people who are so busy having a good time that trouble can't touch them.

The Demons of the Swamp

are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails: also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the maleria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm, Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Alex Destinon. 90 Lake St.. Muskegon, desires other people to benefit by the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I wish to state that I have used Foley Kidney Pills and received more benefit from them than anything I have ever used before. I had a bad case of kidney trouble and I wish to thank you for the help Foley Kidney Pills have given me." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

Helps A Judge in Bad Fix

Justice Eli Cherry. of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote "at last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was completely cured." Cures burns, boil, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles 25c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the west line of Evans street in this village which lies along and adjoining the east line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

Bounded north by Haight and Brown lots, East by Evans street, South by Lee lot, West by Alley. Also bounded North by Lee lot, East by Evans street, South by Hiawatha street, West by Alley.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand and gravel.

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely free from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least 6 inches, except for driveways and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

On the foundation shall be laid a concrete filling, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of 3 inches.

The concrete shall consist of not less than one part cement to six parts of clean sharp sand or gravel.

On the concrete filling shall be laid a finishing layer one inch thick, consisting of one part cement and two parts of very clean, sharp sand. The said finishing layer shall in all cases be finished with a granular surface with a wooden float.

To secure a true line for the edges of the walk 2x4 strips shall be solidly staked down parallel to grade and on the true line of the walk, these strips to be removed when the walk is finished for use.

The concrete filling shall be tamped thoroughly till the water comes to the surface, then the finishing layer shall be immediately spread on in thin coats and rammed into the concrete, each coat being troweled until the water appears on the surface, the top surface being troweled only sufficiently to leave it smooth. The foundation shall be thoroughly wet while being rammed.

The joints for the blocks shall be made in the concrete and then in the finishing layer directly above those in the concrete.

Only Portland cement shall be used in the construction of walks and shall be in every respect the equal of the best grades of German Portland cement. The concrete filling shall be made from the same cement as the finishing layer.

And the owners and occupants of said lots and premises are hereby required to do the necessary grading therefor and to construct said sidewalk according to the provisions of this resolution, under the supervision of the street commissioner, said walk to be completed within 30 days from personal service, upon the owner or occupant of said described land, of a copy of this resolution, and in case of default in the construction and completion of said walk, as herein directed, the street commissioner is hereby ordered to have said walk constructed, and payment therefor shall be required of the owner of said above described land, and the expense thereof assessed and levied upon said land in the same manner as other taxes.

Moved and supported that the above resolution be accepted and adopted.

Ayes: Elliott, Service, Look, Fisher, Gillespie, Daisher.

Resolution carried.

Commits Suicide in Sanatorium.

Shelbyville, Ind., May 13.—Shannon Rector of Stiersville, committed suicide by asphyxiation. He came to a local sanatorium to take treatment for the liquor habit, told the manager he was tired and would talk to him about arrangements the next day. He closed his door and shut all the windows and filled the keyhole with paper and then turned on the gas. He was sixty years old. His failure to appear led to an investigation and the body was found on the bed.

CALIFORNIA LETTER

W. P. STOCKING

Looking through my scrapbooks the other day I came across a letter from L. C. Blood of Lansing, from which I take the following extract. In speaking of one of my letters to the Herald he had this to say. "I wonder many times how he keeps that old think tank of his in such perfect working order for he calls to remembrance so many long forgotten facts about people, places and things that I had forgotten until reminded of them by him" Now I am going to use these words of my old schoolmate "Roy" not as a text but as an excuse for another letter to the Herald, First I want to say that if my letters have called to his mind pleasant recollections of long forgotten people and places of our boyhood days I am well paid for the time and trouble of writing them for my main object in writing them is to awaken pleasant memories of by gone years in the minds of my old schoolmates and young friends I have found out, and so have you who read this that "think tanks" are not, to speak figuratively, all constructed alike, Some are very porous and will not hold thoughts very long and some retain only the most important ones, Then some people fill their think tanks so full of politics, good and bad, business, speculation, greed, discontent and unhappiness that all other minor, so considered by many thoughts are either driven out or buried so deep that something must stir them into action. I am glad that my letters have set into action some of the latent thoughts in my old schoolmates, "Roy's" think tank. I am very thankful that my think tank has held so many memories of those days when "Roy" and I enjoyed our boyhood days in dear old beautiful Christian and moral Tecumseh, surrounded by influences in our homes, in church and Sunday school, society and school, our schoolmates and playmates were boys and girls of good character. True, there were a few boys with bad habits and rough ways but I do not remember more than three or four and I could name them but will not do so. There were but few rough men among the men of Tecumseh in those days the modern saloon had not come to curse the town with drunkenness and rowdyism. I rejoice that my "think tank" has held so many pleasant memories of my boyhood and young manhood days and I am grateful to the Herald for favoring me with so much space in which to record them, for it has certainly been a source of much pleasure to put so many of them on paper to be seen and read by even a few of my old schoolmates,

In my last letter I told of Aviator Rodgers finishing his cross continent flight here on Sunday December 10 which we witnessed. On April 2nd and 3rd he made some splendid flights over our city and the ocean while making a decent about 2:50 p. m. of April 3 his machine, suddenly crashed to earth, in shallow water killing him instantly by breaking his neck, Hundreds of people on the pier and strand witnessed it. He was killed within less than a quarter of a mile of the spot where he first landed, He was to have taken one lady and two gentlemen up with him that afternoon He was probably decending to take them up. A monument will be erected where he first landed.

THE ELECTRIC LINE COMING OUR WAY

We note the exchanges that come to our desk from Adrian, Milan and Petersburg, are very much excited over the electric line that is built, and being built from Toledo to Jackson. The road is already built from Toledo to Petersburg, a distance of seventeen miles, the ties and rails all being laid and fences built thus far which is quite encouraging.

This part of the road will be put into operation soon, and will be equipped in the beginning with the Fairbank-Morse motor cars. It is planned to complete this road at once to Ann Arbor, passing through Pittsfield Junction where it connects with the L. S. & M. S. railroad and the electric line from Chelsea to Ypsilanti.

The engineer is now working on a route from Petersburg, Britton through Ridgeway to Tecumseh and Tipton, thence to Sand, Evans, Wampler and Vineyard lakes through Brooklyn there by Clarks lake to Jackson. This sounds good, and the readers must take it for what it is worth. we have had so many reports along this line that we are a little doubtful, but it makes a good headed article for the newspaper. and so we pass it along.

BATTLE WITH SHERIFF

Row Over Hired Auto Results in Man Being Shot.

Monroe Mich., May 6. — Two men are in the county jail and one of them is seriously wounded in the leg as a result of a battle between the sheriff's force and five men they attempted to arrest because they refused to pay for an automobile which they hired in Detroit. The other three men escaped. The two in jail refuse to divulge their names but are doubtless from Detroit.

According to the story told the sheriff by the chauffeur, the men hired the automobile at a garage in Detroit where he was employed. When they got as far as Monroe he attempted to collect his money and they refused to pay and commenced abusing him. He went to the sheriff's office and made complaint.

OROZCO DRIVEN BACK

Rebels Forced Nearly Twenty Miles North to Conejos, Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., May 13.—General Pascual Orozco's advance guard of rebels have been driven back toward Escalon, the central base of the insurrectos in northern Mexico.

Instead of being on the defensive, the government troops have, within the last twenty-four hours, pushed the attack vigorously, forcing the rebels northward nearly twenty miles to Conejos, about 200 miles south of Chihuahua

FIRE AT PRESBYTERIAN PARSONAGE

We clip the following from the Kewanee Illinois Star Courier, of May 8, everyone being interested in Rev. W. F. Jones and family:—

An entire neighborhood was threatened at 11:30 o'clock this morning, when the parsonage occupied by Rev. W. F. Jones and family caught fire. The high wind from the west hurled blazing embers through the air and to the residences on the east side of the street and residents of the vicinity were greatly worried until the firemen had the sparks under control.

The fire started from sparks falling from the chimney on the west side of the roof. The gale fanned them into flames and soon the fire made its way through the roof and into the attic where it raged as in a furnace. The fire made headway with remarkable rapidity. For a long time before the flames were discovered residents of the neighborhood noticed the odor of smoke and searched for the cause. Dr. Mankin finally noticed the blaze as he was passing by and the alarm was turned in.

A lead was taken it to the attic and another was directed from the south side on the outside. Although the residence seemed to be doomed the firemen soon had the blaze under control. The furniture and contents of the upper rooms of the house were badly damaged by smoke and warer and the contents of the entire residence suffered to some extent.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

SAGINAW—Expressing the belief that better results could be obtained by thorough investigation before the establishment of new churches, the reorganized Michigan federation of churches, which met in Saginaw, decided to be more cautious hereafter and work for greater benefits for all. The denominations in this conference are Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal. President W. T. Jaquess of Detroit, moderator of the Presbyterian synod of Michigan, presided. Many other prominent clergy from Detroit and throughout the state were present, representing over 2,000 churches and 100,000 worshipers.

OWOSSO—In an effort to expedite litigation against the Mt. Clemens Sugar company seven beet raisers in this county have assigned their interests to two others, who also claim to have grievances against the company. Daniel Shuster and Matthew Bittell have brought suits in the Shiawassee circuit court in an effort to collect several thousand dollars the nine men claim is due them for beets delivered last fall to the company. Fred Snow, of Oakley, has brought suit for $2,000 against the same company in the Saginaw circuit court on similar grounds.

BAY CITY—Frederick Ist, who is a farmer living near Alger, in Arenac county, found in a swamp the complete skeleton of a man. Lying with two finger bones on the trigger, was an old-fashioned revolver. The bones of the skeleton were absolutely bare of flesh and were bleached to a point indicating that the body had lain not less than fifteen years, according to a statement of physicians who examined them. All of the man's clothing was gone, but a few metal buttons, $4.10 in change and a check on the Tremont House, no city named, were found.

Emerson Sulky Plows.

This is the way everyone who has used one is talking about them:

"The ground we are using this EMERSON PLOW in, has bothered all other plows we have ever tried, hand or sulky. I was very skeptical about trying this plow but will have to admit that it does first class work in every respect. It handles fine, and is particularly good in finishing up the land or striking out. I would also say that this plow is very light in draft."

Miss Vanita Pilsbury visited the High School last Tuesday afternoon.

It has been thought that some of the pupils have been in the habit of having poor eye sight when they meet their teachers on the street, but it is quite evident that they will be perfectly willing to recognize them, especially at this time of the year, as a passing acquaintance.

The Tecumseh High School ball team played Clinton at Clinton last Wednesday. Although the score was 10 to 4 in Clinton's favor, the Tecumseh boys did some good playing. Up to the fifth inning the score was 3 to 1 in Tecumseh's favor. Clinton won the game on Tecumseh's errors, showing plainly that the home team is in need of more practice. Clinton made three clean hits during the entire game, Tecumseh made six. Some sensational playing was shown by shortstop McClure and second baseman Rogers. Both teams were well supported by the rooters.

Wit and Wisdom

BANQUET AT THE HOME OF DR. AND MRS. L. G. NORTH

Friday May 10

There was a large attendance of the Wit and Wisdom Club and their friends at the pleasant home of Dr. and Mrs North on Friday evening.

A most delightful three course banquet was served, the table was decorated in a lavish manner with blue violets, boquets of them through the center of the table, and each place card bore a small bouquet, tied with white baby ribbon, Miss Wimple's girls from the 8th grade gathering these for their teacher.

The program was one of the finest of the year, and was full of the choicest humor. A piano solo by D. P. McAlpine was most heartily encored and he responded with another fine selection. Mrs, Fred Rosacrans in a most poetical manner gave a history of the club from its first meeting until the preeent, "The Club of Yesterday," her reminiscences were most intresting and she was loudly applauded. Henry Conklin gave a fine paper entitled "We are the People" and they do say, he favored Woman's Suffrage in some of his remarks. Mrs. Weld gave an exquisite vocal solo, and kindly responded to an encore. Mrs. Brown's subject "Spectacles" was dealt with in a far seeing manner and her listeners saw with a clearer vision aided by the strong lens she used. "Woman—She Speaks for Herself" was the theme of a talk by Albert Howard, who went back to Mother Eve, and led up to women of the present, in a very forceful manner Surely he could not have chosen a theme more rich in variety and interest. Elmer Slayton next gave a beautiful vocal solo, and also responded to an encore in his most charming manner. Dr. Hartzog, in a most patriotic speech on "Our Flag" won the appreciation of every loyal citizen present and the whole club joined in singing one stanza of "The Star Spangled Banner." Mrs. McAlpine's vocal solo was received with much pleasure and she responded to an encore which was also much enjoyed.

After a short time spent in social chat the company dispersed well pleased with their evenings entertainment and looking forward to a reunion and this season.

QUIN-URBAN ATHLETIC MEET SATURDAY, MAY 18

There will be a Quin-Urban Athletic Meet at the race track next Saturday, May 18. This Meet is given under the auspices of the Lenawee County Y. M. C. A The following towns are entered; Tecumseh, Addison, Blissfield, Morenci and Hudson. A banner given by the local Y. W, C. A. girls, will be presented to the team making the highest number of points, besides this a badge will be presented to each boy who is able to make a certain average in the event he enters. It is expected there will be between 30 and 40 boys participating in these events. Tickets are sold for 15c, to help defray the necessary expense of the Meet.

MOTHER'S DAY

A very good audience was present at the M. E. church Sunday evening, honoring Mother's Day. Carnations were worn by most of those present. Rev. B. R. Weld gave a most interesting and feeling address that touched the hearts of all present. The music was very fine and added to the interest of the evening.

Mother's Day has become an honored day with every one. The use of the white carnation as a symbol of the mother who has left us, and of the colored ones for the mother who is still with us seems very sweet and appropriate.

Everybody's Doin' It Now.
WHAT?
Buying Fords, of course. Haven't you heard the Song.

Everybody's doin' it, doin' it, doin' it,
Everybody's doin' it, doin' it, doin' it,
See that couple standing over there,
Watch them throw their shoulders in the air,
Start their engine, honey I declare,
It's a Ford, it's a Ford, it's a Ford, There!
Everybody's doin' it, doin' it, doin' it,
Everybody's doin' it, doin' it, doin' it,
Ain't that motor picking up smart?
Ain't no danger of bustin, a-part,
Come, come, come, come let us start.
Everybody's doin' it now.

Sing it over and get the Ford Fever.

Children very often have trouble with their kidneys and bladder either as a result of weakness or of some children's disease. Mrs. John Thomas Escanaba, says: "My little boy had a severe pain across his back and was so nervous he could not sleep at night but Foley Kidney Pills cured him in a short time." All Druggists of Tecumseh.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diptheria bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for the children. All Druggists of Tecumseh.

SEVEN MODERN WONDERS

Faculty and Graduates of Cornell University Make Selection.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 13.—The seven wonders of the world, as selected by the faculty, graduates and seniors of the chemists' seminary, were announced by Professor L. M. Dennis. A few weeks ago one of the prominent scientific magazines sent a list to Cornell containing fifty-seven wonders of modern times and requested the selection of seven of them as representing the greatest product of modern human ingenuity.

The seven which were selected in the order of their importance follow: Wireless telegraphy, synthetic chemistry, radium, antitoxim, aeroplanes, Panama canal and telephone.

New Lane for Steamships.

Washington, May 13.—The hydrographic office has announced the changing of the transatlantic steamer lanes sixty miles to the southward of their present position as a result of reports of many icebergs in the present lanes. The steamship companies have agreed to adopt the new route.

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Tecumseh People Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Tecumseh citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Tecumseh by Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. A Hodges, retired carpenter, W Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills procuring my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very effective in relieving aches and pains in my back. Other members of my family have taken this preparation and it has done good work in each instance."

FOUR MORE BODIES FOUND

Steamship Montmagnie Reports Recovery of Titanic Victims.

Halifax, N. S., May 13.—The agent of the marine department received four messages from Captain Johnson on the government steamship Montmagnie, announcing that the bodies of four Titanic victims had been found. One of the recovered is that of Harold Reynolds, a steerage passenger.

It appears that the Montmagnie is working under great difficulties of fog, but that she is keeping at the search. All the bodies landed at Halifax have now been buried with the exception of one, which will be held for a day more pending instructions from friends.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

FLOOD OUTLOOK IS BAD

Heavy Rains and High Winds Cause Desolation.

Cardire, La., Expected to Be Swept Away at Almost Any Hour—People Warned of Peril.

New Orleans, La., May 13.—Rains of cloudburst proportions falling along the Mississippi river country, and winds of high velocity caused a series of reports of broken levees. Most of these proved erroneous, but at several endangered points it was admitted that the fight was practically hopeless.

At Baton Rouge the high winds washed a considerable amount of water over the top of the dike there. but men battled heroically with the elements and word was sent to New Orleans that the dam around the capital still holds. Engineer Waddill of the United States army reported that Cardere, ten miles south of Baton Rouge, probably could not last through the night. People of that section were warned to flee and to lose no time in going.

Another very gloomy feature of the day's developments was the break at Vidalia. That place is just opposite Natchez, Miss, and considered comparatively safe. It has a population of nearly 2,000.

CHINESE ROASTED ALIVE

Tibetans Inflict Horrible Tortures In Battle at L'Hassa.

Victoria, B. C., May 13.—News was brought by the Sanuki Maru of rioting against Chinese at L'Hassa, the capital of Tibet, during which many Chinese were roasted alive.

The affair followed a statement by a Tibetan lama that Chinese were destined for divine punishment. A fight ensued and the lama fled to the Sela monastery, which was fired. The Chinese quarters were then attacked by angry Tibetans.

CHAPTER VII.

Morning found a pale and languid Emily across the breakfast table from Mr. Ffrench. Yet, by a contradiction of the heart, her pride in loving and being loved so overbore the knowledge that only sorrow could result to herself and Lestrange, that her eyes shone wide and lustrous and her lips curved softly.

Mr. Ffrench was almost in high spirits.

"The boy was merely developing," he stated, over his grape-fruit. "I have been unjust to Richard. For two months Bailey has been talking of his interest in the business and attendance at the factory, but I was incredulous. Although I fancied I observed a change—have you observed a change in him, Emily?"

"Yes," Emily confirmed, "a very great change. He has grown up, at last."

"Ah? I cannot express to you how it gratifies me to have a Ffrench representing me in public; have you seen the morning journals?"

"I have just come down-stairs."

He picked up the newspaper beside him and passed across the folded page.

"All in readiness for Beach Contest," the head-lines ran. "Last big driver to arrive, Lestrange is in Mercury camp with R. Ffrench, representative of Company."

And there was a blurred picture of a speeding car with driver and mechanician masked to goblinesque nonidentity, with the legend underneath: "'Darling' Lestrange, in his Mercury on the Georgia course."

"Next year I shall make him part owner. It was always my poor brother's desire to have the future name still Ffrench and Ffrench. He was not thinking of Richard then; he had hope of—"

"Of?" she echoed vaguely.

"Of one who is unworthy thought. Richard has redeemed our family from extinction; that is at rest." He paused for an instant. "My dear child, when you are married and established, I shall be content."

Her breathing quickened, her courage rose to the call of the moment.

"If Dick is here, if he is instead of a substitute," she said, carefully quiet in manner, "would it matter, since I am only a girl, whom I married, Uncle Ethan?"

The recollection of that evening when Emily had given her promise of aid, stirred under Mr. Ffrench's self-absorbition. He looked across the table at her colorless, eager face with perhaps his first thought of what that promise might have cost her.

"No," he replied kindly. "It is part of my satisfaction that you are set free to follow your own choice, without thought of utility or fortune. Of course, I need not say provided the man is of your own class and associations. We will fear no more low marriages."

She had known it before, but it was hard to hear the sentence embodied in words. Emily folded her hands over the paper in her lap and the pleasant breakfast room darkened before her. Mr. Ffrench continued speaking of Dick, unheard.

When the long meal was ended and her uncle withdrew to meet Bailey in the library, Emily escaped outdoors. There was a quaint summer house part way down the park, an ancient white pavilion standing beside the brook that gurgled by on its way to the Hudson, where the young girl often passed her hours. She went there now, carrying her little work-basket and the newspaper containing the picture of Lestrange.

"I will save it," was her thought. "Perhaps I may find better ones—this does not show his face—but I will have this now. It may be a long time before I see him."

But she sat with the embroidery scissors in her hand, nevertheless, without cutting the reprint. Lestrange would return to the factory, she never doubted, and all would continue as before, except that she must not see him. He would understand that it was not possible for anything else to happen, at least for many years. Perhaps, after Dick was married—

The green and gold beauty of the morning hurt her with the memory of that other sunny morning, when he had so easily taken from her the task she hated and strove to bear. And he had succeeded, how he had succeeded! Who else in the world could have so transformed Dick? Leaning on the table, her round chin in her palm as she gazed down at the paper in her lap, her fancy slipped back to that night on the Long Island road, when she had first seen his serene genius for setting all things right. How like him that elimination of Dick, instead of a romantic and impracticable attempt to escort her himself.

A bush crackled stiffly at some one's passage; a shadow fell across her.

"Caught!" laughed Lestrange's glad, exultant voice. "Since you look at the portrait, how shall the original fear to present himself? See, I can match." He held out a card burned at the corners and streaked with dull red, "The first time I saw your writing, and found my own name there."

Amazed, Emily sat up, and met in his glowing face all incarnate joy of life and youth.

"Oh!" she gasped piteously.

"You are surprised that I am here? My dear, my dear, after last night did you think I could be anywhere else?"

"The race—"

"I know that track too well to need much practice, and I had the machine out at dawn. My partner is busy practicing this morning, and I'll be back in a couple of hours. I was afraid," the gray eyes were so gentle in their brilliancy, "I was afraid you might worry, Emily."

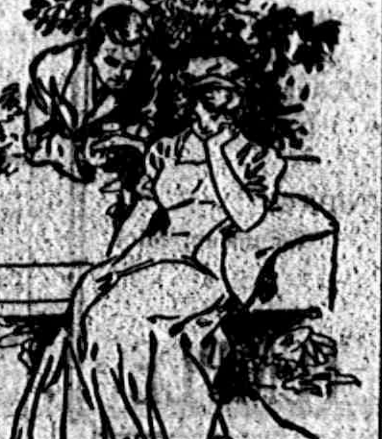
Serenely he assumed possession of her, and the assumption was very sweet. He had not touched her, yet Emily had the sensation of brutally turning him away when she spoke:

"How could I do anything else," she asked with desolation, "since we must never meet each other any more? Only, you will not go far away—you will stay where I can sometimes see you as we pass? I—I think I could not bear it to have you go away."

"Emily!"

The scissors clinked sharply to the floor as she held out her white hands in deprecation of his cry; the tears rushed to her eyes.

"You know, you know! I am not free; I am Emily Ffrench. I cannot fail my uncle and grieve him as his son did. Oh, I will never marry any one else, and we will hear of each other; I can read in the papers and Dick will tell me of you. It will be something to be so close, down there and up here."



"Dick Will Tell Me of You."

"Emily!"

"You are not angry? You will not be angry? You know I can do nothing else; please say you know."

He came nearer and took both cold little hands in his clasp, bending to her the shining gravity of his regard.

"Do you think me such a selfish animal, my dear, that I would have kissed you when I could not claim you?" he asked. "Did you think I could forget you were Emily Ffrench, even by moonlight?"

Her fair head fell back, her dark eyes questioned his.

"You—mean—"

"I mean that even your uncle cannot deny my inherited quality of gentleman. I am no millionaire incognito. I have driven racing cars and managed this factory to earn my living, having no other dependence than upon myself, but my blood is as old as yours, little girl, if that means anything."

"Not to me," she cried, looking up into his eyes. "Not to me, but to him. I cared for you—"

He drew her toward him, unresisting, their gaze still on each other. As from the first, there was no shyness between them, but the strange, exquisite understanding now made perfect.

"I was right to come to you," he declared, after a time. "Right to fear that you were troubled, conscientious lady. But I must go back, or there will be a fine disturbance at the Beach. And I have shattered my other plans to insignificant fragments, or you have. If I did not forget by moonlight that you were Emily Ffrench, I certainly forgot everything else."

She looked up at him, her softly-tinted face bright as his own, her yellow hair rumpled into flossy tendrils under the black ribbon binding it.

"Everything else?" she echoed. "Is there anything else but this?"

"Nothing that counts, to me. You for my own, and this good world to live in—I stand bareheaded before it all. But yet, I told you once that I had a purpose to accomplish; a purpose now very near completion. In a few months I meant to leave Ffrenchwood."

Emily gave a faint cry.

"Yes, for my work would have been done. Then I fell in love and upset everything. When I tell Mr. Ffrench that I want you, I will have to leave at once."

"Why? You said—"

"How brave are you, Emily?" he asked. "I said your uncle could not question my name or birth, but I did not say he would want to give you to me. Nor will he; unless I am mistaken. Are you going to be brave enough to come to me, knowing he has no right to complain, since you and I together have given him Dick?"

"He does not know you; how can you tell he does not like you?" she urged.

"Do you think he likes 'Darling' Lestrange of the race course?"

The sudden keen demand disconcerted her.

"I hear a little down there," he added. "I have not been fortunate with your kinsman. No, it is for you to say whether Ethan Ffrench's unjust caprice is a bar between us. To me it is none."

"I thought there was to be no more trouble," she faltered, distressed.

Lestrange looked down at her steadily, his gray eyes darkening to an expression she had never seen.

"Have I no right?" was his question. "Is there no canceling of a claim, is there no subsequent freedom? Is it all no use, Emily?"

Vaguely awed and frightened, her fingers tightened on his arm in a panic of surrender.

"I will come to you, I will come! You know best what is right—I trust you to tell me. Forgive me, dear, I wanted to—"

He silenced her, all the light flashing back to his face.

"A promise; hush! Oh, I shall win tonight with that singing in my ears. I have more to say to you, but not now. I must see Bailey, somehow, before I go."

"He is at the house; let me send him here to you."

"If you come back with him."

They laughed together.

"I will— Do you know," her color deepened rosily, "they call you 'Darling;' I have never heard your own name."

"My name is David," Lestrange said quietly, and kissed her for farewell.

The earth danced under Emily's feet as she ran across the lawns, the sun glowed warm, the brook tinkled over the cascades in a very madness of mirth. At the head of the veranda steps she turned to look once more at the roof of the white pavilion among the locust trees.

"Uncle will like you when he knows you," she laughed in her heart. "Any one must like you."

The servant she met in the hall said that Mr. Bailey had gone out, and Mr. Ffrench, also, but separately, the former having taken the shore road.

BRONCHITIS

To Whom It May Concern

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910—"I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health, and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended, and from the second bottle I commenced to improve. I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Try Vinol. If you don't think it helps you, we will return your money.
